B Get you far from them therfore, thou Thahnai captayne beyonde the water, and Starbuzani, and your counsaylers and Apher Sechei, which are beyonde the water, get ye away from them. Let the worke of the house of this God aloone, that the captayne of the Jewes and theyr elders maye buylde ẏ house of God in his place. I haue cōmaunded what shall be done to the elders of Juda for the buyldynge of the house of God, that there shall be dyligent hede taken of the kynges goodes, euen of the rentes beyonde the water, and gyuē vnto the men, that they be not hyndred. And yf they haue nede of calues, rammes, & lambes for the burntoffrynge of the God of heauen, wheate, salte, wyne, and oyle, after the custome of the preastes at Jerusalem, let the same be gyuen them dayly without anye delay: that they maye offre swete sauours vnto the God of heauen, and pray for the kynges lyfe and for his chyldren. And suche a commaundement haue I gyuen: that what man soeuer he be that altereth this worde, there shall a beame be taken from his house, and set vp, and he shall be hanged thereon, and his house shall be made a donge hyll, for the same thynge.

And the God that set his name there, destroy all kynges and people that put to theyr hand to altre, & to breake downe ẏ house of God which is at Jerusalem. I Darius haue commaunded, that this be done with spede.

D And the chyldrẽ of the captiuitie held Passeouer vpon the fourtenth daye of ỹ fyrste moneth for the preastes and Leuytes were puryfyed, so that they were all cleane togyther, and kylled Passeouer for all the chyldren of the captiuitie, & for theyr brethren the prestes & for them selues And the chyldren of Israell whych were come agayne out of captiuite, and all such as had separated themselues vnto them, frõ the fylthynesse of the heythen of the lãde: to seke the Lorde God of Israel, dyd eate, and helde the feast of vnleuened breade seuen dayes wyth ioye: for the Lorde had made them glad, & turned the hart of ỹ king of Assur vnto them, to strengthẽ theyr hãdes in the worke of ỹ house of god, euẽ ỹ god of Israel.

ℂ The. vii. Chapter.

ℂ By the commaundement of Artharerses, Esdras taketh hys compaynyons the chyldren of Israell and returneth to Jerusalem.

A tiii.ei.bij a After these actes, there was in the raygne of Artaxerses kyng of Parsia, one Esdras the sõne of Sariah the sonne of Asaria, the son of Helkia, the sonne of Sallum, the sõne of zadoc, the sonne of Ahitob, the sonne of Amaria, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne of Meraioth, the sonne of zeraia, the sonne of Ussi, the sõne of Bucki, the sonne of Abisua, the sonne of Phinehes, the sonne of Eleasar, the sonne of Aarõ the chefe preest. Thys Esdras also went vp frõ Babylon, & was a perfyte scribe in ỹ lawe of Moses, * Exod.xx.a wyche the Lorde God of Israel dyd gyue. And the king gaue hym all that he requyred bycause the hande of the Lorde his God was vpon hym. And there wente vp certayne of the chyldren of Israell: of the preastes, Leuites, syngers porters, & of the Nethinims vnto Jerusalem, in the seuenth yeare of kynge Artaxerses. And he came to Jerusalem in the fyfth moneth, euen in the seuenth yeare of the kynge. For vpõ ỹ fyrst daye of the fyrste moneth, began he to go vp frõ Babylon, & on the fyrst day of the fyrst moneth came he to Jerusalem, bycause the good hãde of God was vpon hym. For Esdras prepared hys herte to seke the lawe of the Lord, & to do it, and co teache the precept and iudgement in Israell.

And thys is the coppe of ỹ letter, that kynge 25
Artharerses gaue vnto Esdras the preaste and scribe, whiche was a wrytter of the wordes and cõmaundements of the Lorde, & of hys statutes ouer Israell. Artharerses a kynge of kynges. Vnto Esdras the preast & scribe of the lawe of the God of heuen, peace & salutation. I haue cõmaunded, that all they of the people of Israell, & of the preastes, & Leuytes in my realme (whyche are mynded of their owne good wyl to go vp to Jerusalem) go wyth the: and therfore art ỹ sent of the kynge & of hys seuen coũsaylers, to visyt Juda & Jerusalem, accordynge to ỹ lawe of thy God, whyche is in thy hãde. And that thou shuldest take wyth the syluer & golde, whych ỹ kyng & hys coũsaylers offre of theyr owne good wyll, vnto the God of Israell (whose habitacion is at Jerusalem) & all the syluer & golde ỹ thou canst fynde in all the countrey of Babylon, wyth it that the people offre of theyr owne good wyll and the preestes gyue for the house of theyr God whyche is at Jerusalem.

Take thou the same, & bye diligẽtly wyth the ℂ same money, oxen, rãmes, and lãbes, with their meatofferynges & drynkeofferynges: and thou shalt offer them vpon the aulter of the house of your God, which is at Jerusalẽ. And loke what it lyketh the, & thy brethren to do wyth the remnaunt of the money, that do after ỹ wyll of your God. And the vessels that are gyuen the for the ministracion in the house of thy God, those deliuer thou before God at Jerusalem.

And what soeuer thing more shalbe nedeful for ỹ house of thy God, whiche is necessary for ỹ to spende, thou shalte receyue the charges out of the kynges treasure house, I kynge Artaxerses haue cõmaũded al the treasurers beyonde ỹ water, that loke what soeuer Esdras the preest and scribe, in the lawe of the God of heauen, requyreth of you that ye fulfyll the same spedely, vntyll an hundred talentes of syluer, vntyll an hũdred quarters of wheat, and tyl an hũdred Batthes of wyne, and tyll an hundred * Batthes of iii.re.bii.d oyle: and salte wythout measure. What soeuer also belongeth to ỹ lawe of ỹ God of heauen, let the same bedone wythout any delay for ỹ house of the God of heauen, ỹ he be not wrath agaynst the realme, & agaynst the kynge: & hys children.

And we certifye you: that ye haue no authoritie to requyre taxynge and custome, & yearlye D rentes vpon anye of the preestes, Leuytes, syngers, porters, Nethinims, and ministers in the house of hys God. And thou Esdras (after the wysedome of thy God, that is in thy hande) set iudges and arbitrers by my authoritie, to iudge all the people that is beyonde the water, euen al suche as knowe the lawe of thy God: and them that knowe it not: those se that ye teache: And whosoeuer wyll not fulfyll the law of thy God, and the kynges lawe, lette hym haue hys iudgemente wythout delaye, whether it be vnto death or to be rooted out, or to be condempned in goodes: or to be put in preson.

iii.es. viii.c * Blessed be the Lorde God of our fathers, whiche so hath inspired the kynges herte, to garnysshe the house of the Lorde, that is at Jerusalē: and hath enclined his mercy vnto me, in the presence of the kynge & his counsaylers: and before all the kynges ye estates. And I was cōforted (euen as the hande of the Lorde my God was vpon me) and so gathered I the heades of Israel togyther, that they myght go vp with me.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

¶ The nombre of them that returned to Jerusalem wyth Eldras.

A iii.es. viii.c These are the principall fathers of them, & this is theyr register that wente vp with me from Babilon, what tyme as kynge Artharerses raygned. Of the chyldren of Phinehes, Gersom: of the chyldren of Ithamar, Daniel: of the childzen of Dauid, Hatus: of the chyldren of zachania: among the chyldren of Pharos, zachary: and wt hym were nombred an hundred and fyfty men. Of the chyldren of the captayne of Moab, Elionai, the sonne of zerahia, and with hym two hundred men. Of the chyldren of zechania the sonne of Jahaziel, & with hym thre hundred men. Of the chyldren of Adin, Abed the sonne of Jonathan, & with hym fyfty men. Of the chyldren of Elam, Isai the sonne of Athalia, and with hym seuenty men. Of the chyldren of Saphatia, zebadia the sonne of Michael, and with hym foure score men.

B Of the chyldren of Joab, Obadia the sonne of Jehiel, and with hym two hundred and eyghtene men. Of the chyldren of Selomith the sonne of Josephia, and wyth hym an hundred and thre score men.

Of the chyldren of Bebai, zachary the sonne of Bebai, and with hym eyght and twenty men. Of the chyldren of Asgad, Johanan the sonne of Hakatan, and with hym an hundred and ten men. Of the chyldren of Adonicam, that were the last, whose names are these: Eliphelet, Jehiel & Samaiah, and with them thre score men. Of the chyldren of Biguai, Uthai, & zabud, and with them seuenty men. And I gathered them togyther by the water that runneth towarde Ahaua, and there abode we thre dayes. And I loked among the people & the preastes, and founde there none of the chyldren of Leui. Then sent I to Eliezer, to Ariel, Semeia, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathan, zachary, and to Mesullam the rulers, and to Joiarib and Elnathan, whiche were men of vnderstandynge, and to those gaue I commaundement: vnto Iddo the chefest at Casphia, that they shulde fetche vs mynysters for the house of our God, and I tolde them what they shulde saye vnto Iddo: and to his brethren the Nethinims at Casphia.

C And (thorowe the good hande of our God vpon vs) they brought vs a wyse man from among the chyldren of Moholi the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel: and Sarabia with his sonne and his brethren, euen eyghtene. And Hasabia, and with hym Isai of the chyldren of Merari, with his brethren, and theyr sonnes twentye. And of the Nethinims, whome Dauid and the prynces gaue to minister vnto the Leuytes, two hundred and twentye of Nethinims, whiche all were named by name.

And euen there at the water, beside Ahaua, D I proclamed a fast, that we myght humble our selues before our God, and seke of hym a right waye for vs, and for our chyldren, and for al our substaunce. For I was ashamed to requyre of the kynge, souldyours and horsemen, to helpe vs agaynst the enemy in the waye: but we sayd vnto the kynge: The hande of our God is vpon all them that seke hym in goodnes, & (his dominion) his violence and wrath is agaynst all them that forsake hym. So we fasted, and besought our God for this: and he herde vs.

And I toke out twelue of the chefe preastes: Sarabia and Hasabia, and ten of their brethren with them, & waied them the syluer & golde, and vessels that were appoynted for the house of our God, whiche the kynge and his counsaylers and his lordes, & all Israel that were there at hande had gyuen togyther. And I waied vnto theyr E hande syxe hundred and fyfty talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessell an hundred talentes, and in golde an hundred talentes: twentye basens of golde, of a thousande peces, and two costly ornamentes, of good brasse, as cleare as golde: and I sayd vnto them: Ye are consecrate vnto ỹ Lorde, lyke as the vessels are holy also, and the golde & syluer are gyuen of a good wyll vnto the Lorde God of your fathers. Watche ye, and kepe it: for ye shall waye it downe before the chefe preastes and Leuites, & auncyent fathers of Israel at Jerusalem in the treasuryes of ỹ house of the Lord. Then toke the preastes and Leuytes the waied syluer and golde, and vessell to brynge it to Jerusalem, vnto the house of our God. And we F brake vp, from the water of Ahaua on the twelueth daye of the fyrst moneth, to go vnto Jerusalem: and the hande of our God was vpon vs, and delyuered vs from the hande of the enemyes and of suche as layde wayte for vs by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, and abode ther thre dayes. But on the fourth daye was the syluer & golde and vessell weyed in the house of our God by the hand of Meremoth the sonne of Uria the preast, & with hym was Eleazar ỹ sonne of Phinehes, & with them was Josabad ỹ son of Jesua, & Noadia the sonne of Benoi the Leuites. Accordyng to the nombre & weyght of euery one, was the weyght all wrytten vp at the same tyme.

And the chyldren of the captiuite, which were G come out of pryson, offred burntoffrynges vnto the God of Israel, twelue bullockes, for all Israel, fyxe and nyntye rammes, seuen and seuentye lambes, twelue hegotes for a synneoffryng, all to the burntoffrynge of the Lorde. And they deliuered the kynges cōmission vnto the kynges officers, and to the captaynes that were on this syde the water. And they promoted the people and the house of God.

B And the kynge sayd vnto me (the quene hys wyfe settynge by hym) how lõge shal thy tournay cõtinue, and when wylt thou come agayne? And it pleased the kyng to sende me, & I set him a tyme, and sayde vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, let hym gyue me letters to the captaynes which are beyonde the water, that they may cõuay me ouer, tyll I come into Juda: and letters vnto Asaph the lorde of the kynges wood, that he maye gyue me tymber to make beames for ỹ gates of the palace (which is herde be the house) & for the walles of the citye, & for the house ỹ I shall entre into. The. iiii. Chapter.

The buyldyng of Jerusalem is hyndred and let, but the Jewes buylde it, beyng redye harnelled, lest theyr enemyes shulde inuade them.

BUt when Sanabalat herde that we A buylded ỹ wall, he was wroth in hym selfe, & toke great indignacion, & mocked the Jewes, & sayd before his brethren and the souldyours of Samaria: what do these impotent Jewes? wyll the heathen suffre them? shall they offre? shall they perfourme it in one daye? shal they make ỹ stones whole agayne that are brought to dust & brent? And Tobiah ỹ Ammonite was beside hym, and sayd: Though they buylde, yet yf a fore go vp, he shall breake downe theyr stony wall. Heare (O ỹ our God) for we are despised, turne their shame vpõ theyr owne heade, and gyue them ouer into despysyng in the lande of theyr captiuitie. Couer not theyr wyckednes, and let not theyr synne be put out in thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. And so buylded we the wall, & it was ioyned hole togyther, vnto the halfe heyght therof. And the people were mynded to labour.

And it fortuned, that when Sanabalat, and B Tobiah, & the Arabians, Ammonites, & Asdodites herde that the walles of Jerusalem were made vp, & that the gappes began to be stopped, they were very wroth, & conspired al togither to come & fyght agaynst Jerusalem, & to make the people an hynderaunce therin. Neuertheless we made our prayer vnto our God, & set watchmen by them, whiche buylded day and nyght ouer agaynst them. And Juda sayd: the strength of the bearers is to feble: and there is yet moche more morter, & we are not able to buylde on the wall. And our aduersaries sayd: they shall not knowe neyther se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge them, & slay them, and hynder the worke. But it fortuned that when the Jewes (which dwelt beside them) came, they tolde vs as good as ten tymes: that in al places where ye go vnto, they are appoynted to fall vpon vs. Therfore set I the C people after theyr kynredes with their swerdes, speares, and bowes bynethe in the lowe places behynde the wall, and I loked, & gat me vp: and sayd vnto the chefe men: to the rulers: and to the other people, be not ye afrayde of them: * but ii. Esd. 4. b. thynke rather vpon ỹ great Lorde, which ought and. 15. c. to be feared, and fyght for your brethren, your sonnes, your doughters, your wyues, and your houses. Neuertheles, it chaunced that when our enemyes herde, that we had gotten worde of it, God brought theyr counsell to nought: and we turned all agayne to ỹ wall: euery one vnto his labour. And frõ that tyme forth it came to passe that the halfe parte of the ponge men dyd the labour, and the other halfe parte of them helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, & brestplates: and the rulers stode behynde all ỹ house of Juda, whiche buylded on the wall, & bare burthens from those that laded them. With one hande dyd euery one worke: and with the other helde his weapen. And euery one that buylded, had his swearde gyrde by his thygh, and so buylded they. And the trumpet blewe beside me.

And

D And I sayd vnto the principal mē, to the rulers, and to the other people: the worke is great and large, and we are separated vpon the wall one farre frō an other. Loke in what place therfore ye heare the noyse of the trumpet, resorte ye

And the halfe part of them helde the speares frō the morninge sprynge: tyl the starres cam forth. And at ỹ same tyme sayd I vnto the people: euerye one abyde with hys seruaunt at Jerusalem, that in the night season we maye watch, and labour on the day tyme. As for me & my brethren, my seruauntes and the men of the watch (which were behynde me) we put neuer of oure clothes, nomore thē the other dyd theyr harnes saue onely because of the water.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

¶ The people are vexed with hunger. He requyreth not the lyuynge of a captayne.

A And there arose a greate complaynt of the people, and of theyr wyues against theyr brethren the Jues. For ther were some that sayd: our sonnes and doughters and we are to manye therfore wyll we take corne for them, ỹ we maye eate and lyue. Some also there were that sayd: let vs set our landes: vynepardes & houses to pledge & take vp corne in the dearth. But some there were ỹ said: let vs borowe money for the kynges tribute: and that vpon our landes and vynepardes. Beholde, our bodyes as the bodyes of our brethren, & our chyldren as theyr chyldren: els shulde we subdue our sonnes and daughters vnto bondage, and some of our daughters are subdued vnto bondage alredy and no strength is there in our handes, and other men haue our landes and vynepardes.

B And when I harde theyr complaynte & suche wordes, it displeased me sore, and I aduised so in my minde, that I rebuked the councelers, and ỹ rulers, & sayd vnto them: Euery one of you is to chargeable vnto his brother. And I brought a greate congregacion agaynst them, and sayde vnto them: we (after our abilitie) haue boughte our brethren the Jewes, which were solde vnto the heathen. And wyll you sell your brethren agayn vnto the heathē, after that they haue bene solde vnto vs? Then helde they theyr peace, and coulde fynde nothynge to answere.

C And Nehemia sayd: It is not good that ye do. Ought ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the heathen that are our enemies? I and my brethren, and my seruauntes do lende them money and corne: but as for vsury let vs leaue it. Therfore, this same day I praye you se that ye restore them theyr landes agayne theyr vynepardes, oyle gardens, and theyr houses, and remyt the hundred part of the money of the corne, wyne, and oyle that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayde they: we wyll restore them agayne, and wyll requyre nothynge of them: and wyll do as thou hast spoken. And I called ỹ preestes, & toke an oth of them, that they should do so. And I shoke my lappe, & sayde: God shake out euery man after the same maner from hys house & laboure that mayntayneth not thys word: euē thus be he shakē out, & voyde. And all the cōgregacion said: Amen, & praysed the Lord: And the people dyd so. And from the time forth that (the D kynge) commytted vnto me to be a captayne of them that were in the lande of Juda euē frō ỹ. xx yeare vnto the. xxxii. yeare of kynge Artharerses (that is. xii. yeare) I wt my brethrē lyued not of such substaunce as was gyuen to a captayne. For the olde captaynes ỹ were before me, had bene chargeable vnto the people, & had taken of them breade and wyne, & .xl. sycles of syluer: yea & theyr seruauntes had oppressed ỹ people. But so dyd not I, & that because of the feare of God. But I laboured also in the worke vpō the wal, & bought no lande. And all my seruauntes came thyther together vnto ỹ worke. Moreouer there were at my table an. C. and. l. of the Jewes & rulers, which came vnto me frō among the hethen that are aboute vs. And there was prepared for me daylye an oxe, & syxe chosen shepe, & byrdes, & euer ones in. x. dayes a great summe of wyne. Yet requyre not I the lyuynge of a captayne, for the bondage was greuous vnto the people.

¶ The.vi. Chapter.

¶ The buyldynge is yet agayne hyndered and let.

A And when Sanabalat, Tobiah, & Gesem ỹ Arabian, & the other of our enemies hard that I had buylded ỹ wall: & that ther were no mo gappes therin (howe be it at the same tyme had I not hanged the dores vpon the gates) Sanabalat & Gesem sent vnto me, sayeng: come that we may mete & take coūcell tagether in the villages ỹ are in the playn of ỹ citie Ono. Neuertheles they thought to do me euel. And I sente messengers vnto thē, sayenge: I haue a greate busynes to do & I can not come downe. The worke shuld stand styl, yf I were negligent, & came down to you. Howbeit, they sent vnto me as good as foure tymes after ỹ same maner. And I gaue thē the same answere. Thē sent Sanabalat his seruaūt againe vnto me the fyfth tyme, wt an open letter in hys hāde wherin was writtē: it is tolde the hethen, & Gesem hath sayde it, that ỹ & the Jues thynke to rebel, for the whych cause ỹ buyldest the wall that ỹ mayste be theyr kynge in these matters, & hast ordeyned the prophetes to preache of the at Jerusalem, and to saye: He is kynge of Juda.

B And now shal thys come to the kynges eares come now therfore, & let vs take our coūcell together. And I sent vnto hym, sayeng, there is no such thinge done as thou sayest: for thou faynest them out of thyne owne herte. For they were all mynded to make vs afrayed, sayeng: they shall wythdrawe theyr handes frō the worke, that it shal not be fynished. Howbeit, I strengthed my hande the more. And I came to the house of Semeia the sonne of Dalaia the sonne of Mehetabeell, & he had shut hym selfe wythin, & sayde: let vs come together into ỹ house of God, euē vnto ỹ myddes of ỹ tēple, & shut ỹ dores of ỹ tēple for they wyl come to slay ỹ: yea, euē in ỹ nyght wyl they come to put the to deth. And I sayd: shulde any such man as I am, that wyll go in to the temple, to saue his lyke? I wyll not go in.

C And I perceyued, that God had not sente hym. Yet spake he prophecye vpon me, neuertheless, Tobiah and Sanabalat had hyred him for money. Therfore take he ỹ money, that through feare I shulde so do, and synne: that they myght haue an euyll reporte of me, to blaspheme me. Wy God thynke thou vpon Tobiah & Sanabalat accordynge vnto these theyr workes, and of the prophete Noadia, & of the other prophetes that wolde haue put me in feare.

D And the wall was fynyshed on the fyue and twenty day of the moneth Elul, in two & fyftye dayes. And when all our enemyes herde therof, all ỹ heathen that were about vs, were afrayde, and their courage fayled them. And they perceyued, that this worke came of our God. And at ỹ same tyme were there many of the chefe of Juda whose letters went vnto Tobiah, & agayn from Tobiah vnto them (for there were many in Juda, that were sworne vnto hym, for he was the sonne in lawe of Sechania, the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Jehonathan had the doughter of Mesullam, the sonne of Barachia, & they spake good of hym before me: & tolde him my wordes) and Tobiah sent letters, to put me in feare.

C The. vii. Chapter.

C After the wall ones buylded: is the watch appoynted. They that returned from the captiuite are nombred.

A NOwe when the wall was buylded: I hanged on the dores also, and the porters, syngers, & Leuites were appoynted. And I cõmaunded my brother Hanani and Hanania the ruler of the castell at Jerusalem: for he was a faythfull man, and feared God more then dyd many other. And I sayd vnto them: let not the gates of Jerusalẽ be opened vntyl the sunne be whote. And whyle they were standyng in the watche, they shut the dores, and barred them. And we appoynted certayne cytesyns of Jerusalem, to be watche men, euery one to kepe his watche, and enery one to be ouer agaynst his house. As for the cytie, it was large of rowme and great: but the people were fewe therin, and the houses were not buylded.

B And my God gaue me in my herte, that I gathered togither the principal men, & the officers and the people, to nombre them: and I founde a

And the preastes and Leuites, the porters and the syngers and the other of the people and the Nethinims & all Israel, dwelt in theyr Cityes. And the seuenth moneth came, and the chyldren of Israel were in theyr cityes.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

¶ Esdras gathereth together the people, & readeth to the the law. They kepe the feast of tabernacles or bothes.

A i. Esd. iii. a. iii. Es. ix. a. Deu. xxxi. f. iii. re. xxiii. a

AND ✠ al * the people gathered them selues together: as one man, in the strete that was before the watergate, and they sayde vnto Esdras the scrybe, that he shuld fetche * the boke of the lawe of Moses, whiche ꝑ Lorde cōmaunded to Israell. And Esdras the Preaste brought the law before the congregacyon both of men and women: and all that coulde vnderstande dyd herken vnto it, vpon the fyrst day of the seuenth moneth, and he redde therein, in the strete that was before the watergate (from the morynge vntyll the noone daye) before men & women that dyd harken to it: and the eares of all the people were inclyned vnto the booke of the lawe. And Esdras the scrybe stode vpon an hye pulpyt of wood whiche they had made for ꝑ preachynge, and besyde hym stode Mathathia, Sema, Anania, Uziah, Helkia, and Maaseia, on his ryght hande, and on his lefte hande stode Pedaia, Misael, Malchia, Hasum, Halebadana, zachari, and Mesulam.

B And Esdras opened the boke before all ꝑ people, for he stode aboue all the people: And when he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Esdras praysed the Lorde the great God. And all the people answered: Amen, Amen, with theyr handes vp, and bowed them selues, and worshypped the Lorde, fallynge downe vpon their faces to the grounde. And Jesua, Baam, Serabiah, Jamin, Acub, Sebathai, Hadaia, Maasia, Celita, Azaria, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaia: & the Leuytes caused the people to geue hede vnto the lawe, and the people stode in theyr place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of God dystynctlye and playnely, so that men vnderstode the thyng that was red. And Nehemiah (which is Hathirsata) and Esdras the Prest and scrybe and the Leuytes that caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: this daye is holy vnto the Lorde youre God: be not you sory, and wepe not. For all the people wepte, when they hearde the wordes of the lawe.

C And he sayde vnto them: * go your way and eate of the fat, and drynke the swete, and sende part vnto them also that haue not prepared thē selues: for this daye is holy vnto our Lorde, be not ye sory therfore: for the ioye of the Lorde is your strength. ✠ And the Leuites stilled al the people, and sayde: holde your peace, for the day is holy, vexe not ye your selues. And all the people went theyr waye to eate and drynke, and to sende parte vnto other, & to make great myrth because they had vnderstande the wordes that were declared vnto them. iii. Esd. ix.

And on the nexte daye were gathered together the cheke fathers among all the people and the prestes and Leuytes, vnto Esdras ꝑ scrybe, that they myght vnderstande the wordes of the lawe. And they founde wrytten in the lawe, * (whiche the Lorde had commaunded by Moses) that the chyldren of Israel shoulde dwel in bothes in the feast of the seuenth moneth, and ꝑ they shoulde cause it to be declared and proclaymed in all theyr cityes, and thorow out Jerusalem, saying: go forth vnto the mount, and fetch olyue braunches, pine braunches, myrbraūches Palme braunches, and braunches of thycke tre: to make bothes, as it is wrytten Leu. xxiii. f. Nu. xxix. b. ii. Mac. i. c.

D And so the people went forth, and fet them, & made them bothes, euerye one vpon the roofe of his house, and in theyr courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, and in the strete by the watergate, and in the strete by porte Ephraim.

And al the congregacion of them that were com agayne out of captiuytie made bothes, and sate vnder the bothes: for syns the tyme of Josua the sonne of Nun vnto thys daye, had not the chyldren of Israel done so, and there was very great gladnesse. And euery daye from the fyrste daye vnto the last, red Eldras in the boke of the law of God. And seuen dayes held they the feaste, & on the eyghte daye they gathered together, accordynge vnto the maner.

And truly thou art iust, in all that thou hast brought vpon vs: for ȳ hast done ryghte. As for vs, we haue bene vngodlye, and our kynges and our prynces, our prestes and our fathers haue not done after thy law, nor regarded thy commaundementes and thy earnest exhortacyons wherwith thou haste exhorted them, and they haue not serued the in theyr kyngdome, and in thy great goodes that thou gauest them, and in the large and plēteous lande which thou gauest before them, and haue not conuerted from theyr wycked workes. Behold, we are in bondage this daye: and so is ȳ lande that thou gauest vnto our fathers, to enioye the frutes and goodes therof. behold, there are we bondmen. And great is the encrease of it vnto the kynges whome thou hast set ouer vs, bycause of our synnes: and they haue dominyon ouer oure bodyes and cattell (euen as they wyll them selues) and we are in greate trouble. And in al this make we a sure couenaunt, & wryte it and our prynces, Lenites & prestes seale vnto it

¶ The .x. Chapter.

¶ The names of them that sealed the couenaunt betwene God and the people.

A The sealers were Nehemiah (that is) Hhathirsatha: the sonne of Hachalia and zedekia, Saraia, Asariah & Jeremy, Phashur, Amaria, Malchia, Hatus, Sebaniah, Halluch, Harim, Merimoth, and Obadia, Daniel, Jenthon, & Baruch, Mesulam, Abia, and Miamin, Haasia, Belgai & Semeia: these were prestes. house of our God, to the store houses, and to the treasure houses. For the chyldren of Israel, and the chyldren of Leuy shal bryng vp the heue offerynges of the corne, wyne and oyle vnto the store houses, there as are the vessels of the sanctuarye: and the preastes that mynyster, and the porters and singers, ẏ we forsake not the house of oure God.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

¶ Who dwelled in Jerusalem after it was buylded, and who in the cityes of Juda.

AND the rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem: The other people also cast lottes, ẏ amonge ten, one parte shulde go to Jerusalem into the holy cityte to dwel, and nyne partes to be in the Cityes: and the people thanked all the men that were wyllynge to dwel at Jerusalem.

These are the heades of the lande that dwelt in Jerusalem and in the Cityes of Juda, euerye one in his possessyon, and in theyr cityes: they of Israel, the preestes, Leuites, Nethinims, and the chyldren of Salomons seruauntes. And at Jerusalem dwelt certayne of the chyldren of Juda and Ben Jamin.

Of the chyldren of Juda: Athaiah the sonne of Usia, the sonne of zachari, the sonne of Amaria, the sonne of Saphatia, the sonne of Mahalaleel: the chyldren of Phares. And Maasia the sonne of Baruch, the sonne of Chal Hose, ẏ sone of Hasaia, the sonne of Adaia, the sone of Joiarib, the sonne of zachary, the sonne of Silony. All these were ẏ chyldren of Phares that dwelt at Jerusalem, euen foure hundred threscore and eyght valeaunte men.

B These are the childzen of Ben Jamin, Salu the sonne of Mesullam, the sonne of Joed, ẏ son of Pedaia, the sonne of Calaia, the sonne of Maasia, the sonne of Ithiel, the sonne of Isai. And after hym Gabai, Selai nyne hundred and.xxviii. And Joel the sonne of zichri had the ouersyghte of them: and Juda the son of Senua was nexte ouer the Citye.

1. Para. p. b * Of the preestes: Jedaiah the sonne of Joiarib, Jachin, Saraiah the sonne of Helkia: ẏ son of Mesullam, the sonne of zadoc, the son of Meraioth, the sonne of Ahitob, was Prynce in the house of God: and hys brethrē that perfourmed the worke in the temple. viii. hundred and.xxii. And Adaia the sonne of Jeroham, the sonne of Palaliel, the sonne of Amzi, the sōn, of zachari, the sonne of Phashur, the sone of Malchia: and his brethren chefe amonge the fathers, two hundred and two and fourtye. And Amasai the son of Azrael, the sonne of Ahasai, the sone of Moselemoth, the sonne of Immer: and his brethren were valeaunt men: an hundred and eyght and twentye. And theyr ouersear was zabdiela son of one of the great men.

¶ 1. Para. p. b * Of the Leuytes: Semeia the sone of Hasub, the sonne of Aserikam, the sone of Hasabia the sonne of Bunni, and Sabathai, and Josabad of the chefe of ẏ Leuites, had the ouersyght of the outwarde busynesse of the house of God. And Mathaniahu the sonne of Micha, the sone of zabdi, the sonne of Asaph: was the pryncipal to begynne the thankesgeuing and prayer. And Bakbukia the seconde amonge his brethren, & Abda, the sonne of Sammua, the sonne of Galal, the sonne of Jeduthum. All the Leuytes in the holy cityte were two hundred foure score and foure. * And the porters Acub and Talmō, and 1. Para. p. b. theyre brethren that kepte the portes, were an hundred and two and seuentye. As for the residue of Israell, the Preastes and Leuytes, they were in all the cityes of Juda, euerye one in hys inherytaunce.

And the Nethinims dwelte in Ophel: and Ziba and Gispa was set ouer ẏ Nethinims. The ouersear of the Leuites at Jerusalem was Usi, the sonne of Baani, the sonne of Asabi, ẏ sone of Mathania, the sonne of Micha.

Of the chyldren of Asaph there were syngers D about the busynesse in the house of God, for it was the kynges commaundement concernynge them: that the syngers shoulde deale faythfully euery daye as was accordynge.

And Pathaia the sonne of Mesababel of ẏ chyldren of zerah the sōne of Juda next ẏ kynge in all matters concernyng the people: and theyr vyllages and landes. And some of the chyldren of Juda that were without the townes of their lande dwelt at Kariath Arbe, and in the vyllages therof: at Dibon, and in the vyllages therof: and at Jezabel, and in the vyllages thereof: at Jesua, Moladah, Bethphalet in ẏ towne of Sual, Beersheba, and in theyr vyllages: at Sikelag & Moconah, and theyr vyllages: and at Enremon, zarah, Jerimoth, zonoa, Odollam, and in theyr vyllages: at Lachis and in ẏ feldes therof: at Aska, and in the vyllages therof: and they dwelt frō Bersabe vnto ẏ valey of Hinnō

The chyldren also of Ben Jamin, of Geba, dwelt at Machmas, Aia, Bethel, and in theyr vyllages. And at Anothoth, Nob, Ananiah, Hazor, Ramah, Gethaim, Hadid, zeboim, Nabalath, Lod and Ono, the carpenters valleye. And the Leuites had possessyon bothe in Juda, and in Ben Jamin.

¶ The.xii. Chapter.

¶ The preastes and Leuytes whiche came wyth zorobabel vnto Jerusalem are nombred, and the wall is dedicated.

THese are the preestes and Leuites that A went vp with zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and with Jesua, Sararia Jeremy and Eldras, Amaria, Maluch, Hatus, Sechania, Rehum, Merimoth, Iddo, Genthoi, Abia, Miamin, Maaria, Belga, Semeia, Joiarib, Joiada, Salu, Amocke, Helkia and Jadeia: These were the heades among the preestes: and theyr brethren in ẏ dayes of Jesua. The Leuites were these, Jesua, Bennui, Cadmiel, Sarabia, Juda, and Mathania, which was ouer the office of thankesgeuynge, he and his brethren, Bacbukia: and Hinni and theyr brethren, were about them in ẏ watches.

Jesua begat Joakim: Joakim also begate Eliasib: and Eliasib begat Joiada: Joiada begat Jonathan: and Jonathan begat Jadua. In the the dayes of Joakim were these ỹ chefe fathers amonge the prestes: vnder Sararia, Mararia, vnder Jeremy, Hanania, vnder Esdras, Mesul lã, vnder Amaria, Jehoanã: vnder Milico, Jonathan: vnder Sebania, Joseph: vnder Harim Adua: vnder Maraioth, Helkia: vnder Iddo, zachari: vnder Genthon, Mesullam: vnder Abia, zichri: vnder Miniamin, and Moadia, Piltai: vnder Belga, Samua: vnder Semeia, Jehonathã: vnder Joiarib, Methanai: vnder Jadaia, Uzi: vnder Selai, Kelai: vnder Amok, Eber: vnder Helchia, Hasabia: vnder Jadaia, Nathenael. And in ỹ tyme of Eliasib, Joiada, Johnan and Jadua, were the chefe fathers amonge

B the Leuites and the preastes, written vnder the raygne of Darius the Persian. The chyldren of Leui, the principal fathers were wrytten in the Chronycles vnto the tyme of Jonathan the son of Eliasib. And these were the chefe amonge the Leuytes: Hasabia, Serebia, and Jesua the son of Cadmiel, and theyr brethren in theyr presẽce to geue prayse and thankes, accordyng as Danyd the man of God had ordeyned it, one watch ouer agaynste another, Mathania, Balbukia, Obadia, Mesullam, Talmon and Ahub were porters in the watche at the threshholdes of the gates. These were in the dayes of Joakim the sonne of Jesua, the sonne of Josedec, and in the dayes of Nehemia the captayne, and of ỹ preast Esdras the Scrybe.

C And in the dedicacion of the wall at Jerusalem: they sought the Leuites out of all theyr places, that they myght be brought to Jerusalẽ to kepe the dedicacyon & gladnesse, wyth thankesgeuynges and syngyng with cymbales, psalteryes and harpes. And the chyldren of ỹ syngers gathered them selues together from euery syde out of the playne countrey about Jerusalẽ, and from the vyllages of Netophathi, frõ the house of Gilgal, and out of the coũtries of Geba, and Asmaueth, for the syngers had buylded theym vyllages rounde about Jerusalem. And ỹ preastes and Leuytes were purifyed, and clensed the people: and the gates, and the wall.

And I brought the prynces of Juda vp vpon the wall, and appoynted two greate queres of men to geue thankes, whiche went on the ryght hande of the wall towarde the donge gate, and after them went Hosaia, and halfe of the prynces of Juda, and Asaria, Esdras: and Mesullam Juda, Ben Jamin, Semia & Jeremy: & certayn of the prestes chyldren wyth trompets, namely zachary the sonne of Jonathan, the sõne of Semeia, the son of Mathania, the son of Michaia the sonne of zacur, the son of Asaph and his brethren, Semeia, Asarael, Malalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nathanael, and Juda & Hanani, with ỹ musycal instrumentes of Dauid the man of God.

D And Esdras ỹ scrybe went before them and besyde the welgate, they went vp ouer agaynst them vpon the steppes of the citye of Daupd, at the goynge vp of the wall beyonde the house of Dauid, vnto the watergate Eastwarde.

The other quere of them that gaue thankes went ouer against them, and I after them, & the halfe parte of the people vpon the wal, beyonde the fornace gate vnto the brode wall, & beyonde the porte of Ephraim, and beyond the olde gate beyonde the fyshegate, and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Mea, vntyl the shepgate And they stode styl in the pryson gate, & so stode the two queres (of them that gaue thankes) in the house of god: and I, and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the prestes, namely Eliakim Maasia, Miniamin, Michaia, Elioenei, zachary, and Hanania: wyth trompettes, and Maasia, Temeiah, Eleasar, Uzi, Jehohanan, Melchiah, Elam, and Ser. And the syngers sange loude, haupng Jesrahiah for theyr ouersear.

And the same daye they offred greate sacrifyces and reioyced: for God hadde geuen them great gladnesse, so that both the wyues & chyldren were ioyfull: and the myrth of Jerusalem was heard farre of.

E At the same tyme were there men appoynted ouer the treasure houses (wherin were the heue offrynges: the fyrstlynges, and the tythes) that they shulde gather them out of the feldes about the cities, to destrybute them vnto the preastes and Leuytes, accordynge to the lawe: for Juda was glad of the prestes and Leuytes, that they stode and wayted vpon the offyce of theyr God which is a pure offyce. And the syngers and porters stode after the commaundement of Daupd and of Salomon his sonne, * for in the tyme of *1.Pa.xxiii.a Dauid and Asaph, were the chefe syngers founded, and the songes of prayse & thankesgeuyng vnto God. B But in all this tyme was not I at Jerusalẽ: for in the.xxxii. yere of Artharerses king of Babilon, came I vnto the kyng, and after certayne dayes obtayned I lycence of the kynge to come to Je-

to Jerusalem. And I gat knowledge that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobia, in that he had made hym a chambre in the court of the house of God, and it greued me sore, & I cast forth all the vessels of ỹ house of Tobia out of the chambre, and cõmaunded them to cleanse the chambres. And thyther brought I agayne the vessels of ỹ house of God with the meatofferyng and the incense.

And I perceyued that the porcyons of the Leuites were not geuẽ them, & that euery one fled to his lande, euen the Leuites and syngers that executed the worke. Then reproued I the rulers and sayde: Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in theyr place. Then brought all Juda the tythes of corne and wyne, and oyle, vnto the treasure. And I made treasurers ouer the treasure, euen Selemiah the preest, and Zadoc the scrybe, and of the Leuytes, Phadaia, and vnder theyre hande was Hanan the sonne of Zacur, the sonne of Mathania, for they were counted faythfull, & theyr offyce was to distrybute ỹ porcyons vnto theyr brethrẽ. *Thynke vpon me, O my God herein (.Esd.b.c.) and wype not out my mercy that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on ỹ offyces therof.

At the same tyme saw I some tredyng wyne presses on the Sabboth, & brygyng in sheues, and asses laden with wyne, grapes, kygges and brygyng all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalem vpon the Sabboth day. And I rebuked thẽ earnestly the same daye that they solde the vyttayles. There dwelte men of Tire also therein, which brought fysh and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabboth vnto the chyldren of Juda in Jerusalem. Then reproued I the rulers in Juda, and sayde vnto them: what euell thyng is this that ye do, and breake the Sabboth daye? Dyd not your fathers euen thus, and oure God brought all this plage vpon vs, and vpon thys citye? And ye make the wrath more yet vpõ Israel, in that ye breake the Sabboth.

¶ And it fortuned that when the portes of Jerusalem began to be darke in ỹ euenynge before ỹ Sabboth, I cõmaunded to shut the gates and charged, that they shuld not be opened tyll after the Sabboth: & some of my seruaũtes set I at ỹ gates, ỹ there shulde no burthẽ be brought in on the Sabboth daye. Then remayned the chapmẽ and marchauntes ones or twyse ouer nyght wout Jerusalem with all maner of wares. Then reproued I them sore, & sayde vnto thẽ: why tary ye all nyght about the wall? Yf ye do it ones agayne, I wyl laye handes vpon you. Frõ that tyme forth came they nomore on the Sabboth. And I sayde vnto the Leuites ỹ they shuld clẽse them selues, & that they shuld come and kepe the gates, to halowe the Sabboth daye. Thynke vpon me (O my God) concernynge thys also, & spare me accordynge to thy great mercye.

D And at the same tyme saw I Jewes that maryed wyues of Asdod, of Ammon, and of Moab and theyr chyldren spake halfe in the speache of Asdod, and coulde not speake in the Jewes language, but by the tunge myght a man perceyue euery people. Then I reproued them, and cursed them, and smote certayne men of them, & made them bare, and toke an oth of them by God: Ye shall not geue youre doughters vnto theyr sonnes, neyther shall ye take theyr doughters vnto your sonnes, or for your selues. Dyd not Salomon the kyng of Israel synne for suche? and yet amonge many heythen was there no kyng lyke hym, whiche was dere vnto hys God, and God made hym kynge ouer Israel: and yet neuerthelesse, outlandysshe women caused hym to synne. Shall we then obeye vnto you, to doo all thys greate euell, and to trasgresse agaynst our God and mary straunge wyues?

to Jerusalem. And I gat knowledge that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobia, in that he had made hym a chambre in the court of the house of God, and it greued me sore, & I cast forth all the vessels of ỹ house of Tobia out of the chambre, and cõmaunded them to cleanse the chambres. And thyther brought I agayne the vessels of ỹ house of God with the meatofferyng and the incense.

And I perceyued that the porcyons of the Leuites were not geuẽ them, & that euery one fled to his lande, euen the Leuites and syngers that executed the worke. Then reproued I the rulers and sayde: Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in theyr place. Then brought all Juda the tythes of corne and wyne, and oyle, vnto the treasure. And I made treasurers ouer the treasure, euen Selemiah the preest, and Zadoc the scrybe, and of the Leuytes, Phadaia, and vnder theyre hande was Hanan the sonne of Zacur, the sonne of Mathania, for they were counted faythfull, & theyr offyce was to distrybute ỹ porcyons vnto theyr brethrẽ. *Thynke vpon me, O my God herein (.Esd.b.c.) and wype not out my mercy that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on ỹ offyces therof.

At the same tyme saw I some tredyng wyne presses on the Sabboth, & brygyng in sheues, and asses laden with wyne, grapes, kygges and brygyng all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalem vpon the Sabboth day. And I rebuked thẽ earnestly the same daye that they solde the vyttayles. There dwelte men of Tire also therein, which brought fysh and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabboth vnto the chyldren of Juda in Jerusalem. Then reproued I the rulers in Juda, and sayde vnto them: what euell thyng is this that ye do, and breake the Sabboth daye? Dyd not your fathers euen thus, and oure God brought all this plage vpon vs, and vpon thys citye? And ye make the wrath more yet vpõ Israel, in that ye breake the Sabboth.

¶ And it fortuned that when the portes of Jerusalem began to be darke in ỹ euenynge before ỹ Sabboth, I cõmaunded to shut the gates and charged, that they shuld not be opened tyll after the Sabboth: & some of my seruaũtes set I at ỹ gates, ỹ there shulde no burthẽ be brought in on the Sabboth daye. Then remayned the chapmẽ and marchauntes ones or twyse ouer nyght wout Jerusalem with all maner of wares. Then reproued I them sore, & sayde vnto thẽ: why tary ye all nyght about the wall? Yf ye do it ones agayne, I wyl laye handes vpon you. Frõ that tyme forth came they nomore on the Sabboth. And I sayde vnto the Leuites ỹ they shuld clẽse them selues, & that they shuld come and kepe the gates, to halowe the Sabboth daye. Thynke vpon me (O my God) concernynge thys also, & spare me accordynge to thy great mercye.

D And at the same tyme saw I Jewes that maryed wyues of Asdod, of Ammon, and of Moab and theyr chyldren spake halfe in the speache of Asdod, and coulde not speake in the Jewes language, but by the tunge myght a man perceyue euery people. Then I reproued them, and cursed them, and smote certayne men of them, & made them bare, and toke an oth of them by God: Ye shall not geue youre doughters vnto theyr sonnes, neyther shall ye take theyr doughters vnto your sonnes, or for your selues. Dyd not Salomon the kyng of Israel synne for suche? and yet amonge many heythen was there no kyng lyke hym, whiche was dere vnto hys God, and God made hym kynge ouer Israel: and yet neuerthelesse, outlandysshe women caused hym to synne. Shall we then obeye vnto you, to doo all thys greate euell, and to trasgresse agaynst our God and mary straunge wyues?

And one of the chyldren of Jehoiada the son E of Eliasib the hye preaste had made a contracte wt Sanabalat the Horonyte: but I chased hym fro me: (O my God) thynke thou vpon them ỹ defyle the preesthod & the couenaunt of the preesthode & of the Leuites. Thus clensed I them frõ al suche as were outlandysh, and appoynted the courses of the preestes and Leuytes euerye one in hys offyce, and to offer the wood at tymes appoynted, and the fyrst frutes: Thinke thou vpõ me (O my God) for the best. ❧ (Amen.)

And all the kynges seruauntes that were in the kynges gate, bowed theyr knees, and worshypped Haman: for the kynge had so cõmaunded cõcernyng hym. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, and worshypped hym not. Then the kynges seruauntes whych were in the kynges gate sayde vnto Mardocheus: why transgressest ỹ the kynges commaundementes? And when they spake this daylye vnto hym, he folowed theym not, and they tolde Haman: that they myghte se howe Mardocheus matters wolde endure: for he had tolde them, ỹ he was a Jewe. And when Haman sawe that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto hym, nor worshypped hym, he was full of indignacyon, and thoughte it to lytle to lay handes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed hym the nacyon of Mardocheus, wherfore he soughte to destroye all the Jewes, that were throwout the hole empyre of Ahasuerus and that were of the nacyon of Mardocheus.

In the fyrst moneth (ỹ is the moneth Nisan) in ỹ twelueth yere of kyng Ahasuerus: they cast Phur (that is a lot) before Haman from day to daye, and from moneth to moneth, to the twelueth moneth, that is the moneth Adar. And Haman sayd vnto kyng Ahasuerus: There is here a people scattred abrode, & dispersed amonge al people in all the landes of thyne empyre, & they haue theyr lawes contrary from all people, and do not after the kynges lawes, neyther is it the kynges profyte to suffer them after this maner. Then were the kynges scrybes called on the thyrtenthe daye of the fyrste moneth * * (Nisan) and there was wrytten (accordynge as Haman cõmaunded) vnto al the kynges officers, and to the captaynes that were in all the landes, and to the rulers of euery people in the countryes on euery syde, accordyng to the wrytynge of euery nacyon, and after theyr language: in the name of kynge Ahasuerus was it written, and sealed with the kynges rynge. So Esthers damsels and her chambrelaynes came and tolde it her. Then was the Quene excedynglye astonyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shulde put on, and laye the sakcloth from hym: But Mardocheus wolde not take them. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kinges chãbrelaynes (which stode before her) and gaue hym a commaundement vnto Mardocheus, that he myght knowe what it were, wherefore he dyd so. So Hahath wente forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the citye, whyche was before the kynges gate.

B And Mardocheus tolde hym of all that had happened vnto hym, and of the summe of syluer that Haman had promysed to weye downe into the kinges treasurye bicause of the Jewes, yf he wolde destroye them (and he gaue hym the copy of the kynges commaundement that was deuysed at Susan, to destroye them, ẏ he might shewe it vnto Esther) and so speake to her, and charged her, that she shulde go into the kynge, and make her prayer and supplicacion vnto him for her people.

C And when Hathath came in, he tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus. And agayne, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and commaunded him, to saye vnto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes and the people in the landes of the king knowe that whosoeuer cõmeth within the court vnto the kynge, whether it be man or woman, whych is not called, the cõmaundement is, that the same shall dye: excepte the kynge holde oute the golden sceptre vnto hym, ✠(in token of graciousnesse) for then he shall lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come nowe vnto the kynge thys thyrtye dayes.

D And they certifyed Mardocheus of Esthers wordes: and Mardocheus bad saye agayne vnto Esther: thynke not to saue thyne owne lyfe, whyle thou arte in the kynges house, before all Jewes: for yf thou holdeste thy peace at thys tyme, then shall the Jewes haue helpe and deliuraunce oute of an other place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou arte come to the kyngdome, for thys cause sake? Esther bad thẽ giue Mardocheus this answere: Goo thou thy waye, and gather al the Jues togyther ẏ are found at Susan, and fast ye for me, that ye eate not ẏ drynke in thre dayes, neyther day nor nyght. I and my damsels wyll fast lykewyse, and so wyll I goo into the kynge, whyche thynge is yet contrarye to the commaundement: and yf I perysshe I perysh. Then answerede Esther, and sayd: my peticion and desyre is, yf I haue founde grace in the syght of the kynge, and yf it please the kynge to gyue me my peticion, and fulfyll my request, thã let the kynge and Haman come to the banket ẏ I shal prepare for them, and so wyll I do to morowe, as the kynge hath sayde.

Then wente Haman forth the same day ioy- C full and mery in his mynde. And when the same Hamã sawe Mardocheus in the kynges gate ẏ he stode not vp and kneled before hym, he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. Neuertheless, Haman refrayned hym selfe: and when he came home he sent, & called for hys frendes, and zares his wyfe, and Hamã tolde them of the glory of hys rychesse, and the multitud of hys chyldren, and all togyther howe the kynge had promoted him so greatly, & how that he had set hym aboue the princes and seruauntes of the kynge: Haman sayd moreouer: Yea, & Esther the quene D dyd let noman come in with the kyng to the bãket that she had prepared, except me. And to morowe am I bydden vnto her also with the kyng. But in all thys am I not satisfyed, as longe as I se Mardocheus the Jewe sytting at the kynges gate. Then sayd zares his wyfe and all his frendes vnto hym: Let them make a galous of fyftye cubytes hye, and to morowe speake thou vnto the kyng, that Mardocheus maye be hanged theron: and go thou in merely with the king vnto the banket. And Haman was well cõtent wythall, and caused the galous to be made.

¶The.vi.Chapter.

¶The kynge turneth ouer the Chronicles, and fyndeth the fidelitie of Mardocheus: & then to the confusion of Hamã, cõmaundeth Mardocheus to be had in honour.

THe same nyght could not ẏ kyng slepe and he cõmaunded to bryng ẏ chronicles & storyes: whych when they were red before the king, they happened on the place, where it was written howe

Esther.ii.d * Mardocheus had tolde that Bigthana, and Theres the kynges two chamberlaynes (which kept the threscholdes) sought to laye handes on kynge Ahasuerus. And the kynge sayd: What worshyp & good haue we done to Mardocheus therfore? Then sayd the kynges seruauntes that mynystred vnto hym: There is nothynge at all done for hym. And the kyng sayd: Who is in the courte? (for Haman was gone in to the courte without, before ỹ kynges house) that he mygbt speake vnto the kyng to hange Mardocheus on the tree (that he had prepared for hym). And the B kynges seruauntes sayd vnto him: beholde, Haman standeth wout in the courte. And the kyng sayd: let hym come in. And when Haman came in, the kynge sayd vnto hym: What shall be done vnto the man whom ỹ kyng wold fayne bringe vnto worshyp? Haman thought in his herte: Whom delyteth the kynge to bringe vnto worshyp more then me? And Haman answered the kynge: Let the man whom the kyng pleaseth to bringe vnto worshyp, be brought hyther: that he may be arayed wt the royal garmentes, which the kynge vseth to weare: and the horse that the kynge rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royall may be set vpon his head. And let this rayment and horse be delyuered vnder the hande of one of the kynges princes, that they may aray the man withall (whom the kynge is disposed to bringe to honour) and carry hym vpon the horse thorow the strete of the cytie, and proclayme before him: thus shall it be done vnto the man whome the kynge pleaseth to bringe to honour.

C And the kynge sayd: make haste, and take as thou hast sayd: the rayment and the horse: and do euen so vnto Mardocheus the Jewe, that sytteth before the kynges gate, & let nothyng fayle of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Haman the rayment and the horse, and arayed Mardocheus, and brought hym on horsebacke thorow the strete of the cytie, & proclaymed before hym: Euen this shall it be done to the man whom the kynge is disposed to honour. And Mardocheus D came agayn to the kynges gate: but Haman gat hym home in all the haste mournyng bareheded, and tolde zares his wyfe & all his frendes euery thynge that had happened hym. Then sayd his wyse men, and zares his wyfe vnto hym: Yf it be Mardocheus of the sede of the Jewes, before whom thou hast begon to fall, thou shalt not preuayle agaynst hym, but shalte surely fall before hym. And whyle they were yet talkynge with hym, came the kynges chamberlaynes, and caused Haman to make haste, to come vnto the banket that Esther had prepared.

C The. vii. Chapter.

C The Quene byddeth the kynge and Haman agayns and prayeth for her selfe & her people. She accuseth Haman, and he is hanged on the gallous, whyche he had prepared for Mardocheus.

A AND the kynge & Haman came in to the banket that Quene Esther had prepared, and the kyng sayd vnto Esther on the second day at the banket of wyne: What is thy petycyon, (Quene Esther) that it may be gyuen the? And what requyrest thou? Yee aske euen halfe of the empyre, and it shall be done. And Esther the Quene answered, & sayd: Yf I haue founde grace in thy syght (O kynge) and yf it please the kynge, then graunte me my lyfe at my desyre, and my people for my petycyons sake: for we are solde, I and my people, to be destroyed, to be slayne, and to perysshe. And wolde God that we were solde to be bondmen B and bondwomen, then wolde I holde my tonge: For the enemy pondreth not the kynges harme. The kynge Ahasuerus answered, and sayd vnto Quene Esther: Who is he? and where is he, that dare presume in his mynde to do after that maner? And Esther sayd: the enemy and aduersary is this wycked Haman.

Haman was excedyngly afrayd before ỹ kyng C & the Quene. And the kyng arose frō the banket and from the wyne in his displeasure, & wente in to the palais garden. And Haman stode vp, and besought Quene Esther for his lyfe: for he sawe that there was a myschefe prepared for hym of the kynge alredy. And when the kynge came agayn out of ỹ palays garden, into ỹ place where they dranke wyne, Haman had layde hym vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon. Then sayd ỹ kyng wyl he force ỹ Quene also before me in ỹ house? As soone as that worde went out of the kynges D mouth, they couered Hamās face: and Harbona one of ỹ chamberlaynes that stode before ỹ king sayd: behold, there standeth a galous in Hamans house. l. cubites hye, which he had made for Mardocheus, that spake good for ỹ kyng. The kyng sayd: hang hym theron. So they hanged Hamā on the galous, that he had made for Mardocheus. Then was the kynges wrath pacifyed.

C The. viii. Chapter.

C After the death of Haman was Mardocheus exalted, and then are there comfortable letters sent vnto the Jewes.

THE same day dyd kyng Ahasuerus gyue A the house of Haman the Jewes enemye vnto Quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before the kyng: for Esther tolde how that he belonged vnto her. And the kynge put of his fynger a rynge whiche he had taken frō Haman, and gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Esther set Mardocheus ouer the house of Haman. And Esther spake yet more before the kyng: and fell downe at his fete weppynge, and besought hym that he wolde put awaye the wyckednes of Haman the Agagite, & his deuyce that he had ymagined agaynst the Jewes. And the kyng *(according to the maner) helde out the golden scepter to- *a warde Esther, *(whereby was declared a token of gra- *b ciousnesse.) Then arose Esther, and stode before B the kynge, and sayd: Yf it please the kynge, and yf I haue founde grace in his syght, and yf it be acceptable before the kynge, then let it be wrytten, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite may be called agayne: whiche letters he wrote to destroye the C Jewes, which are in all the kynges landes. For how can I suffre and se the euyll, that shall happen vnto my people? Or how can I loke vpon the destruction of my kynred?

And the kynge Ahasuerus sayd vnto Quene Esther:

Esther and to Mardocheus the Jewe: Beholde I haue gyuen Esther the house of Haman, whō they haue hanged vpon a tree, bycause he layed hand vpon the Jewes. Wryte ye also for the Jewes, as it lyketh you in the kynges name, and seale it wyth the kinges rynge, (for the wrytinges that were wrytten in the kinges name, and sealed with the kynges rynge, durst nomā disanull.) Then were the kynges scribes called at ỹ same tyme, euen in the thyrd moneth, that is the moneth *Siuan, on the .xxiii. daye.

*Maye. And it was wrytten (accordynge to all as Mardocheus cōmaunded) vnto the Jewes and to the princes, to the deputies and captaynes in the lādes whych are from India vnto Ethiopia namely an hundred and seuen and twentye landes, vnto euery one accordyng to the wrytynge therof, and to euerye people after theyr speache, and the Jewes accordynge to theyr wrytynge and language.

And he wrote in the kyng Ahasuerus name, and sealed it with the kynges rynge. And by postes that rode vpon horses, and swyfte younge mules sent he the wrytynges wherin the kynge graunted the Jewes (in what cityes soeuer they were) to gather them selues togither, & to stande for theyr lyfe, and for to roote out, to slaye and to destroye al the power of the people and lande that wold trouble them wyth chyldren and women, and to spoyle theyr good vpon one daye in all the landes of kynge Ahasuerus, namely, vpon the thyrtenth daye of the twelueth moneth, Februarye whyche is the moneth *Adar.

E The summe of the wrytting was, how there shulde be a cōmaundemente gyuen in all landes, and publyshed amonge all people, and that the Jewes shulde be ready agaynste that daye, and to auenge them selues on theyr enemyes. And so the postes that rode vpō the swyft horses and mules made haste with all spede, to execute the kynges worde: and the cōmaundement was deuysed in Susan the chefe citye.

And Mardocheus went out *(from the palace &) from the kynge in royall apparel of yelowe and white, and with a great crowne of golde, being arayed wyth a garment of sylke and purple, and the citye of Susan reioyced and was glad, and vnto the Jewes there was come *(a newe) lyght and gladnesse, ioye and worshyp. In all landes and cityes, into what place so euer the kynges word and commaundement reached, there was ioye and myrth, prosperitye and good dayes amonge the Jewes: in somuche that many of the people of the lande became of the Jewes belefe and the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

¶ The .ix. Chapter.

¶ At the cōmaundement of the kynge, the Jewes put theyr aduersaryes to death: The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Jewes kepe a feast daye in remembraunce of theyr deliueraunce.

IN the twelueth moneth, that is ỹ moneth Adar, vpon the thyrtenth daye of the same, when the kynges worde and commaundemente shulde be done, euen vpon the same day that the enemyes shuld haue destroyed the Jewes, to haue oppressed them, it A turned contrary wyse, euen that the Jues shuld subdue theyr ennemyes. For they gathered the Jewes togyther in theyr cityes wythin all the landes of king Ahasuerus, to lay hande on such as wold do them euyll, and no man coulde withstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, and princes and deputyes & officers of the king, promoted the Jewes, for the feare of Mardocheus came vpon them. For Mardocheus was great in the kynges house, and the report of him was noysed in al landes, howe he encreased and grewe.

Thus the Jewes smote all theyr enemyes wō a sore slaughter, and slue and destroyed and dyd after theyr wyl vnto suche as were theyr aduersaryes. And at Susan the chefe city slue the Jewes, and destroyed fyue hundred men, and slue Pharsandatha, Dalphon Asphatha, Pharatha Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai and Vaizatha the ten sōnes of Haman, the sonnes of Hamadata the enemye of the Jewes: but on hys goodes they layed no handes. At ỹ same tyme was the kynge certyfyed of the nombre of those that were slayne in ỹ citye of Susan. And the kyng sayd vnto Quene Esther: The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed fyue hundred men in the cetye of Susan, and the ten sonnes of Hamā what haue they done (thynkeste thou) in other landes of the kynge? And what is thy petition, that it maye be gyuen the? Or what requyreste thou more to be done? Esther answered: Yf it B please the kyng, let hym suffre the Jewes to morowe also to do accordynge vnto thys dayes cōmaundemente, that they maye hange Hamans ten sonnes vpon tree. And the kynge charged to do so, and the commaundement was deuysed at Susan, and they hanged Hamans ten sonnes. For the Jewes that were in Susan gathered them selues togyther, vpon the fourtenth daye of the moneth Adar, and slue thre hundred men at Susan, but on theyr goodes they layed no handes: As for the other Jewes that were in the kynges lādes, they came togyther, and stode for theyr lyues, that they myght haue rest frō theyr enemyes: and slue of theyr enemyes fyue & seuentye thousande: howbeit, they layed no hādes on theyr goodes. Thys they dyd on the thyrtenth daye of the moneth Adar, and on the fourtenth daye of the same moneth rested they: whych day D they helde wyth feastynge and gladnesse. But the Jewes that were at Susan came together both on the thyrtenth daye, and on the fourtenth, and on the fyftenth daye of the same they rested and held that daye wyth feastyng and gladnes. And therfore the Jewes that dwelt in the vilages and vnwalled townes, helde the fourtenth daye of the moneth Adar, wyth gladnesse and feastynge, and kepte holye daye, and euerye one sent gyftes vnto an other.

And Mardocheus wrote these actes, & sente the wrytynges vnto al the Jewes that were in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, both nye and far, that they shulde make a lawe amonge them selues, and holde the fourtenthe, and fyftenth

C. yoke of oxen, and fyue hundred she asses, and a very great housholde, so that he was one of the moost pryncypall men amonge all men of the East countrye. And his sonnes wente and made bankettes: one daye in one house, an other daye in an other, and sent for theyr thre systers to eate and drynke with them. And it fortuned, that when they had passed ouer the tyme of theyr bankettynge rounde aboute, Job sent for them, and sanctifyed them, and gat vp early, & offred for euery one a burnt offrynge. For Job sayd: lest peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence: and haue ben vnthankfull to God in theyr hertes. Gen. xxii.d. Job.fiii.d.

Thus dyd Job euery daye: And vpon a daye * when the chyldren of God came and stode before the Lorde, it fortuned that Satan came also amonge them. And the Lorde sayd vnto Satan: from whence cõmest thou? Satan answered the Lorde and sayd: * I haue gone about the lande, and walked thorowe it. Job.ii.a. ii.par.b.c

And the Lorde sayd vnto Satan: hast thou not consydred my seruaunt Job, how that there is none lyke hym in the lande? a perfect and a iust man: suche a one as feareth God, and eschweth euyll. Satan answered, & sayd vnto the Lorde. Doth Job feare God for nought? hast thou not preserued hym & his house, and al that he hath on euery syde? Thou hast blessed the workes of his handes, & his possession is encreased in the land. But laye thy hande nowe vpon hym, & (a lytle) and touche all that he hath, & he shall curse the to thy face. And the Lorde sayd vnto Satan: lo, all that he hath, be in thy power: onely vpon hym selfe, se that thou lay not thy hande. And Satan went forth from the presence of the Lorde. B

And vpon a certayne daye, it fortuned that his sonnes and doughters were eatynge & drynkynge wyne in theyr eldest brothers house, and C

there came a messenger vnto Job, & said: Whyle the oxen were a plowyng, and the asses goynge in the pasture beside them, the Sabees cam violently, & toke them away: yea they haue sleyne thy seruauntes wyth the edge of the sword: and I onely ranne my waye to tell the.

Whyle he was yet speakynge, there came another, and sayd. The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, and hath brent vp all thy shepe and seruauntes, and consumed them: and I onelye ran awaye, to tell the. And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came another, and sayd: The Caldees made thre armyes, and fell in vpon the camels, and haue caryed them away: yea & slayne thy seruaũtes wt the sword: and I only am gotten away to tel the. And whyle he was yet speakinge, there came another, and sayde: Thy sonnes and thy daughters were eatynge and drynkinge wyne in theyr eldest brothers house, & beholde, there came a myghty great wynde out of the south, & smote the foure corners of the house, whiche fel vpon thy chyldren and they are deed and I am gotten awaye alone to tell the.

Then Job stode vp, and rent his clothes, and shaued hys heed, fell downe vpon the grounde and worshypped, and sayde: * Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shall I tourne thyther agayne. The Lorde gaue, and the Lorde hath taken awaye, (euen as it hath pleased the Lorde, so it is come to passe) blessed be the name of ỹ Lorde, * In all these thynges dyd Job not offende, nor murmured foolyshly agaynst God.

He destroyed hym selfe wyth hys anger? Shal the earth be forsaken, or any stone remoued out of hys place, bycause of the? Yea, the lyght of ỹ vngodly shalbe put out? and the sparke of hys fyre shall not burne. The lyght shalbe darke in hys dwellynge, & his candell shalbe put out wyth hym. Hys presumptuous goynges are kepte in, and his owne counsel shal cast hym downe. For his fete are taken, as it were in the net, and he is at hys wyttes ende. Hys fote shalbe holden in the snare, and it shall catche them that be thyrsty of bloud: The snare is layde for hym in the grounde, and a pytfall in the waye.

¶ Fearfulnesse shall make hym afrayde on euery syde, that he shal not know, where to get out. Hunger shalbe hys strengthe: myschyefe shall hange vpon hym. He shalt eate the strengthe of hys owne skynne, euen the fyrst borne of deathe shall eate hys strength. Hys hope shalbe rooted out of hys dwellynge, verye fearefulnesse shall bringe hym to the kyng. Other men shall dwel in hys house (but shall be none of hys) and brimstone shalbe scattred vpon his habitacyon. Hys rootes shalbe dryed vp byneth, and aboue shall his braunche be cut downe: His remembraunce shal perysshe from the earth, and he shal haue no name in the strete: they shall dryue hym frō the syghte into darkenesse, and cast hym cleane out of the worlde. He shall nether haue chyldren nor kynsfolkes amonge hys people, no, nor any posterite in his dwellynges. They that come after hym, shalbe astonyed at hys daye, and they that go before, shalbe afrayde. Suche are nowe the dwellynges of the wycked, and this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

But yf ye wyll enhaunce your selues agaynst me, & accuse me to be a wycked person, because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God that hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me aboute wyth his net. ¶ The.xx. Chapter.

A THen answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answere. And why? my mynde is redye wythin me. I haue suffycyently herde thy checkynge and reproke, therfore am I purposed to make answere after myne vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not thys, namely, that from the begynnyng (euer sence the creacyon of man vpon earth) the gladnesse of ỹ vngodlye hath bene shorte, and that the iope of ypocrytes contynued but the twynklyng of an eye? Though he be magnifyed vp to the Heauen, so that his heade reacheth vnto the cloudes, yet at a turne he perysheth for euer, in so muche ỹ they which haue sene hym, shall saye: Where is he? He shall vanyshe as a dreame: so that he can no more be founde, and shall passe awaye as a vysyon in the nyght. So that ỹ eye which sawe hym before, shall haue no more syght of hym, and his place shall knowe hym no more. Hys chyldren shall be fayne to agree wyth the poore, and hys handes shall restore theyr goodes.

B Hys from hys youth hys bones are full of pleasures, but nowe shall it lye downe wythin hym in the earth. Whē wyckednes was swete in his mouth, he hyd it vnder hys tonge. That he fauoured, that wolde he not forsake, but kepte it close in his throte. The breade that he dyd eate, is turned to the poyson of the serpentes, wythin his body. The rychesse that he deuoured, shal he parbrake agayn, for God shal drawe them out of hys belly, he shall sucke the gall of serpentes, and the adders tonge shall slaye hym: so that he shall nomore se the ryuers and brookes of hony and butter. The thynge that other men haue laboured for, shall he restore agayne, and shal not eate it vp.

C Great trauayle shall he make for rychesse, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, and not buylded them. His belly coulde neuer be fylled, therfore shall he perysh in hys couetousnesse. Theare shall none of hys meat be lefte behynde, therfore shall no mā loke for hys prosperyte. When he had plenteousnesse of euerye thynge, yet was he poore, thoughe he was helped on euery syde.

D For though the wycked haue neuer so much to fyll hys belly, yet God shall sende his wrath vpon him, and cause his indignacyon to raygne ouer hym: so that yf he flye the yron weapons, he shalbe shot wyth the stele bowe. The arowe is taken forth, and gone out of ỹ quyuer, and a glysterynge sweard thorowe the gall of hym, feare shal come vpon him. There shal no darkenesse be able to hyde hym. An vnkyndlyd fyre shall cōsume hym, and loke what remayneth in hys house, it shalbe destroyed. The heauen shal declare hys wyckednesse, & the earth shall take parte agaynst him. Is it for mannes sake that I make this disputacyon? Whyche yf it were so, shoulde not my sprete be then sore in trouble? Marke me well, and be abashed, and laye your hande vpon your mouth For when I consyder my selfe I am afrayde, & my flesshe is smytten with feare. * Wherfore do wycked men lyue in helth and prosperyty, come to theyr olde age, and increase in ryches: Their chyldren lyue in theyr syght, and theyr generacyon before theyr eyes. Theyre houses are safe from all feare, and the rodde of God doeth not smyte them. They spende theyr dayes in welthynesse: but sodaynly they go downe to hell. They saye also vnto God, go from vs: we desyre not the knowledge of thy wayes. * Who is the Almyghtye, that we shulde serue hym? And what profyte shulde we haue to submytte our selues vnto hym? Lo, there is vtterlye no goodnesse in them, therfore I wyll not haue to do with the counsayle of the vngodly. The.xxix. Chapter.

Job complaynyth of the prosperyte of the tyme past, subtylly reprouynge hys frendes of iniury, because they sayde that Job suffred accordynge to his deserynge.

MOreouer Job proceaded and wente forthe in A hys communicacion, sayinge: O that I were as I was in ỹ monethes by past, and in the dayes when God preserued me: when his lyght shyned vpō my heade, when I wente after the same lyght and shyning euen thorowe the darkenesse. As it stoode wyth me when I was ponge: when God prospered my house: when the Almyghtye was yet wyth me: when my chyldren stode aboute me: when my wayes ranne ouer wyth butter, and when ỹ stonye rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle, when I wēt thorowe the cytye vnto the gate, and when they B set me a chayre in the strete: when the ponge mē (as sone as they sawe me) hyd them selues, and when the aged arose, & stode vp vnto me: when the Prynces lefte of theyr talkynge, and layde theyr hande to theyr mouth: when the myghty kept theyr voyce, and when theyr tonge cleued to the rooke of theyr mouth. When all they that heard me, called me happy: and when all they ỹ sawe me, spake good of me. For I delyuered ỹ poore when he cryed, and so dyd I the fatherles, and hym that had none to helpe hym. He that shuld haue bene lost, gaue me a good word and the wyddowes hart praysed me. And why? I C put vpon me ryghtuousnes, whych couered me as a garment, and equyty was my crowne. I was an eye to the blynde, and a foote to ỹ lame: I was a father vnto the poore: & when I knew not ỹ cause, I sought it out dilygently. I brake the chawes of the vnryghtuous mā, * and pluct Gen.xliii.c the spoyle out of his teth.

Therfore, I thought verely, that I should haue dyed in my nest: and that my dayes should D haue bene as many as the sandes of the see. For my roote was spred out by the water syde: and the dewe laye vpon my corne. My honoure encreased more and more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in myne hand. Vnto me men gaue eare, me they regarded: and wyth sylēce they ta-ryed for my counsayle. Yf I had spoken, they wolde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well taken amonge them. They wayted for me, as for the rayne: and gaped vpon me as the grounde doth to receyue the latter shoure When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest. And the lyght of my coũtenaũce wolde they not put out. When I agreed vnto theyr waye, I was the chefe, and sat as a kynge wyth hys armye about hym. And when they were in heuynes, I was theyr comfortour.

¶ The great despytynge of men, and curse of God that Job suffreth.

A BUt now they ỹ are yonger thẽ I, haue me in derision: yea, euen they whose fathers I wolde haue thought scorne to haue set with the dogges of my cattel. The power & strength of theyr handes myght do me no good, for the tyme is but lost amonge them. For very mysery and honger they fled in to the wylderneſſe, a darke place, horrible and wast, pluckynge vp nettels amonge the bushes and the iuniper rotes for theyr meate. And whẽ they were dryuen forth, men cryed after them, as it had bene after a theefe. Theyr dwellynge was beside foule brookes: yea in the caues and dennes of the earth. Amonge the bushes wente they about cryenge: and vnder the thornes they Thre.iii.g Psal.lxix.c and am become theyr iestynge stocke: they abhorre me, and flye farre from me, and stayne my face wyth spetle. For the Lorde hath loosed the strength of my body, and brought me lowe: The bridle haue they cast out of my syght. Vpõ my ryght hande ryse the ponge mẽ agaynst me, they haue hurt my fete treadynge vpon me, as vpon the wayes that they wold destroy. Wy pathes haue they cleane marred. It was so cause for them to do me harme, that they neded no mã to helpe them. They fell vpon me as it had bene the breakynge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. For the vehemencye of sorowe is my garment chaunged, and accordynge to the dyuersitie of heuynesse, am I gyrded wyth my coote. He hath cast me into the myre, and I am become lyke asshes and dust. Whẽ I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me, and though I stande before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou arte become myne enemye, and wyth thy violente hande thou takest parte agaynst me. Dyd not I wepe with hym ỹ was in trouble? had not my soule cõpassion vpõ the poore? Yet neuertheless, where as I loked for good, euyl happened vnto me: & where as I wayted for lyght, there came darkenesse. My bowels seeth within me, & take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Mekely and lowly came I in: yea, and wythout any displeasure: I stode vp in the congregacion, & communed with them: But nowe I am a cõpanion of dragons, & a felow of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is turned to blacke, and my bones are brent with heate: my herte is turned to sorowe and my pype to weppynge.

The.xxxii. Chapter.

Elihu after the other had synyshed theyr communicacyon reproueth them of folyshnesse. Age maketh not a man wyse: but the spyrete of God.

SO these thre men wold stryue nomore wyth Job, bycause he helde hym selfe a ryghteous man. But Elihu ẏ sonne of Barachell, the Bussyte of the kynred of Ram, was verye sore dysplesed at Job, bycause he called hym self iust before God. And wt Jobs thre frendes he was angry also because they had fouũd no resonable answer to ouercome Job. Now taried Elihu, til they had ended their cõmunicacion wt Job, for why? they were elder then he. So when Elihu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite sawe, that these thre men were not able to make Job answere: he was myscontent Elihu the sonne of Barachell the Bussyte answered hym selfe, & sayd: * Consyderynge, that I am yonge, and ye be mẽ of age: I was afrayd and durste not shewe forth my mynde. Euery man (no doubt) hath a mynde, * but it is the inspiracion of the Almyghtye that gyueth vnderstandynge. Greate men are not alwaye wyse, neyther doth euery aged man vnderstãde the thynge that is lawfull. Therfore, wyll I speake also (heare me) and I wyll shewe you also myne vnderstandynge. For whẽ I had wayted tyll ye made an ende of youre talkynge, and heard youre wysedome, what argumentes ye made in your communicacion: yea, when I had diligently pondred what ye sayd, I founde not one of you ẏ made any good argument agaynst Job, that directly coulde make answere vnto hys wordes: lest ye shulde saye: We haue fouũde out wysedome: God shall cast hym downe, and no man. ¶ The.xxxv.Chapter.

A ELihu spake moreouer, and said. Thinkest thou it ryght, that thou sayest: I am rygheous before God? For thou sayest. What aduauntage wyll it be vnto the, and what profyte shalte thou haue of my synne. Therfore wyll I gyue answere vnto the, and to thy companions wyth the: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consyder the cloudes, whych are hyer then thou.

Of suche an vngodlye personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is ryghteous as thou pretendest to be? ther is a great crye and cõplaynt made by them that are oppressed wyth violence, yea euery mã complayneth vpõ the crueltye of tyrauntes.

For suche a one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? and that gyueth vs occasion to prayse hym in ỹ nyght? Which gyueth vs more vnderstandynge then he doth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then he doth ỹ fowles of heauen.

D Yf any suche complayne, no man gyueth answere, and that bycause of the wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpõ God, doth not he heare hym? Doeth not the Almyghtye accepte hys crye? When thou speakest then, shulde not he pardoue the, yf thou open thy selfe before hym, & put thy trust in hym? The.xxii. psalme.

DEVS DEVS MEVS.

To the chaunter vpon the hynde of ỹ dawnyng, a Psalme of Dauid.

MY * God, my God: *(loke vpon me) why hast thou forsaken me: & art so farre fro my health, and frõ the wordes of my cõplaint? O my God, I crye in the daye tyme, but thou hearest not: and in the nyght season also I take no reste. And thou contynuest holye, O thou worshyp of Israel. Our fathers hoped in the, they trusted in the & thou dyddest delyuer them. They called vpõ the, ãd were helped: they put their trust in the, and were not confoũded. But as for me I am a worme & no mã: a very scorne of men and the outcast of the people. * Al they ỹ se me laugh me to scorne: they shote out their lippes & shake the heed saying: * He trusted in God that he wolde delyuer hym: let hym delyuer hym yf he wyll haue hym. ‡ But ỹ arte he that toke me out of my mothers wõbe: thou waste my hope whẽ I hãged yet vpõ my mothers breastes. I haue ben left vnto the euer syns I was borne: ỹ art my God euẽ frõ my mothers wõbe. O go not fro me, for trouble is harde at hand, & there is none to helpe me. Many oxen are come about me, fat bulles of Basan close me in on euery syde. They gape vpõ me wyth their mouthes as it were a rampyng & roring lyon. * I am poured out lyke water, & all my bones are out of ioynte: my hert also in the myddest of my bodye is euen like melting waxe. My strẽgth is dryed vp lyke a potsherde, & my tong cleueth to my gũmes: & thou shalte bryng me into the dust of death. For *(many) dogges are come about me and the counsayle of the wycked laye siege against me. They pearsed my handes & my fete, I maye tell al my bones, they stãde starynge & lokynge vpon me. * They parte my garmentes amõge thẽ, and cast lottes vpon my vesture. But be not thou farre fro me, O Lorde: thou art my succour, haste the to helpe me. Deliuer my soule from the swearde, my dearlyng from the power of the dogge. Saue me from the lyons mouth: thou haste heard me also from amonge the hornes of the vnycornes. I wyll declare thy name vnto my *brethren: in the middest of ỹ cõgregaciõ wyl I prayse the. O prayse the Lorde ye ỹ feare him: Magnify him al ye of the seed of Jacob, & feare hym al ye seed of Israel. * For he hath not despysed nor abhorred the lowe estate of ỹ poore: he hath not hid his face frõ him, but whẽ he called vnto him, he heard him.

False witnesse did ryse vp: they layed to my charge thynges that I knowe not. They rewarded me euyl for good, to the greate discomfort of my soule. Neuertheless, when they were sycke, I put on sacke clothe: and humbled my soule wyth fastynge and my prayer shall tourne into mine owne bosome. I behaued my selfe as though it had ben my frende or my brother. I went heuelye, as one that mourneth for his mother. But in myne aduersytie they reioysed, & gathered thē togyther: Yea, the verye abiectes came togither agaynst me vnawares, makynge mowes at me, and ceassed not. With the flatterers were busy mockers, which gnasheth vpon me with their teeth. Lorde, howe longe wylte thou loke vpon this? O delyuer my soule frō the calamyties whych they bringe on me, and my dearling from the lyons. So wyll I gyue the thankes in the great congregacion I wyl prayse the amonge moch people.

O let not them that are myne enemyes trymphe ouer me vngodly, neyther let thē winke with their eyes that * hate me without a cause. And why? their cōmunynge is not for peace, but they ymagyne disceitfull wordes agaynste them that are quiete in the lande. They gaped vpon me with their mouthes, and sayde: fye on the, fye on the: we dyd se it wyth oure eyes.

This thou hast sene, O Lorde: holde not thy tonge then, go not farre fro me, O Lord. Awake & stande vp to iudge my quarell, auenge thou my cause, my God, and my Lord. Judge me, O Lorde my God, accordynge to thy righteousnesse, & let them not trymphe ouer me.

Let thē not saye in their hertes, there, there, so wold we haue it: neyther let them say: we haue deuoured hym. Let them be put to confusyon and shame togyther that reioyse at my trouble: let thē be clothed wyth rebuke and dyshonoure that boost them selues against me. Let them be glad and reioyse that fauoure my ryghtous dealyng: yea, let thē saye alwaye: blessed be the Lord, whych hath pleasure in the prosperytye of hys seruaūt. DIXIT INIVSTVS.

To ỹ chaũter of Dauid the seruaunt of ỹ Lord.

A Roma.iii.c MY herte sheweth me the wyckednes of the vngodly, ỹ *there is no feare of God before hys eyes. For he flatreth him self in his owne sight, tyl his abhominable synne be foũd out. The wordes of his mouth are vnryghteous & full of dysceyte: he hath left of to behaue him self wysely & to do good. He ymagyneth myschefe vpon his bed, and hath set him selfe in no good way, neither doth he abhorre any thing that is euyl. Thy mercy O Lord, reacheth vnto the heauen, & thy faythfulnesse vnto the cloudes. Thy ryghteousnesse standeth lyke the stronge mountaynes: thy iudgemẽtes are lyke the greate depe. Thou Lorde shalte saue both man and beest. How excellẽt is thy mercye O God! & the chyldren of men shall put their trust
B vnder the shaddowe of thy wynges. They shalbe satysfied with ỹ plenteousnesse of thy house, & thou shalt gyue thẽ drynke of thy pleasures, as out of the ryuer. For with the is ỹ well of lyfe, & in thy lyght, shall we se lyght. O continue forth thy louyng kindnesse vnto them that knowe the, & thy ryghteousnesse vnto thẽ that are true of herte. O let not the foote of pryde come agaynst me: and let not the hãde of the vngodly cast me downe. There are they fallen *(al) ỹ worke wickednesse: they are cast downe and shall not be hable to stande.

NOLITE EMVLARE.

A Psalme of Dauid

A FRet not thy selfe bycause of the vngodlye: neyther be thou enuyous agaynst the euyll doers. For they shall soone be cut downe lyke the grasse, & be wythered euen as the grene herbe. But ỹ thy trust in the Lorde, and doo good: dwell in the lãd & verely thou shalt be fed. Delyte thou in the Lorde, & he shall gyue the thy hertes desyre Commit thy way vnto ỹ Lord, & put thy trust in hym, & he shall brynge it to passe. He shall make thy ryghteousnesse as cleare as the lyght, & thy iust dealynge as the none daye.

Holde the styl in ỹ Lord, and abyde pacyently vpon him: but greue not thy selfe at him whose
B waye doth prosper agaynst the man ỹ doth after euell counsayles. Leaue of from wrath, & let go displeasure: fret not thy selfe, els shalte ỹ be moued to do euyl. Wycked doers shalbe rooted out: & they that pacyently abyde the Lorde, those shall enherit the land. Yet a lytle whyle, and the vngodly shalbe clene gone: thou shalte loke after his place: & he shalbe away. But ỹ meke spirited shal possesse the earth, & shalbe refreshed in the multitude of peace. The vngodly seeketh coũsayll agaynst the iust, & gnasheth vpõ him wyth his teeth. The Lord shal laugh hym to scorne, for he hath seene, that hys daye is cõmyng. The vngodly haue drawen out ỹ sweard, & haue bẽded their bowe, to cast downe
C the poore & nedye, & to slaye such as be of righte conuersacion. Their sweard shal go thorowe their owne hert, and their bowe shalbe broken.

A small thynge that the ryghteous hath, is better then great rychesse of the vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shalbe broken, and ỹ Lord vpholdeth the ryghteous. The Lord knoweth the dayes of the godlye, and their enheritaunce shall endure for euer. They shall D not be confounded in the perilous tyme, & in the dayes of derth they shal haue ynough. As for ỹ vngodlye, they shall perysh: and the enemies of the Lord shall consume, as the fat of lãbes, yea, eũ as the smoke shall they consume awaye. The vngodly boroweth ãd payeth not againe, but the ryghteous is mercyfull and liberall. Such as be blessed of God, shall possesse ỹ lãde, & they that be cursed of him, shalbe roted out.

The Lord ordreth a good mans goynge, and maketh hys waye acceptable to hym selfe.

*Though he fall, he shall not be caste awaye, for the Lorde vpholdeth hym with his hãde. I E haue bene younge, & nowe am olde: and yet saw I neuer the ryghteous forsaken, nor hys seede Prou.xi.b beggynge theyr breade. * The ryghteous is euer mercyfull, and lendeth, and his seed is blessed. Flye from euyll, and do the thynge that is good: and dwel for euer. For the Lorde loueth the thinge that is ryght, he forsaketh not hys ỹ be godly, but they are preserued for euermore: *(The vnryghteous shalbe punysshed:) as for the seed of the vngodly, it shalbe rooted oute. The ryghteous shall enheryt the lande, and dwell therin Pro.x.d for euer. * The mouth of the ryghteous is exF ercysed in wysdome, & his tonge wyl be talking of iudgement. The lawe of hys God is in his hert, and his goynges shal not slyde. The vngodly seeth the ryghteous & seketh occasyon to slaye hym. The Lorde wyll not leaue him in hys hande, nor condempne hym when he is iudged. Hope thou in the Lorde, and kepe hys waye, & he shall promote ỹ, that thou shalte possesse the lande: when the vngodly shal perysh, ỹ shalt se it. I my selfe haue sene the vngodlye in great power, & florysshynge lyke a grene bay tree: I wente by and loo, he was gone: I *ỏ sought him, but *(hys place) coulde no where be G foũde. Kepe innocencye, and take hede vnto ỹ thynge that is ryght, for that shal brynge a mã peace at the laste. As for the transgressours they shall perysh togyther, and the ende of ỹ vngodlye is, they shalbe roted out at the last. But the saluacyon of the ryghteous commeth of the Lorde, which is also their strength in the tyme of trouble. And ỹ Lord shal stand by thẽ, & saue thẽ: he shall delyuer them from the vngodly, & shal saue thẽ, bycause they put theyr trust in hi vpon hys holy hyll. The hyll of Sion is a fayre place, & the ioy of þ whole earth vpō the northside lieth the citie of þ great kyng: God is wel knowē in her places, as a sure * refuge. For lo, the kinges *(of þ earthe) are gathered and gone by together. They maruayled, to se such thynges: they were astonyed, and sodenly cast downe. Feare came there vpō thē, and sorowe as vpon a woman in her trauayle. B Thou shalt breake the shyppes of the see, tho rowe the eastwynde. Lyke as we haue heard, so haue we sene in the cytie of þ Lord of hostes, in the cytie of oure God. God vpholdeth the same for euer. Sela. We wayte for thy louynge kyndnes (O God) in the mydest of thy temple. (O God) accordynge vnto thy name,

AVDITE HEC GENTES.

To the chaunter, a Psalme for the chyldren of Corah.

HEare thys, all ye people: ponder it wyth youre eares, all ye that dwell in the world. Hye & lowe: rych, and poore, one ẅ another. My mouthe shall speake of wysdome, & my harte shal muse of vnderstandynge. I wyll enclyne mine eare to the parable, & thewe my darke speach vnto ẏ harpe. Wherfore shulde I feare in the dayes of wyckednes: & when the wyckednesse of my Psal.lii.b Luke.xii.c heles compasseth me rounde aboute? * There be some that put theyr trust in their goddes, ād boast them selues in the multitude of theyr ryches. But no man maye delyuer hys brother, ℣ nor make agremẽt vnto God for hym. * For 1.pet.i.c & Joh.vi.a it coste more to redeme their soules, so that he must let that alone for euer. Yee, though he ‡ Eccl.ii.c and.iii.c lyue longe: & se not the graue. ‡ For he seeth, ẏ wyse men also dye, and perysh together: as wel Job.xxbiii.b Luk.xii.c as the ignorant & foolyshe, and * leaue theyr ryches for other. And yet they thynke, ẏ theyr houses shall continue for euer, & that their dwellynge places shall endure from one generacion to another, and call the landes after their owne names. Neuertheles, man wyll not abyde in honoure, seynge he maye be compared vnto the beastes that perysshe: thys is the waye of them.
This is their foolyshnes, and their posteritye prayse theyr saying: Sela. EXAVDI DEVS ORATIONEM.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

A HEare my voyce (O God) in my prayer, preserue my lyfe frō feare of ẏ enemy. Hyde me from the gatheryng together of ẏ frowarde, & frō the insurrectiō of wicked doers. Which haue whet theyr tonge lyke a sweard & shote out their arowes, euē bitter wordes. That they maye preuelye shote at hym which is perfecte: sodenly do they hit him & feare not. They corage thē selues in myshefe, & comen amōge thē selues, howe they may lay snares: & saye, ẏ no man shall se them.

B They ymagine wyckednes, & practise it that they kepe secrete amonge thē selues, euery man in the depe of his hert. But God shall sodenly shote at thē wt a swift arow, ẏ they shalbe woūded. Yee, theyr owne tonges shal make thē fal, in so moch ẏ who so seeth thē shal laughe thē to scorne. And all men ẏ se it, shal say: this hath God done, for they shall perceaue that it is hys worke. a vayne thynge & great mylerie. For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the sunne, but heuinesse, sorowe, and dysquietnesse all the dayes of hys lyfe? Insomoch, that his herte can not reste in the nyght: thys is also a vayne thynge. *Is it not better then for a man to eate & drynke, & hys soule to be mery in hys labour? Yea, I sawe that thys also was a gyft of God. Eccl.v.d

For who wyll eate or go moze lustely to hys wozke then I? And why? God gyueth to ỳ mā that is good before hym, wysdome, vnderstandynge and gladnesse: but vnto the synner he gyueth werynesse *(and superfluous care) that he maye gather, and heape together the thynge that afterwarde shalbe gyuen vnto him, whom it pleaseth God. This is nowe a vayne thynge: yea a very dysquyetnesse and vexacion of mynde. *

The.iii. Chapter.

All thynges come in their tyme, and passe away in theyr tyme.

A ECery thing hath a time: yea, al that is vnder ỳ heauē hath hys conuenient season. There is a time to be borne, & a time to dye There is a tyme to plāte, and a tyme to plucke vp the thinge ỳ is planted. A tyme to slaye, & a tyme to make hole. A tyme to breake downe, & a time to build vp. A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laughe. A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce. A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracynge. A tyme to wynne, & a tyme to lese. A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende. A tyme to cut in peces, & a tyme to sowe
B together. * A tyme to kepe sylence, & a tyme to speake: A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate. eccl.yy.a xxxi e.xxxiii a

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace. What hath a man els (that doth any thynge) but werynesse and labour? For as touchynge the trauayle and carefulnesse, whiche God hath geuen vnto men, I se that he hath geuen it them, to be exercysed in it. All this hath he ordeyned maruelously goodlye, to euery thynge hys due tyme. He hath planted ignorauncе also in the hertes of men, that they shulde not comprehende the grounde of hys wozkes which he doth from the begynnenge to the ende. So I perceyued, that in those thynges there is nothynge better for a man, then to be mery and to do well as longe as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and drynketh: yea, whatsoeuer a man enioyeth of all hys labour, that same is a gyft of God. I cōsydred also that whatsoeuer God doeth, it continueth
C for euer. And that nothynge can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that God doeth it to the intent, that mē shoulde feare hym. *The thing Eccle.iii.b that hath bene, is nowe: and the thynge that is for to come, hath ben afore tyme, for God restoreth agayne the thynge that was past. Moreouer, I sawe vnder the sunne vngodlynesse in ỳ stede of iudgement, and iniquity in stede of righteousnesse. Then thought I in my mynde: God shall seperate the ryghteous frō the vngodly, & then shalbe the tyme and iudgement of al counsayles and wozkes. I communed wyth myne owne herte also, concernyng the childzen of mē: howe God hath chosen thē, and yet letteth the appeare, as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beastes: & as ỳ one dyeth, so dyeth ỳ other: yea, they haue both one maner of breth: so that (in thys) a mā hath no preeminence aboue a beast but all are subdued vnto vanytie.

They go all vnto one place, for as they be al D of dust, so shal they all turne vnto dust agayne.

*Who knoweth the spirite of man that goth Sapi.iii.a vpward, & the breath of the beast ỳ goth downe to the earth? Wherfore I perceyue that there is nothyng better for a man, then to be ioyfull in hys laboure: for that is hys porcyon. But who wyll bryngе hym to se the thynge that shall come after hym?

The.iiii. Chapter.

The misteryes of the innocent, The superfluous labours of men. The chylde that is poore and wyse. &c.

A SO I turned me, and *consydred all the vyolente wrongе that is doone vnder the sunne: and behold, the teares of suche as were oppressed: and there was no man to confort them, or that wolde delyuer and defende thē from the violence of their oppressours. Wherfore I iudged those that are deed, to be more happye then those that be alyue: yea, hym ỳs yet vnborne to be better at ease then they bothe, because he seeth not ỳ miserable wozkes that are done vnder the sunne. Agayne, I sawe that all tra- B uayle and dylygence of labour that euerye man taketh in hande, was done of enuye against his neyghboure. Thys is also a vayne thynge, an a vexacyon of mynde. The fole foldeth hys handes together, and eateth vp his owne flesshe. Abacuc.i.a Eccl.b.b

One handefull (sayeth he) is better wyth reste, then both the handes full wyth labour & trauayle of mynde. Moreouer, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanitie vnder ỳ sunne.

There is one man, no moo but hym selfe a- C lone, hauynge neyther chylde nor brother: yet is there no ende of hys carefull trauayle: hys eyes cannot be satisfyed wyth rychesse, *(yet doth he not remembre hym selfe, and saye:) For whom do I take such trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? Thys is also a vayne and myserable thynge. Therfore two are better then one: for they maye well enioye the profyt of theyr labour. For yf one of them fall, hys companyon helpeth hym vp agayne: But woo is hym that is a lone: for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe him vp. Agayne, whē two slepe together, they are warme: but howe can a bodye be warme a lone? One maye be ouercome, but two maye make resystaunce.

A threfolde gable is not lyghtelye broken.

A poore chylde beynge wyse, is better then an olde kynge that doeteth, and cannot beware in tyme to come. D Gene.xli,b i.Re.xvi.c iii.re.xiii c ii.pa.xxxiii c iiii re.xxv a

* Some one commeth out of pryson, and is made a kynge: & another whych is borne in the kyngdome commeth vnto pouerty. And I perceyued that all men liuyng vnder the sunne, go wyth the seconde chylde, that shall stande vp in the stede of the other. As for the people that haue bene before him, and ỳ come after him they are innumerable. And they that come after ỳm shall not reioyse of him. Thys is also a vaine thynge & vexacyon of mynde. Whē thou commest into the house of God, kepe thy fote, & drawe nye, that God whyche is at hande maye heare: * that thou gyue not the offringes of fooles: for they knowe naught but to do euell.

¶The.v, Chapter.

¶An admonicion to beware of rashe communicacyon. We ought not to maruayle at the oppressyon of the poore. The couetous is not satysfyed wyth hys ryches:

A BE not hasty wyth thy mouthe, & let not thyne herte speake anye thynge rashly before God. For God is in heauē, and thou vpō earth, therfore let thy wordes be fewe. For where moch carefulnesse is, there are many dreames: & where many wordes are, there men may heare fooles. * Yf thou make a vowe vnto God be not slacke to perfourme it. As for foolysh vowes he hath no pleasure in them: Yf thou promyse any thynge, paye it: for better is it that thou make no vowe, thē that thou shuldest promyse, & not pay. Suffre not thy mouth to cause thy flesshe for to synne, neyther say thou before the Angel: that it is thy ignorannce. For then God wyl be angry at thy voyce, & destroye al the workes of thyne hādes. And why? wher as are many dreames & many wordes, there are also dyuers vanityes: but loke that thou feare God. * Yf ỳ seeste the poore to be oppressed, and wrōgfully dealt withall, so that equitye and ryghte of the lawe is wrested in the lande, maruayll not thou at such a thyng, for one great man kepeth touche wyth another, and the myghtye men are in auctorytie ouer the poore. The increase of ỳ earthe vpholdeth all thynge: yea the kyng him selfe is mayntayned by husbandrye. He ỳ loueth money wyll neuer be satysfyed wyth moneye: and whoso delyteth in ryches shall haue no profyt therof. This is also a vayne thynge. Wher as moch richesse is, there are many also that spēde thē away. And what pleasure more hath he ỳ possesseth them, sauynge that he maye loke vpō them with hys eyes? A labouryng man slepeth swetely, whether it be lytle or moch ỳ he eateth, but the aboundaunce of the rych, wyl not suffre him to slepe. Yet is there a sore plage, whych I haue sene vnder the sūne, (namely) ryches kept to the hurt of hym that hath them in possession. For oft tymes they perysh wyth hys greate myserye & trouble: and yf he haue a chyld, it getteth nothynge. * Lyke as he came naked out of hys mothers wombe, so goth he thether agayne: & caryeth nothynge away wyth hym of all hys labour. Thys is a myserable plage that he shal go away euē as he came. What helpeth it him then that he hath laboured in the wynde? All ỳ dayes of his life also he dyd eate in the darke, wō greate carefulnesse, sycknesse, & sorowe. * Therfore me thynke it a better and a fayrer thyng, a man to eate and drynke and to be refresshed of al hys labour, that he taketh vnder the sunne all the dayes of hys lyfe which God geueth him, for thys is hys porcyon. For vnto whōsoeuer God gyueth rychesse, goodes and power, he gyueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for hys porcion, and to be refreshed of hys laboure: thys is the gyfte of God. For he thinketh not moch howe longe he shall lyue, for as moche as God filleth his hert wyth gladnesse.

HEre is yet a plage vnder ỳ sūne, & it is a general thynge amōge men: whē God geueth a mā richesse, goodes & honoure so ỳ he wanteth nothinge of all that hys harte can desyre, and yet God geueth hym not leaue to enioye the same, but another man spendethe them This is a vayne thing & a miserable plage. Yf a man beget hundred chyldren, & lyue many yeres, so that his dayes are many in nombre, & yet can not enioye hys good, neyther be buryed, as for him I saye: that vntymelye byrth is better then he. For he cōmeth to naught, & spēdeth hys tyme in darckenesse, & his name is forgottē. Moreouer, he seeth not the sunne, & knoweth not of it: & yet hath he more reste then the other. Yea, though he lined two thousande yeres, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place? All the labour ỳ a mā taketh is for him selfe, & yet his desyre is neuer fylled after his mynde. For what hath the wyse more thē ỳ fole. What helpeth it ỳ pore, ỳ he knoweth, to walk vō fooles before the lyuinge? The cleare sight of the eyes is better then ỳ the soule should walke after desyres of the luste. Howbeit, this is also a vayne thing, & a disquietnesse of minde. The thynge ỳ hath bē is named already, & knowē ỳ it is euen man him selfe, neither may he go to lawe wt hym ỳ is myghtier then he. Many thynges there be ỳ encrease vanytie: & what hath a man els? A * Good name is more worth, then precyous oyntment, and ỳ day of death is better thē ỳ day of byrth. It is better to go into an house of mournyng, then into a banketynge house. For there is the ende of all men: & he that is lyuynge, taketh it to herte: grauytie is better then to laughe: for when the countenaunce is heuy, the hert is reformed. The hert of ỳ wise is in ỳ mourning house, but ỳ herte of the foolysh is in the house of myrth. * It is better to gyue care to ỳ chastenynge of a wyse man, then to heare the songe of fooles. B The wyse man hateth wronge dealyng: & abhorreth the hert that coueteth rewardes. Better is it to cõsidre ẏ ende of a thyng then the begynnyng. The pacient of spiryte is better then the hye mynded. Be not hastelye angry in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in the bosome of fooles. Saye not thou: What is the cause, that the dayes of the olde tyme were better then they ẏ be nowe: for that were no wyse questyon. Wisdome with enheritaunce is good: yet better is it wt them that wythoute care maye beholde the Sunne. For wisdõ defendeth as wel as money, & the excellente knowledge & wysdome geueth lyfe vnto him that hath it in possession. Cõsidre the worke of God, howe ẏ no man can make ẏ thynge streyght whych he maketh croked.

C Use wel the tyme of prosperitie, & remembre the tyme of myshoztune: for God maketh ẏ one by the other, so ẏ a man can fynde nothyng els. All thynges haue I consydred in ẏ tyme of my vanitye: that the iuste man perysheth for hys righteousnesse sake, & the vngodly lyueth in his wyckednesse. Therfore, * be thou nether to righteous nor ouerwyse that thou perish not, be nether to vnrighteous also nor to koolysh, leste ẏ dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take hold of this, & not to let that go out of thy hãde For he ẏ feareth God, cõmeth forth wt them al.

Wisdõ geueth more courage vnto the wyse, then ten myghty men of the cytie: * for there is not one iust vpon earth ẏ doeth good & synneth not. Take no hede vnto euery worde that is spoken, leste thou heare thy seruaunte curse the: for thyne owne hert knoweth that thou thy self also hast oft tymes spoke euell by other men. All these thinges haue I proued in wysdome: for I thought to be wyse * but she went farther from me then she was before: yea, and so depe that I myght not reach vnto her. I applyed my mynd also vnto knowledge, & to seke & searche out science, wysdom & vnderstanding: to knowe ẏ koolishnesse of the vngodly, & the errour of dotinge fooles. And I founde, that * a womã is bytterer then death, for she hath cast a snode her herte as a net that men fysche wyth: & her handes are cheynes. Whoso pleaseth God, shall escape frõ her: but the synner wyll be taken wyth her.

Beholde (sayeth the preacher) this haue I diligently searched out and proued. One thynge must be cõsydred with another, that a mã may come by knowledge: whyche as yet I seke and fynde it not. The.viii.Chapter.

The kynges commaundemente ought to be obeyed. Gladnesse is one of the chefe thynges vnder the sunne.

A Who is wyse? Who hath knowlege to make an answere? A mãs wysdõ * maketh his face to shyne: but vnshamefastnesse putteth it out of fauour. I muste kepe the kynges cõmaundement, & the oth that I haue made vnto God. Be not hasty to go out of his syght, and se thou continue in no euell thynge, for whatsoeuer it pleaseth him that doth he. Lyke as when a kyng geueth a charge, hys commaundement is myghtie: Euen so, * who maye saye vnto hym: what doest thou? * Whoso kepeth the cõmaundemente, shall fele no harme, but a wyse mans hert discerneth the tyme and iudgement. For euery thynge wyll haue opportunitye & iudgement, & thys is the thynge that maketh men ful of carefulnesse, and sorowe. And why? a mã knoweth not what is for to come: for who wyll tell him? Neither is there any man that hath power ouer the spirite, to kepe styll the spirite nor to haue any power in the tyme of deathe: is it not he also that can make an ende of the battayle: neyther maye vngodlynesse delyuer thẽ that medle wythall.

All these thynges haue I consydred, and applyed my mynde vnto euerye worke ẏ is vnder the sunne: howe one man hath lordshyp vpõ another to hys owne harme. For * I haue sene often the vngodly brought to their graues: & yet they haue returned into the cytie agayne, and came from the place of holy men, which in ẏ cytie were growen out of memory, as were those also ẏ lyued well. Thys is also a vayne thinge: because now that euell workes are not hastelye punyshed, the hert of man gyueth hym selfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though he an euell personne offende an hundred tymes, & God defer, geuynge him longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shall go wel wyth thẽ that feare God, because they haue him before their eyes. Again, as for the vngodly, it shall not be well wyth him, neyther shall he prolonge his dayes, but euen as a shadowe: so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanitye vpon earth: There be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly. Agayne, there be vngodlye, wyth whom it goeth as though they had ẏ workes of the righteous. Thys haue I called also a vayne thing. Therfore I commende gladnesse, because a mã hath no better thynge vnder the Sunne, then to eate and drynke, and to be mery: for that shal he haue of hys labour all the dayes of hys lyfe, which God geueth hym vnder the Sunne. And so I applyed my minde to learne wisdome, and to knowe the trauayl that is in the world (and that of suche a fassyon, that I suffred not myne eyes to slepe, neyther daye nor nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, but it is not possyble for a man to attayne vnto the workes ẏ are done vnder the Sunne: and though he bestowe hys labour to seke them oute, yet can he not reache vnto them: yea, though a wyse man wolde vndertake to knowe them, yet shall he not fynde them.

The.ix.Chapter.

A man wotteth not by the ryghteousnesse of hys owne workes, whether he be worthy of loue or hate. A mã ought to lyue merely wyth hys wyfe. A prayse of wysdome.

For all these thynges purposed I in A my mynde to seke oute. The ryghteous & wyse: yea, and theyr seruãtes also, are in ẏ hand of God: & ther is no man that knoweth eyther loue or hate, but all thinges are before the. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: it goth with the ryghteous as Job.ix.c wyth the vngodly: * wyth the good and cleane, as wyth the vncleane: wyth hym that offreth, as wyth him that offreth not, lyke as it goeth with the verteous, so goth it also wyth the synner. As it happeneth vnto the periured, so happeneth it also, to hym that is afrayed to be forsworne. Amonge al thinges that come to passe vnder the sunne: this is a misery that it happeneth vnto all alyke. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are full of wyckednesse, and madde foolyshnesse is in theyr hertes, as longe as they lyue, vntyll they dye.

B And why? as longe as a man lyueth, he hath an hope: for a quycke dogge (saye they) is better then a deed Lyon: for they ẏ be lyuynge, knowe that they shal dye: but they that be deed, knowe nothynge: neyther deserue they any more. For their memoriall is forgotte, so that they be neyther loued, hated nor enuyed: neyther haue they any more parte in the worlde in all that is done vnder the sunne. Go thou thy waye then, eate thy bread wyth ioye, & drynke thy wyne with a glad hert, for thy workes please God. Let thy math.vi.b garmentes be alway whyte, * and let thy heede lacke no oyntemente.

Prou.v.c * Use thy self to lyue ioyfully with thy wife whom thou louest, al ẏ dayes of thy lyfe which is but vayne, that God gyueth the vnder the sunne, all the dayes of thy vanitye: for that is thy porcion in thys lyfe, of all thy labour & trauayle that thou takest vnder ẏ Sunne. What soeuer thou takest in hande to do, that do wyth all thy power, for in the graue that thou goeste vnto, there is neyther worke, counsayle, knowledge, nor wysdome.

C So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder ẏ Sunne, & I sawe, ẏ in running it helpeth not to be swyft: in battayle it helpeth not to be stronge: to feding, it helpeth not to be wyse: to ryches, it helpeth not to be subtyll: to be had in fauour, it helpeth not to be cõynge: but that all lyeth
Luk.xxi.d. in tyme & fortune. For * a mã knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fyshe are taken wyth the angle, & as ẏ byrdes are caught with the snare. Euen so are men taken in the perylous tyme, when it commeth sodaynly vpon them.

D Thys wysdome haue I sene also vnder the sunne, & me thought it a greate thynge. There was a lytle cytie, and a fewe men wyth in it: so there came a great kynge & besyeged it, & made great bulwarkes agaynst it. And in the cytie there was found a poore mã (but he was wyse) whych wyth hys wysdome delyuered the cytie: yet was there no body that had anye respect to such a symple man. Then sayd I: wysdõ is better then strength. Neuertheles, a simple mans wysdome is despysed, and hys wordes are not heard. A wyse mans counsayl that is folowed in scylence, is farre aboue the crying of a captayne amonge fooles, * For wysdome is bet-

The .x. Chapter.

The dyfference betwyxt a fole and a wyse man. Fortunate & happy is that realme: whych hath a wyse prynce.

A Deed fly ye doeth corrupte swete oyntmẽt, & maketh it to stinck. Euen so ofte tymes he that is made for wisdome & honour, is abhorred because of a lytle foolyshnesse. A wyse mans hert is vpon the right hande, but a fooles hert vpon ẏ left. A foole wyll shewe him self when he goeth by the waye: yet thynketh he that euerye man doth as foolyshly as him selfe. Yf a prynci-
Rom.xii.b pall spyrite be geuen the to beare rule, * be not negligent then in thyne offyce: for he that can take cure of hym self, auoydeth great offences.

B An other plage is there, whyche I haue sene vnder the sunne: namely, the ignorauunce that is commenly amonge princes: in that a foole sytteth in great dignitye, & theryche are set downe beneth: I haue sene seruaũtes ryde vpõ horses. & prynces goinge vpon their fete as it were ser-

C When an yron is blunt, & the poynt not sharpened, it must be whet agayne, & that wt might: Euẽ so doth wisdõ folowe diligẽce. A babler of hys tonge is no better then a serpent that stynge-geth wythout hyssynge. The wordes out of a wyse mans mouth, are gracious: but the lippes of a foole wyl destroye him self. The beginning of his talking is foolishnesse, & the last worde of hys mouth is starke madnesse. A foole is full of wordes, & a mã can not tell what shall come to passe, who wyll then warne him of it that shall folowe after hym? The labour of the foolysh is greuous vnto thẽ, whyle they knowe not howe to go into ẏ cytie. (Woo be vnto ẏ (O ẏ lande)

The .xi. Chapter.

Lyberalitie ought to be dystrybute vnto the nedye.

A Lay thy breed vpõ wete faces, and so shalt thou fynde after many dayes. Geue parte seuen dayes, and also vpon ẏ .viii. for ẏ knowest not what misery shall come vpon earth. Whẽ the cloudes are ful, they poure out rayne vpon ẏ earth. And whẽ ẏ tree falleth (whether it be toward ẏ South or North) in what place soeuer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the wynde, ¶ Cease not thou therfoze wyth thy handes to sowe thy seede, whether it be in the mozning oz in the euenynge: foz thou knowest not whether thys oz that shall prospere, & yf they both take it is the better. The lyght is swete, & a pleasaũt thynge is it foz the eyes to loke vpon ꝑ Sunne. Yf a man lyue many peares, and be glad in thẽ all, let hym remembze the dayes of darkenesse, D whych shalbe many, and that folowyth: al thinges shalbe but vanyte. Be glad then (O thou ponge man) in thy youth, & let thy hert be merye in thy ponge dayes: folowe the wayes of thyne owne herte, and the luste of thyne eyes but be ꝑ sure, that God shall bzynge the into iudgemẽte foz all these thynges.

B I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touch her, tyl she be content her selfe. What is she thys, that commeth vp from the wyldernesse: and leaneth vpō her loue? I wake the vp amonge the appell trees, where thy mother conceaued the, where thy mother (I saye) brought the into the worlde. O set me as a seale vpon thyne hert, & as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is mighty as the death, and gelousy as the hell. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: so that many waters are not able to quēche loue, C neyther may the stremes drowne it.

Yee, yf a man wolde geue all the good of hys house for loue, he shulde coūte it nothyng. Our syster is but ponge, and hath no brestes, what shall we do for our syster, when she shall be spoken for? Yf she be a wal, we shal buylde a siluer bulwarke there vpō: yf she be an open dore, we shall fasten her wyth bordes of Cedre tree. I am a wall, & my brestes lyke towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauoure in his sight.

D Salomō hath a vyneyarde at Baal Hamon, & thys vyneyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: yeuery one for the frute therof shulde geue him a thousande peces of syluer.

My vyneyarde is in my syght: thou (O Salomon) must haue a thousande, and the kepers two hundreth wyth the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardeyns, O let me heare thy voyce, that my companyōs maye herken to the same.

O get the awaye, my loue, and be as a Roo: or a ponge herte vpon the swete smellinge mountaynes.

The boke of the Prophete Esay.

C The fyrst chapter.

C Esay prophecyeth that the anger of God shal come vpon Jerusalem, because of theyr synnes.

A THe vysion of Esay the sonne of Amos, whych he sawe vpō Juda and Jerusalem: in ỹ dayes of Vzia, & Joathan. Ahaz and Jehezikiah kynges of Juda.

Heare: O heauen, and herken o earth. For the Lord hath spoken. I haue norysshed & brought vp chyldrē, but they haue done wyckedly against me. The ore hath knowne hys owner, and the asse hys masters cryb: but Israel hathe receaued no knowB lege, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas for thys sinful naciō, a people of great iniquite: a frowarde generacyon vnnaturall chyldren. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holye one of Israel vnto anger, & are gone backwarde. Wherby shuld ye be plaged anye more? For ye are euer fallynge awaye. The whole head is sycke and the herte is heuye. From the sole of the foote vnto the head, there is no whole parte in all youre body, but all are woundes, botches, sores, & stripes which can neyther be helped, bound vp, molified, nor eased wyth anye ioyntemente.

Your lande lyeth waste, your cyties are brent C vp, your enemyes deuoure your lande, & ye must be fayne to stāde, & loke vpon it: & it is desolate, as it were wyth enemyes in a battayle. Moreouer, the daughter of Sion is lefte alone like a cotage in a vyneyard, lyke a lodge in a gardē of cucumbers, lyke a besieged cytie. And excepte the Lord of Hostes had left vs a fewe alyue: we shulde haue bene as Sodoma, & lyke vnto Gomorra. Heare the worde of the Lord: ye Lordes of Sodoma: and herken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offre ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am full of the brētoffrynges of wethers, and of the fatnesse of fed D beastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloud of bullockes, lambes, & goates. When ye appeare before me, who requyreth you to treade wythin my proches? Offre me no mo oblacyons, for it is but lost laboure. Incense is an abhominable thynge vnto me. I may not awaye with youre newe Moones, youre Sabbothes & solempne dayes. Your fastynges are also in vayne. I hate your newe holy dayes and fastynges, euen fro my very herte. They make me wery, I can not abyde them. When you hold out your hādes, I wyl turne myne eyes from you. And though ye make many prayers, yet wyl I heare nothyng at all, seynge your handes are full of bloude.

Washe you, make you cleane, put away your E euell thoughtes out of my syght, cease from doynge of euell. Learne to do rycht, applye youre selues to equyte, deliuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to hys rycht, let the wydowes complaynt come before you. Nowe go to (sayth the Lorde) let vs talke together. Though your sinnes be as red as scarlet, they shalbe as whyte as snowe. And though they were lyke purple, they shalbe as whyte as woll. Yf ye be louynge & obedyent ye shall enioye the beste thynge that groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstynate & rebellious, ye shalbe deuoured wyth the sweard: for thus ỹ Lord hath promised wyth his owne mouth

How happeneth it then ỹ the ryghteous cy- F tie (whyche was full of equytie) is become vnfaythfull as an whore? Ryghteousnesse dwelte in it, but nowe murtherers. The syluer is turned to drosse, and thy wyne myxe wyth water. Thy princes are wycked and companyons of theues. They loue gyftes altogether, and gape for rewardes. As for the fatherles, they helpe hym not to hys ryght, neyther wyll they let the wydowes causes come before them. Therfore sayth the Lord God of Hostes, the myghtie one of Israel: Ah, I must ease me of myne enemies, and auenge me of myne aduersaryes. I shal lay my hand vpon the, & burne out thy drosse from the fyneste and purest, & put out all thy tyme, and set thy iudges agayne as they were somtyme & thy Senatoures as they were from the begynnynge. B I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touch her, tyl she be content her selfe. What is she thys, that commeth vp from the wyldernesse: and leaneth vpō her loue? I wake the vp amonge the appell trees, where thy mother conceaued the, where thy mother (I saye) brought the into the worlde. O set me as a seale vpon thyne hert, & as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is mighty as the death, and gelousy as the hell. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: so that many waters are not able to quēche loue, C neyther may the stremes drowne it.

Yee, yf a man wolde geue all the good of hys house for loue, he shulde coūte it nothyng. Our syster is but ponge, and hath no brestes, what shall we do for our syster, when she shall be spoken for? Yf she be a wal, we shal buylde a siluer bulwarke there vpō: yf she be an open dore, we shall fasten her wyth bordes of Cedre tree. I am a wall, & my brestes lyke towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauoure in his sight.

D Salomō hath a vyneyarde at Baal Hamon, & thys vyneyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: yeuery one for the frute therof shulde geue him a thousande peces of syluer.

My vyneyarde is in my syght: thou (O Salomon) must haue a thousande, and the kepers two hundreth wyth the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardeyns, O let me heare thy voyce, that my companyōs maye herken to the same.

O get the awaye, my loue, and be as a Roo: or a ponge herte vpon the swete smellinge mountaynes.

C Esay prophecyeth that the anger of God shal come vpon Jerusalem, because of theyr synnes.

A THe vysion of Esay the sonne of Amos, whych he sawe vpō Juda and Jerusalem: in ỹ dayes of Vzia, & Joathan. Ahaz and Jehezikiah kynges of Juda.

Heare: O heauen, and herken o earth. For the Lord hath spoken. I haue norysshed & brought vp chyldrē, but they haue done wyckedly against me. The ore hath knowne hys owner, and the asse hys masters cryb: but Israel hathe receaued no knowB lege, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas for thys sinful naciō, a people of great iniquite: a frowarde generacyon vnnaturall chyldren. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holye one of Israel vnto anger, & are gone backwarde. Wherby shuld ye be plaged anye more? For ye are euer fallynge awaye. The whole head is sycke and the herte is heuye. From the sole of the foote vnto the head, there is no whole parte in all youre body, but all are woundes, botches, sores, & stripes which can neyther be helped, bound vp, molified, nor eased wyth anye ioyntemente.

Your lande lyeth waste, your cyties are brent C vp, your enemyes deuoure your lande, & ye must be fayne to stāde, & loke vpon it: & it is desolate, as it were wyth enemyes in a battayle. Moreouer, the daughter of Sion is lefte alone like a cotage in a vyneyard, lyke a lodge in a gardē of cucumbers, lyke a besieged cytie. And excepte the Lord of Hostes had left vs a fewe alyue: we shulde haue bene as Sodoma, & lyke vnto Gomorra. Heare the worde of the Lord: ye Lordes of Sodoma: and herken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offre ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am full of the brētoffrynges of wethers, and of the fatnesse of fed D beastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloud of bullockes, lambes, & goates. When ye appeare before me, who requyreth you to treade wythin my proches? Offre me no mo oblacyons, for it is but lost laboure. Incense is an abhominable thynge vnto me. THis is the worde ỹ was opened vnto Esay the sonne of Amoz vpon Juda & Jerusalem. It wyll be also in the laste daye, that the hyll wher the house of the Lorde is buylded, shalbe the chefe amonge hylles, and exalted aboue all lytle hilles. And all naciōs shal preache vnto hym, and the multitude of people shal go, speaking thus one to another: vp, *let vs go to the hyll of the Lord and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye shewe vs hys way, and that we may walke in hys pathes. For ỹ la we shall come out of Sion, & the worde of ỹ Lorde from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amōge the Heathen, & shall reformme the multitude of people: they shall breake theyr swearde also into mattockes, & their speares to make sythes. And one people shall not lyfte vp a weapon agaynste another, neyther shall they learne to fyghte from thence forthe.

¶ Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walke in the lyght of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they goo farre beyonde theyr fathers in Sorceres (whō they haue as the Philystines had) & in straunge childzen they thinke thē selues to haue ynough. Theyr lande is full of syluer and golde, neyther is there any ende of their treasure: Theyr lāde is also full of horses, and no ende is ther of their charettes. And it shall bryng downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumpteousnesse full lowe, & the Lorde shall onely haue the victorye in that daye. But the ydols shall vtterly be roted out. Men shal crepe into holes of stone, & into caues of the earth, for feare of the Lord, & for ỹ glorye of hys maiestye: what tyme as he shal wake hym vp to condēpne the earth. Then shall man caste awaye hys goddes of syluer, and hys goddes of golde (which he neuertheles had made to honoure them) vnto Moles & Battes. And they shall crepe into the caues and rockes & into the clyftes of harde stones, for feare of God, and for the glory of hys mayestie, when he ryseth to cōdempne the earthe. Feare not ye then anye man, whose breth is in his nostrels. For what is he of reputacyon?

And Jerusalem shalbe a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the daye tyme: a place & refuge where a man maye kepe hym from wether and rayne.

The. v. Chapter.

¶ Of Christ and hys vyneyarde, wyth an execracyon of couetousnes and dronkennes.

AOwe wyll I synge my beloued frendes a songe of my frendes, because of hys vyneyarde. My beloued frende hath a vyneyarde in a very frutefull plenteous groũde. Thys he hedged, thys he walled rounde aboute, and planted it wyth goodly grapes. In the middest of it builded he a towre, and made a wynepresse therin: And afterward whẽ he loked that it shulde bryng hym grapes: it brought forth thornes. Nowe therfore (O ye Citesens of Jerusalem & whole Juda:) Judge I praye you betwyxt me, & my vyneyarde. What more could haue ben done, for it ỹ I haue not done? Wherfore then hathe it geuen thornes: where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, nowe I shall tell you howe I wyl doo B wyth my vyneyard. I wyll take the hedge frõ it, that it maye perish, and breake downe ỹ wal, that it maye be troden vnder fote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shal neyther be dygged nor cut, but beare thornes and breares. I wyll also forbydde the cloudes that they shall not rayne vpõ it. As for the vyneyarde of the Lorde of hoostes: it is the house of Israell, and whole Juda is fayre plantynge. Of these he loked for equytie, but se there is wronge: for righteousnes, lo: it is but myserye.

Who vnto them that ioyne one house to ano C ther, and bryngeone lande so nyghe vnto another, that the poore can get no more grounde & that ye maye dwell vpõ the earth alone. These thynges are in the eares of the Lorde of hoostes: shall not many greater & more gorgyous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwell in thẽ? And ten akers of vynes shal geue but a quarte, & thyrty bushels of sede shall geue but an Epha

Wo be vnto them, that ryse vp earlye to folowe dronkennes, and to them that continue so vntyll nyghte, and tyll they be sette on fyre wt wyne. In those companyes are harpes & lutes, tabrettes & pypes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde & cõsydre not the operacion of hys handes. Therfore cõmeth D my folke also into captyuytye, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Theyr glorye is famyshed wyth hũger, and theyr pryde is marred for thyrste. Therfore gapeth Hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that their pryde, boostyng, and welth, wyth such as reioyse therin, maye descende into it.

Thus hath man a fall, and is brought lowe and the hygh loke of ỹ proud shalbe laid downe

But the Lorde of hoostes shalbe exalted in iudgemente, and God that is holye, is praysed in ryghteousnesse: Then shall the shepe eate in order, & the ryche mens landes ỹ were layd waste, shall straungers deuoure. ¶ Wo be vnto them, ỹ drawe wyckednes vnto thẽ wyth cordes of vanitye & synne, as it were with a carte rope.

Whych vse to speake on thys maner: let him E make haste nowe, and go forth wyth his worke, that we maye se it. Let the counsel of the holye one of Israel come, & drawe nye, that we maye knowe it. Wo be vnto them ỹ cal euell good, and good euell, whych made darckenesse lyght, & light darkenesse, ỹ make sowre swete, & swete sowre. Wo be vnto them that are wyse in theyr owne syghte, and thynke thẽ selues to haue vnderstandyng. Wo be vnto them that are stroge to suppe out wyne, & expert men to set vp dronkennes. These geue sentence wyth the vngodly for rewardes, but cõdempne the iust cause of the ryghteous. Therfore lyke as fyre lycketh vp the strawe and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so theyr rote shalbe as corrupciõ: and theyr blossome shall vanyshe awaye lyke dust:

dust: for they haue cast away the law of ꝑ Lord of Hostes, & blasphemed the worde of the holye maker of Israell.

F Therfore is the wrath of the Lorde kyndled also agaynst hys people, & he shaketh hys hãde at them: yee, he hath smytten, so that the hilles dyd tremble, And their karcases dyd lye in the opẽ stretes, lyke myer. And in all thys ꝑ wrath of God hath not ceassed, but hys hande is stretched out styll. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: and call vnto them in a farre countre: and beholde, they shal come hastely wt spede. There shall not be one faynte nor feble amonge them, no not a sloggish nor slepery persone. There shall not one of them put of the gyrdle from hys loynes, nor lowse the latchet of hys shoo. His arowes are sharpe, & al his bowes bent. His horse hookes are lyke flynt, & his carte wheles lyke a stormy wynde. Hys crye is as it were of a Lyon, & he roareth lyke Lyõs whelpes. They shall roare, and hantche vp the praye, and no mã shall recouer it, or gette it frõ them. In that daye they shalbe so fearce vpon them, as the see. And yf we loke vnto the lande, beholde, it shalbe al darknesse & sorowe. Yf we loke towarde heauẽ behold, it shalbe darcke.

¶The.vi.Chapter.

¶Esay sawe the glory of the Lorde, and was sent to prophecye the desolacyon of Jurye.

A IN the same yeare that kynge Oziah dyed, I sawe the Lord syttynge vpon an hyghet and gloryous seate, & hys trayne fylleng the temple: And about hym stode Seraphins, wherof euery one had syxe wynges. Wyth twayne each couered his face, with twayne hys fete, & wyth twayne dyd he flye. They cryed also ech one to another on thys maner: holy, holy, holy is the Lorde of Hostes. The whole worlde is full of his glorye. Yee, the geastes and dorechekes moued at hys crynge and the house was full of smoke. Then

B I sayd, O wo is me: For I am lost: in as moche as I am a man of vncleane lyppes, and dwel amonge people that hath vncleane lyppes also: for mine eyes haue sene ꝑ king & Lord of hostes.

Then flewe one of the Seraphyns vnto me haupnge a hote cole in hys hande, whych he had taken from the aulter wyth the tonges and touched my mouth: and sayd, lo: thys hath touched thy lyppes, and thyne vnrygh teousnesse is ta¶ ken awaye, & thy synne forgeuen. Also, I heard the voyce of the Lord saying on thys maner: Whom shall I sende, and who wyll be our messaunger? Then I sayde: here am I: sende me.

math.xiii.b mat. xiii.b Luk.viii.b act.xxviii.c Johñ.xii.c Rom.xi.b. And he sayde: go, and tell thys people: *ye shal heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: ye shall playnly se and not perceaue. Harden the hert of this people, stoppe their eares, and shut theyr eyes ꝑ they se not wyth theyr eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnderstand not wyth their hertes, & cõuerte: and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, howe longe? he answered: vntyl the cyties be vtterly wasted without inhabitours, & the houses wythout men, tyll ꝑ lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lorde shall take the men farre awaye, so ꝑ the lande shall lye waste a longe season, yet in it shall succede ten kynges, and the lande shall retourne and be layd waste. And as the Terebint tree and oke in wynter cast their leaues, and yet haue theyr sappe in them: so shall the holye sede continue in their substaunce.

¶The.vii.Chapter.

¶The Sirians moue batayle agaynst Jerusalem. A birgyne shall beare a chylde.

IT happened in the tyme of Ahaz: ꝑ A sonne of Jotham, whych was ꝑ sõne of Uziah kynge of Juda: that* Razin the kynge of Siria, and Pechah ꝑ sonne of Romelyah, kyng of Israel, wẽt vp toward Jerusalẽ to besege it, but Razin was not able to wynne it. Nowe when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) hearde worde therof, that Sirya & Ephraim were cõfederate together hys herte quaked (yee & the hertes also of hys people) lyke as when a tree in the feldes is moued wyth the wynde.

*iiii.re xvi. a ii.pa xxviii a

Then sayde God vnto Esaye: go mete Ahaz B (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at the head of ꝑ ouerpole, in the fote path by ꝑ fullers groũde, and saye vnto hym, take hede to thy selfe: and be styl, but feare not, neyther be faynte herted, for these two tailes: that is for these two smoking fyrebrandes the wrath and furyousnes of Razin the Siryan, and Romelyes sonne: because that the kynge of Sirya Ephraim, & Romelyes sonne haue wyckedly conspyred agaynst the sayinge: We wyll go vp agaynste Juda, vexe them, and bryng them vnder vs, & set a kynge ther, eeuen the sonne of Tabeel.

For thus sayth the Lord God therto: It shal not so go forth: neyther so come to passe, for the heade cytie of the Siryans is Damascus, but ꝑ heade of Damascus is Razyn. And after fyue & thre score yeare, shall Ephraim be nomore a people. And the cytie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the heade of Samaria is Romelies sonne. Yf ye beleue not, it commeth of this: that ye are vnfaythful to God. Moreouer, God spake once agayne vnto Ahaz sayinge, requyre a token of the Lorde thy God, whyther it be towarde the depth beneth or towarde the heyghte aboue. Then sayde Ahaz: I wyl requyre none, neyther wyll I tempte the Lorde.

The Lorde answered: Then here to, ye of the ¶ house of Dauid: is it not ynoughe for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye muste greue my God also? And therfore the Lord shal geue you a token: Beholde a vyrgyne shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and (thou hys mother) shalte call his name Emanuel. Butter and hony shal he eate, that he maye knowe to refuse the euell, & chose the good. For or euer the chylde come to knowledge: to eschue the euel, and chose ꝑ good, the lande (that thou so abhorreste) shalbe desolate of bothe her kynges. The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, & vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Juda) thorowe the kynge of the Assyrians. For at ꝑ same

tyme shall the Lorde whystle for the flyes that are about the water of Egypte, & for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come & shall lyght all in the desolate valeyes, in the holes of stones: vpon all thorny and bushy places.

D And the same tyme: shal the Lorde shaue the heare of the head & the fete and the beard cleane of, wyth the rasure that he shal hyer beyond the water: namely, wyth the kynge of the Assiriās. At the same tyme shal a mā lyue wyth a cowe, and two shepe. Thē because of the abundaūce of milke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one whych remayneth in the lande, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme al vyneyardes (thoughe there be a thousande vynes in one and were solde for a thousande syluer lynges) shalbe turned to brearers and thornes. Lyke as they shall come into the lande with arowes and bowes, so shall all the lande become brears and thornes. And as for all hylles that are hewen downe, there shall not come vpō thē any feare of brears & thornes. But ỹ cattel shal be dryuē thyther, & the shepe shall fede there.

¶The. viii. Chapter.

¶The deliueraunce of the lande by Emanuell. The stone of offence, at whych many shall stumble,

A MOreouer, the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take the a great leafe, & wryte in it, as men do wyth a penne, make hasty spede to robbe, & haste to the spoyle. And I called vnto me faithfull wytnesse to recorde. Uzias the preest, & Zacharias the sonne of Barachias. After ỹ wente I vnto the prophetisse, that had conceaued and borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: geue him thys name: a spedie robber: an hasty spoyler. For why, or euer the chylde shal haue knowledge to crye father, and mother: shal the riches of Damascus and the substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye by the spoyler, before the kinge of the Assirians.

B The Lorde spake also vnto me, sayinge: for so much as this people refuseth the styl renning water of Silo, and put their delyte in Razin & Romelies sonne: Beholde, the Lorde shal bring myghty and great floudes of water vpō them: namely, the kynge of the Assirians wyth al his power: Whych shall clyme vp vpō all hys floudes, and renne ouer all theyr bankes. And shall breake in vpon Juda, flowynge and encreasing in power, tyll he gette hym by the necke. He shall fyll also the wydenes of thy lāde wyth his brode wynges, O Emanuel. Breake downe (o ye people of Assur) and ye shalbe brokē downe, herken to all ye of farre countrees.

¶ Muster you, and ye shalbe brokē downe, prepare you to battell & you shalbe torne in peces: take your counsell together, yet must your coūsell come to naught, go in hāde withal, yet shal it not prosper: for God is wyth vs. For the Lorde spake thus to me in the powre of his hāde & warned me, sayinge vnto me: that I shoulde not walke in the waye of thys people.

He sayde moreouer, rounde wyth none of thē whoso euer saye, yonder people are bounde together: feare thē not, neyther be afrayde of thē, but sanctifye the Lorde of hostes, let him be your feare and dread. For he shalbe the holy place to flye to, and stone to stomble at, the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both ỹ houses of Israel, and the inhabytours of Jerusalem. And many shall stomble, fal: and be broken vpon hym: yee:, they shalbe snared and taken.

Nowe laye the wytnesses together and seale D ỹ lawe wyth my disciples. Thus wyl I wayt vpon the Lorde that hath turned hys face from the house of Jacob, and I wyll loke for hym. But lo, as for me: and the chyldren whyche the Lorde hath geuen me: we are a token and a wōder in Israel, for the Lord of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Syon.

And yf they saye vnto you: aske counsell at ỹ Sothsayers, Wytches, charmers, and coniurers, then make them thys answere. Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at hys God? * Shulde men runne vnto the deade Lu. xvi. a for the lyuynge? Yf any man wante lyghte, let hym loke vpon the lawe, and the testymonye, whether they speake not after thys meaning. Yf he do not thys, he stumbleth and suffreth hūger. And yf he ys suffre hunger he out of pacience, and blasphemeth hys kynge and hys God. Then loketh he vpwarde, and downewarde to the earth, & beholde: there is trouble & darkenes, vexacion is rounde about hym, and the cloude of erroure. And out of suche aduersytie shall he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme paste: it hathe bene well sene, that the lande of Zabulon and ỹ lande of Nephtaly (where thorowe the see way goeth ouer Jordane into the lande of Galilee) was at the fyrste in lytle trouble: but afterwarde sore vexed.

¶The. ix. Chapter.

¶He prophecyeth of Christes natiuytye and dominyon.

THe people that walke in darkenes A haue sene a great lyght. As for thē that dwel in the lande of ỹ shadow of death, vpon them hath the lyght shyned. Thou hast multiplyed the people and not increased theyr ioye. * They re- psal. cxix. e ioyse before the, euen as men make mery in haruest, and as men that haue gotten the victorye, when they deale the spoyle. For thou hast broken the yoke of the peoples burthē: the staffe of hys shoulder and the rodde of hys oppressoure, as in the dayes of Madian.

And truely euery battayll that the warriour B accomplysheth, is done wyth confused noyse, and defylynge theyr garmentes wyth bloude. But thys batayle shalbe wyth burnynge & cōsumynge of fyre. For vnto vs a childe is borne, and vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Upon hys shulder doth the kyngdome lye, & he is called wyth hys owne name wonderfull. The geuer of counsell, the myghtie God, the euerlastyng father, ỹ prince of peace, he shal make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shall syt vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kyngdome, to set vp ỹ same, and to stablysh it wyth equytie and rygh-teousnes, from hencefoorth for euermore. Thys shall the gelowsy of the Lord of Hostes bryngE to passe. The Lorde sente a worde into Jacob, the same is come into Israel. And all the people of Ephraim shall knowe, and they that dwell in Samaria, that saye wyth pryde and hye stomackes, on thys maner. The tyle worke is fallen downe, but we wyll buylde it wyth squared stones. The molbery tymber is broken, but we shal set it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles, the Lord shall prepare Razyn ꝑ enemy against them, and so ordre theyr aduersaryes, that the Siryans shall laye holde vpon them before, & the Philistines behinde, and so deuoure Israell wyth open mouthe.

After all thys is not the wrathe of the Lorde ceassed, but yet is hys hãde stretched oute styl. For the people turneth not vnto him that chastyseth them, nether doo they seke the Lorde of Hostes. Therfore hath the Lord roted out of Israel both head and tayle, braunche and twygge in one daye. By the head is vnderstande the Senatoure and honourable man, an by ꝑ tayle the prophet that preached lyes: For all they whyche enfourme the people: that they be in a ryght case, such be dysceauers. Suche as men thyncke also to be perfecte amonge these, are but castawayes.

D Therfore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in theyr yonge men, neyther fauour theyr fatherlesse and wyddowes. For they are all together ypocrytes and wycked, and all their mouthes spake folye. After all thys, is not the Lordes wrath ceassed: but yet hys hãde is stretched out styll. For vngodlynes burneth, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes. And as it were oute of a fyre in a wood: or a rede bushe, so ascendeth the smoke of theyr pryde. For by cause of the wrath of the Lorde of Hostes, is the lande full of darkenesse, & the people be consumed, as it were with fyre no man doeth spare his brother, but he robbeth on the ryght hande: and doeth kampshe, he eateth on ꝑ left hãde, & he shal not haue ynough Euerye man shall eate the fleshe of hys owne arme. Manasses shal eat Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they both shall eate Juda. After all this, is not the Lordes wrath ceassed, but yet is hys hande stretched out styll.

¶The.x.Chapter.

¶He threateneth the oppressours of the poore, and prophecyeth agaynst Sennacheryb.

A WO be vnto them that make vnrygh teous lawes, and deuyse thynges: whych be to harde for to kepe: wher thorowe the poore are oppressed on euerye syde, & the innocentes of my people robbed of iudgemente: that wyddowes maye be theyr praye, and that they maye robbe the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the vysytacion, & when destruccyon shal come from farre? To whom wyl ye runne for helpe? and to whom wyl ye geue youre honoure, that he may kepe it? that when I wythdrawe my hande, ye come not amonge the prysonners, or lye amõge the dead? After all this doth not the wrath of ꝑ Lord ceasse, but yet is his hãd stretched out stil.

B Wo be also vnto Assur, whyche is a staffe of my wrath, in whose hande is the rod of my punyshmente. I shall sende hym amonge those hypocrytish people, amonge the people that haue deserued my dyspleasure shal I sende hym, that he may vtterly robbe them, spoyle thẽ, & treade them downe, lyke the myre in the strete. Howe beit, hys meanyng is not so, neyther thynketh his hert on thys fassyon. But he ymagyneth on lye, howe he maye rote out and destroye moche people, for he sayeth: are not my prynces al kynges? Is not Calno as easye to wynne as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Hamath then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus, then Samaria? As who saye: I were hable to wynne the kyngdome of the Idolatrers and theyr goddes: but not Jerusalem, and Samaria. Shall I not do vnto Jerusalem & theyre ymages, as I did vnto Samaria & their ydols?

Wherfore the Lord sayeth: Assone as I haue C perfourmed my hole worke vpõ the hyll of Syon & Jerusalem, then wyll I vyset the noble & stout hert of the king of Assyria with his proud lokes. For he sãdeth thus in his owne concept: Thys doo I thorowe the power of myne owne hande, and thorowe my wysdome: For I am wyse: I am he that remoue the landes of ꝑ people, I robbe theyr treasures: and (lyke one of ꝑ worthyes) I dryue them from theyr hye seates. My hande hath founde oute the strength of the people, as it were a nest. And like as egges that were layed here & there, are gathered togyther. So do I gather all countryes. And there is noman that darre be so bold, as to touche a fether, that darre open hys mouth, or ones whysper.

Shall the axe boost it selfe agaynst hym that D heweth therwyth? or doth the sawe make anye braggynge agaynst hym that ruleth it? That were euen lyke, as yf the rod dyd exalte it selfe agaynste hym that beareth it: or as though the staffe shulde magnifie it selfe, as wo say: it were no wood. Therfore shal the Lord of hostes send hym amonge his fatlynges, leanesse, and burne vp his glory, as it were wt a fyre. But the lyght of Israel shalbe that fyre, and his Sanctuarye shalbe the flame, and it shall kyndle and burne vp hys thornes and bryers in one daye: yea, all the glory of hys woodes and feldes shalbe consumed wt bodye and soule: And they shalbe as an hooste of men, whose stãderd bearer fayleth. The trees also of the felde which remayne, shal be of such a nombre, that a chylde maye tell thẽ.

After that day shal the remnaunt of Israel E and such as are escaped out of ꝑ house of Jacob, seke nomore comfort at hym that smote them, but wyth faythfulnesse & trueth shal they truste vnto the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. The rẽnaunt, euen the posterytie of Jacob shal cõuerte vnto God ꝑ myghtie one. For though thy people (O Israel) be as the sande of the see, yet shal the remnaunte of them conuert in hym. Perfect is the iudgement of hym that floweth in ryghteousnesse, and therfore the Lord of hoostes shall perfectly fulfyll the thynge that he hath determyned in the myddest of the hole worlde. Therfore, thus sayth the Lord God of hostes: Thou my people

F my people, that dwellest in Syon, be not afrayed, for the kynge of the Assirians: he shall smite the wyth a rod, and shall wagge his staffe at ỹ, as the Egyptians dyd some tyme: But soone after shall my wrath and myne indygnacion be fulfylled in the destructyon of them.

Moreouer, the Lord of hostes shall prepare a scourge for hym, lyke as was the slaughter of Madian vpon the rocke of Oreb. And he shall lyft vp hys rod ouer the see, as he dyd somtyme ouer the Egyptians. Then shall hys burthē be taken from thy shoulders, and hys yoke frō thy necke: yea, the same yoke shalbe corrupt for very fatnesse. He shall come to Aiah, and goo thorowe towarde Mygron: at Michmas shall he lay vp hys harnesse, and go ouer the foorde.

Gibea shalbe theyr restyng place: Ramath shal
G be afrayed: Gibea Saule shall flye away. The voyce of the noyse of thy horses (O daughter Gallim) shalbe heard vnto Lays and to Anothoth, which also shalbe in trouble. Madmena shall trēble for feare, but the cytezins of Gabim are manly, yet shall he remayne at Nob ỹ daye. After that shall he lyft vp hys hande agaynste the mount of the daughter Syon, the hyl of Jerusalem. But se, the Lord God of hoostes shall take awaye the proude from thence wyth feare. He shall hewe downe the proude, and fell ỹ hye mynded. The bulsches also of the wood shall he roote oute wyth yron, and Libanus shall haue a myghtie fall.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth of the natiuyte of Christe, and of hys people: of the remnaunt of Israel, and of the fayth of the Heathen or Gentyles.

A ND there shal come a rod forth of ỹ kynred of Jsai, and a blossom shal florysh out of hys rote. The spirite of the Lord shall lyght vpon hym: the spyryte of wysdom and vnderstandynge, the spyryte of counsayle and strēgth, the spiryte of knowledge, and of the feare of the Lord: & shal make him feruēt in ỹ feare of God.

For he shal not geue sentence, after the thing that shalbe brought before his eyes, neyther reproue a matter at the fyrst hearyng, but wt righteousnesse shall he iudge the poore, and wyth polyticnesse shal he reproue the symple of ỹ world.

He shall smyte the worlde wyth the rodde of hys mouth, and wyth the breath of hys mouth shal he slaye the vngodly. Ryghteousnesse shalbe the gyrdle of hys loynes: truthe and faythfulnesse, the gyrdyng vp of hys reynes. The wolfe
B shall dwell wyth the lambe: and the Leoparde shall lye downe by the goate. Bullockes, lyons, and cattel shall kepe company together, so that a lytle chyld shall rule them.

The kowe & the beare shall fede together & there yōge ones shal lye together. The lyō shal eate strawe like the oxe or the kowe. The chyld whyle he sucketh shall haue a delyte to the serpentes nest, and whē he is weaned, he shall put hys hande into the cockatryce denne. No man shall do euel vnto another, no mā shall destroye another, in all the hyll of my holynesse. For the earth shalbe full of the knowledge of ỹ Lorde, euen as the see floweth ouer wyth water.

And in that day shall the Gentyles enquyre C after the roote of Jesse whych shalbe set vp for a token vnto the people, & hys dwellynge shalbe gloryous. At the same tyme shall the Lorde take in hande agayne, to conquere the rēnaunt of hys people (whych shalbe lefte alyue) from ỹ Assiryans, Egyptians, Arabyans, Moryans, Elamytes, Caldees, Aethiochyans: and from the Ilandes of the see. And he shall set vp a token amōge the Gentyles, and gather together the dispersed of Jsrael: yea, and the outecastes of Juda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim also & enemyes of Juda shalbe cleane roted out. Ephraim shal beare none euyll wyll to Juda, & Juda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shal flye vpō the shoulders of the Philistines toward ỹ west, and spoyle them together that dwell toward ỹ D East. The Idumytes and the Moabytes shall let theyr handes fall, and the Ammonites shalbe obedyent vnto them.

The Lord also shall cleaue the tonges of the Egiptyans see, and wyth a myghty wynd shal he lyfte vp hys hāde ouer Nilus, and shal smite hys seuen streames, and make men go ouer drie shod. And thus shall there be a waye for hys people that remayneth from the Assyrians, like as it happened to the Jsraelytes what tyme they departed out of the lande of Egypt.

¶ The.xii. Chapter.

¶ The songe of the church for the obteynynge of the victory and ouercommynge of the worlde.

SO that thē thou shalt say: O Lord A I wyll thanke the, for thou waste displeased at me: but refrayne thou from thy wrath, and comforte me. Beholde, God is my saluacyon in whō I wyll trust, & not be afrayed. For ỹ Lord God is my strength and my songe, he also is become my saluacyon.

Therfore with ioye shall ye drawe water out B of the welles of the sauyoure, and then shall ye saye: gyue thankes vnto the Lord, call vpō hys name, declare hys counsayles amonge the people, kepe them in remēbraunce, for hys name is excellent. Synge prayses vnto the Lord, for he hath done great thynges, as it is knowen in all the worlde. Crye out, and synge thou ỹ dwellest in Syon: for great is the holy one of Jsrael in the myddest of the.

¶ The.xiii. Chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruccyon of Babylon: the captiuytie and the commynge agayne of the people.

THys is the heuy burthen of Baby- A lon, which Esay ỹ sonne of Amos dyd se. Lyfte vp the baner vpon ỹ hye hyll, call vnto them, holde vp your hande, that the prynces may go in at the doore. I haue sent for my deputyes & my gyauntes (sayth the Lorde) whych shal execute wrath: I wyll call for such as trymphe in my glorye. There is a noyse of a multitude in the mountaynes, lyke as of a great people, a russhynge as though the kyngdomes of the nacyons came together. (And the Lord of hostes musterth munstreth hys armye to battayle.) They come out of a farre country, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lorde hym selfe wyth the mynysters of hys wrath, to destroye ꝑ hole lande. Mourne ye, for the day of the Lord is at hande and shall B come as a destroyer from the almyghty. Therfore shall all handes be letten downe & all mens hertes shal melt away, they shal stand in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shal come vpon them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman ꝑ trauayleth wyth chyld. One shalbe abasshed of an other, & theyr faces shal burne lyke the flame of fyre. Behold, the daye of the Lord shall come terrybly, and full of indignacyon, furoure, and wrath to make the lande wast, and to roote out the synners therof. For the starres and planetes of heauē shal not geue theyr lyght, the sūne shalbe darkened in the rysynge, and the moone shall not shyne wyth his lyght. And I wyll punyshe the wyckednesse of the worlde, and ꝑ synnes of the vngodly, sayth the Lord.

C The hye stomackes of the proude wyl I take awaye, and wyll laye downe the boostyng of tyrauntes. I wyll make a man dearer then fyne golde, and a man to be more worth then a golden wedge of Ophyr. Therfore I wyl shake the heauen, and the earth shal remoue out of her place: in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, and in the day of hys fearefull indygnacyon. And Babylon shalbe as an hunted or chaced doo, and as a shepe that noman taketh vp. Euery mā shall turne to hys owne people, and flye ech one into hys owne lande. Whoso is founde alone, shalbe shot thorowe. And whoso gather together shal be destroyed with the swerde.

* Theyr chyldren shalbe slayne before theyr
D eyes, theyr houses spoyled, & theyr wyues rauysshed. For lo, I shall bryng vp the Medes agaynst them, whych shall not regarde syluer, nor be desyrous of gold. Wyth bowes shal they destroye the ponge chyldren, & haue no pyty vpon women wyth chylde, & theyr faces shall not spare the chyldren. And Babylon (that glory of kyngdomes and beautye of the Caldees honoure) shalbe destroyed euen as God destroyed
Gen. xix. c. * Sodō & Gomor. It shall not endure for euer, neyther shal there be any more dwellyng there, from generacyon to generacion.

The Arabyans shall pytche no tentes there neyther shall the shepherdes make theyr foldes there any more: but fearfull wylde beastes shal lye ther, & the houses shalbe full of great owles. Estriches shall dwell there, & apes shall daunce there, wylde cattes shall crye in the palaces, and dragons shalbe in the pleasaunte houses. And as for Babylons tyme it is at hande, & her dayes shall not be prolonged.

C The .xiiii. Chapter.

C The returne of the people from captiuytie. The prosperytye of the peple of God, & aflyccyon of theyr enemyes. The pryde of Babylon.

A BUt the Lorde wyll be mercifull vnto Jacob, and wyll yet chose Israel agayne, and set them in their owne lande. Straungers shall cleaue vnto thē, & get thē to ꝑ house of Jacob

The people shall take thē and carye thē home to theyr owne lande. And make them to enherit the house of Israel in the lande of the Lord, that they may be seruauntes & handemaydens of the Lord. They shall take those pryssonners whose captyues they had ben afore and rule those that had oppressed them. When the Lord nowe shall bryng the to rest frō the trauayle, feare, & hard bondage, that thou wast ladē wythal: thē shalt thou vse thys mockage vpon the kynge of Babylon, & saye: How happeneth it that ꝑ oppressour leaueth of? Is the golden trybute come to an ende? The Lord hath broken the sceptre of ꝑ vngodly, and the rod of the lordly. Which whē he is wroth smyteth the people wyth contynuall strokes, & tyranously raygneth ouer ꝑ Heathen, whom he persecuted wythout compassyō. And therfore the whole worlde is nowe at rest, and quyetnesse: and men synge for ioye.
B

Yea, euen the fyrre trees & Cedres of Lybanus, reioyse at thy fall, saying: Nowe that thou art layed downe, there come no mo vp to hewe downe vs. Hell also beneth trembleth to mete the at thy commyng, and for thy sake hath raysed hys deed, & all myghtye men and prynces of the earth. All kynges of the earth stande vp frō their seates, ꝑ they may al answere, and speake vnto the. Arte thou become weake also as we? art thou become like vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is layed downe into the pyt, and so is the melody of thy instrumētes. Wormes be layed vnder the, & wormes be thy couerynge.
C

Howe art thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou fayre morynge chylde? howe haste ꝑ gotten a fall euen to the grounde, & arte become weaker then the people? For thou saydeste in thyne hert: I wyll clyme vp into heauē, and exalt my throne aboue, besyde the starres of God. I wyll syt also vpon the holy mouñte toward ꝑ North, I wyl clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wylbe lyke the hyghest of all. Yet thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that seke the shall narowly loke vpō the, & thynke in thē selues, saying: Is this the mā that brought all landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes afrayed? Is thys he that made the world in a maner waste, and layed the cyties to the grounde, whych let not hys pryssonners go out?

The kynges of the nacyons lye euerye one in hys owne house wyth worshyppe, and thou art cast out of the graue lyke a fylthye abhominable braunche: lyke as deed mens raymente that are shot thorowe wyth the sweard and go downe to the stones of the depe: as a deed coorse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buryed wt them. Euen because that thou haste wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. The generacyō of the wycked shalbe without honoure for euer. Let there a way be sought to destroy theyr children, that be in their fathers wyckednesse that they come not vp agayne to possesse the lande, & fyll the worlde full of enemyes.

I wyll stande vp agaynste them (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and root out the name and rēnaunte, sonne, and sonnes sonne of Babylon
(sayth

(sayth the Lorde) and wyll geue it to the Otters, & wyll make water puddles of it. And I wyll swepe them out with the besome of destruccyon, sayth the Lorde of hostes. The Lorde of hostes hath sworne an oth, saying: It shal come to passe as I haue determined, and shalbe fulfilled as I haue deuysed. So that Assyria shall I destroy in my lãde, and vpon my mountaynes wyl I treade hym vnder fote. Wherethorowe hys yoke shall come frõ them and hys burthen shalbe takẽ frõ their shulder. Thys deuise hath God taken thorowe the hole world: and thys is hys hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lord of hostes determyne a thynge: who is able to dysanull it? And yf he stretcheth forthe hys hande, who maye holde it agayne?

G The same yeare that kyng Ahas dyed, God threatened on thys maner: Reioyse not (thou whole Palestina) because the rod of hym that beateth the is broken: for oute of the serpentes rote there shal come an adder, & the frute shalbe a fyrye flyinge worme. But the fyrsteborne of the poore shalbe fed, and ỹ symple shall dwel in safetye. Thy roote also wyl I destroye wt hũgre, & it shall slay thy remnaũt. Mourne thou port, wepe thou cytie, for (O whole lande of Palestina) thou art layed waste, for there shall come from the north a smoke that not one alone may abyde in hys place. Who shall then answere the messengers of the Gentyles? For the Lorde hath stablysshed Syon, and the poore of his people that be therin, do put theyr trust in hym.

A THis is ỹ heuy burthẽ vpõ Moab At of Moab was destroied & ouerthrowẽ in ỹ night sealõ. Kyr also in Moab was destroyed, & perysshed in ỹ nyght. They wẽte vp to the ydols house euen to Dibõ to ỹ hye places to wepe for Nebo, & Moab did mourne for Medba: All their hedes were balde, and all theyr berdes shauen.

B In theyr stretes are they gyrded aboute wyth sackcloth. In all the toppes of theyr houses and stretes shalbe nothynge but mournynge & weppynge. Hesbon and Eleale shall cry, that theyr voyce shalbe herde vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab shall bleate oute, and crye for very sorowe of theyr myndes: Wo shal my herte be for Moabs sake. They shall flye vnto the cytie of Zoar which is lyke a fayre younge bullock of thre yere olde, for they shal al go vnto Luith weppynge. Euen so by the way towarde Horonaim they shall make lamentacion for their vtter destruccyõ. For the waters of Nimrim shal be dryed vp, by reason wherof the grasse is wythered, the herbes destroyed, & the grene thinges gone. For the residue that he hath done, they are lorye. As for their substaunce, the enemyes

D they haue caryed them to the brooke of ỹ wyllowes. For the crye went ouer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim & vnto Ber, Elim was ther nothyng but mournyng, because ỹ waters of Dimõ wer ful of bloud for Jỹ Lord shal sẽde more blonde vpõ Dimõ, & Lyõs vpõ ỹ rẽnaũte of the lande, & on them ỹ are escaped frõ Moab.

¶The.xvi.Chapter.

¶The destruccyon of Moab.

SEnde the Lorde of the worlde a lãbe A from the rocke that lyeth towarde ỹ deserte, vnto the hyll of the daughter Syon. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shalbe as a tremblynge byrde that is put out of haruest, for they shall carye them vnto Arnon: gather your coũsayll, come together in iudgement, couer vs wyth your shadow in the myddaye, as the nyght doeth hyde ỹ chaced, and bewraye not them that are fled, let my persecuted people dwell amonge you, Moab, be B thou theyr refuge agaynst the destroyer: for the aduersarye is brought to noughte, the robber is vndone, the tyraunt is wasted out of the lande. And in mercy shall the seate be prepared, and he shall syt vpon it in the trueth in the tabernacle of Dauid, iudgynge and sekynge iudgemente, and makynge haste vnto ryghteousnesse. We haue herd of ỹ pryde of Moab, he is very proud, presumpteous, arrogant, and ful of indignacyon and vayne are hys lyes. Therfore shall Moab make lamentacion because of the Moabites (that shalbe slayne) yea, they shal wayle all together. Because of the foundacions of ỹ cytie ỹ is made of brycke, shall ye complayne: euen ye lame people that are left onely behynde.

For the vynes of Hesbon are cut downe: As C for the vyne of Sybna, the lordes of ỹ Heathen haue broken downe her pryncipall braunches: they are come euen vnto Jazer, they wente on wandrynge vnto the wyldernesse. Her goodlye braũches were throwen downe as they wente ouer the see. Therfore wyl I mourne for Jazer, & for the vyne of Sibna. I wyll poure my teares vpon the, O Hesbon and Eleale, for ỹ crye of thyne enemyes is fallen vpõ thy sommer fruites, and vpon thy haruest. The mirth and chere is taken away out of the plentyful felde, and in the vynepardes, there shalbe no ioye nor gladnesse. The treader shall treade out no wyne D in the presses, the sõge of theyr mery chere haue I layed downe, Wherfore, my bowels shall rõble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, and myne inwarde partes, for the cyties sake that is made of brycke. And it shall come to passe, that when it is sene that Moab shalbe made werye of hys hyl chapels, he shal come to hys tẽple to praye, but he shall not be able. So then, thys is the sayinge that the Lorde hath spokẽ concernyng Moab, syns that tyme. But nowe the Lorde hath spoken, sayinge: In thre yeres, which shal be as the yeres of an hyred seruaunte, shall the glory of Moab be turned into confusyon, thorowe oute all hys multytude, whyche is verye great. And that whyche remayneth, shalbe very small and feble.

cytyes of Ader shalbe foldes for catell, whyche shall lye there, and there shalbe none to fraye thē awaye: Ephraim also shall nomore be stronge, and Damascus shall nomoare be a kyngedome, and the remnaunt of Siria shalbe as the glorye of ỹ chyldren of Israel, sayth the Lord of hostes And in that daye it shall come to passe, that Jacob shalbe made verye poore, and the fatnes of hys flesche shal waxe leane. And he shalbe as one that gathereth vp corne in herueste, euē lyke him whose harme reapeth the eares of corne.

He shalbe also lyke him that gathereth eares of corne in the valley of Raphaim. Some gathe rynge in dede shall there be lefte in it, euen as in ỹ shakynge of an olyue tree, there remayne two or thre beries in the toppe of the vttermost bow and foure or fyue in the brode fruytefull braunches thereof sayth the Lorde God of Israel.

B Then shall man turne agayne to hys maker and hys eyes shal haue respect to the holy one of Israel. As for the aulters whyche are hys owne handewoorcke, he shal not regarde them, and the thynges that hys fyngers haue made (as groues and ymages) those shall he not cast hys eye vnto. In that daye shall theyr stronge cytyes be as the forsaken shrubbes and braunches, which they left, because of the chyldren of Israell: and the lande shalbe desolate. Because thou hast forgotten God thy saluacion, & hast not bene mynd full of thy strong rock: therfore shalt thou set pleasaunt plantes, and shalt graffe the braunche of an other mannes vyne. In that daye shalt thou make thy plant to growe, and early in the morynnge shalt thou make thy seede to florysh. The harueste shalbe gone in the daye of enheritaunce and there shalbe sorow wythout hope of cōfort:

C Wo shalbe to the multytude of much people, whych shall make a sounde lyke the noyse of the see. And the vyolence of the nacions, which shal rage lyke the rushynge in of many waters: Euē lyke many waters shall ỹ people rage. God shal rebuke hym, and he shall flye farre of. He shalbe chased away lyke as drye strawe vpon the moū taynes before the wynde: and lyke a thyng that turneth before the storme at euen, beholde, ther is trouble: and or euer it be morynnge: loo, he is gone. Thys is the porcyon of them that oppresse vs, and the lot of them that robbe vs.

C A prophecye agaynst Egypt.

A O That lande that trusteth vnder the shadowe of wynges, ỹ lande whych is beyonde the waters of Ethyopia Sendynge messaungers by the see, euen vesselles of redes ouer the wader. Get you hence (ye spedye messaungers) to a nacyon that is scatered abroade, and robbed of that they hadde, a fearfull people from theyr begynnynge hytherto: a nacyō troden downe by litle and lytle, whose landes the flodes haue spoyled. All ye inhabytoures of the worlde and indwellers of the earthe, looke vp when he setteth a token in the mountaynes, and herken when he bloweth wyth the trompe. For so the Lorde sayde vnto me: as for me, I will take my rest, and loke vpon the matter in my habitacyon, lyke a fayer heate after the rayne, and lyke a cloude of dewe in the heate of harueste.

For afore the harueste when the braunche is growen, there shall come rype fruyte oute of the floure: and he shall cut downe the increase with sythes, and the braunches shall he take awaye wyth hookes, Thus shall they be lefte together vnto the foules of the mountaynes & to the beastes of the earth: for in sommer the byrdes shall remayne vpon it, & euery beast of the lande shall be vpon it in the wynter. In that tyme shal there a presente be brought vnto the Lorde of Hostes euen a people that is scatered abroade, and robbed of that they hadde, that same people whych haue bene fearfull from theyr begynnynge hytherto, a nacyon troden downe by lytle and lytle whose lande the floudes haue spoyled, to ỹ place of the name of the Lorde of Hoostes, euen to the mount Syon.

C The prophecye agaynst Egypt.

THe heuye burthen of Egypte: Beholde, the Lord rydeth vpon a swift A cloude, and shall come into Egypte and the Idols of Egypte shall tremble at the presence of hym, and the herte of Egypte shall quake in the mydd este of her. And I wyll set the Egyptcyans one agaynst another, so that one brother shal fyght agaynst another, and one neyghboure agaynste another, Cytye agaynste Cytye, and Realme agaynste Realme. The mynde also of Egypte shalbe cleane wythout councell wythin it selfe, and the deuyce that they take wyll I destroye, so ỹ they shall seke councell at Idols, and at sorcerers, at worckers wyth spretes and at sothsayers. And the Egyptcians wyll I geue ouer into the hande of a maruelous cruell lord, and a myghtye kyng shall haue dompynyon ouer them, sayth the Lord God of Hoostes: the waters of the see shal fayle and ỹ ryuer shall decrease, and be dryed vp. The waters shalbe drawen out: the ryuers of Egipt shalbe emptyed and dryed vp, the redes and flagges shabe cut downe. B

The gresse in the ryuer & by the ryuers banck and all that groweth by the ryuer shall wyther away, and be brought to naught. The fyshers also shall mourne, and all they that cast angle into the water, shal make lamentacion, and they ỹ laye forth theyr net besyde the waters shalbe roted out. Moreouer, they that worcke in flax and make fyne worckes: shalbe confounded: & so shal they that weue open worckes. For theyr open worckes shalbe euen destroyed, & al they ỹ make pondes and stues for fyshe shal come to naught.

But ye foolysche prynces of Zoan, ye wyse counsaylers of Pharao, whose wytt is turned to foolyshenes, howe say ye vnto Pharao. I am come C of wyse men, and of auncyente kynges? Where are nowe the wyse men? Let thē tell the (yf they can) what the Lord of Hoostes hath deuysed vpon Egypte.

The prynces of Zoan are become foles, ỹ prynces of Noph are dysceaued, they haue dysceaued

Egypte, euen they that were taken for the cheke kynred therof. In the myddest of it hath ẏ Lorde poured the spyrete of wyckednesse, and they haue dysceaued Egipt in euery worcke therof: euẽ as a dyoncken mã stackereth in his vompyte. Nether shall the heade or tayle, the braunch or rede be hable to do any worcke in Egipt. In that day shal Egipte be lyke vnto wemen, It shalbe afrayed and stande in feare at the moeyon of the hand of the Lorde of hoostes, whych he shaketh ouer it. And Egypt shalbe afrayed of the lande of Juda so that euery one whyche maketh meneyon of it, shalbe afrayed thereat because of the councell of the Lorde of hoostes whyche he deuysed for it.

In that daye shall fyue cytyes in the lande of Egypt speake ẏ language of Canaan, & sweare by the Lorde of hostes, the cytye of desolacyon, shalbe called one of them In that daye shal ẏ aultare of the Lorde be in the myddes of the land of Egypt, & this tytle beside it: VNTO THE LORDE And it shalbe a token and a wytnesse vnto the Lorde of hoostes in the lande of Egypte. For they shal crye vnto the Lorde, because of such as trouble them, and he shal send them a Sauyour and a greate man to delyuer them.

D And the Lorde shalbe knowen in Egypt, and the Egyptians shall knowe the Lorde in ẏ daye and do sacrifyce & oblacion: yee, they shal vowe a vowe vnto the Lorde, and perfourme it. The Lorde also shal smyte Egipte sooze, & heale them agayne: and they shalbe conuerted vnto ẏ Lorde and he shalbe intreated of them, and shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a comen waye out of Egypte into Assyrya, and Assyrya shall come into Egypt: and Egypte into Assyria: so ẏ the Egyptyans and the Assirians shal serue the Lorde together, In that daye shal the nacyon of Israel be the thyrde wyth Egypt and Assyrya, and they shalbe blessed in the myddes of ẏ lande whyche lande the Lorde of hoostes hath blessed sayinge: blessed is my people of Egypte: Assur also is the worcke of myne handes: and Israell is myne enherytaunce.

¶ Agaynst Egypte and Ethyopia.

A IN the yeare that Tharthan came vnto Asdod (when Sargon the kynge of Assiria had sent him) & had fought agaynst Asdod, and taken it. At the same tyme spake the Lorde by ẏ hand of Esaye the sonne of Amos, sayinge: Goo, and take of the sackecloth from thy loynes, and put of thy shooe from thy foote. And he dyd so, walkynge naked and barefoote.

And the Lorde sayde: lyke as my seruaũte Esay hath walked naked and barefote for a sygne and wonder thre yeares vpon Egypte. And Ethyoppa: Euen so shall ẏ kynge of Assyrya take awaye oute of Egypte and out of Ethiopia, chyldren and olde men, naked and bare fote, wt theyr loynes vncouered, to the great shame of Egypt

They shalbe brought in feare also, and asha

¶ Agaynst Babylon, Idumea, and Arabya.

THe burthen of the waste see, Euen A as the stormie wether that passeth thorowe at the none daye, to come from the wyldernes, from that horrible lande. A greuous vision was shewed vnto me: Let one dysceatefull offender come agaynste another, and one destroyer agaynste another. Up Elam, laye seege thou of Media, all theyr gronynge haue I layde downe. Therfore are my loynes fylled wyth sorowe: heupnes hath taken holde vpon me as the panges of a woman that is trauaylynge: It made me stoupe when I hearde it, and it vexed me when I sawe it. My hert panted, fearfulnes came vpon me. The nyght of voluptuousnesse, hath he turned agaynste me into feare. Whyle B they garnyshed the table, the watchman loked: And whyle he was eatynge and drynckynge (it was sayde) vp ye Captaynes take you to youre shylde. For thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me, Go, and set a watcheman, to tell what he seeth. And he saw a charet wyth two horsmen sat vpon, with the carpage of anasse, and the carpage of a camel: So he loked and toke very dylygent hede. And the Lyon cryed, Lorde, I stande waytyng al the hole day, & am appointed to kepe my watch euery nyght. And beholde, here commeth a charet of men, wyth two horsemen. And he answered & sayde: Babylon is fallen, it is fallen, and the ymages of her goddes hathe he smytten downe vnto the grounde. Thou art he whom I must thresh, and thou belõgest to my corne floze Thys that I hearde of the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell haue I shewed vnto you.

The burthẽ of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Seyr: Watcheman what haste thou espyed C by nyghte? Watchman what haste thou espyed by nyghte? The watchman sayd: The mornyng commeth, and so doth the nyght. Yf ye wyl aske any question, then aske it: returne & come agayn

The burthen concernynge Arabya: In ẏ plaisaunt grounde of Arabya shall ye tarry all nyght euen in ẏ stretes of Dedanim. The inhabytours of the lande of Thema brought for the water to him that was thyrsty, they preuented hym with theyr breade that was fled awaye. For because of sweardes are they become fugytyue, euen for the drawen sweard, and for the bente bowe and because of the grenousnes of warre. For thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me:

There is yet a yeare accordynge to the yeares of an hyred seruaunt and all the glorye of Cedar shal fayle. And the nombre of them that shal escape frome the bowes: shalbe punyshed by the myghtye chyldren of Cedar, for so the Lorde god of Israel hath spoken.

A consolacion and comforte to the people of God.

VP Syon vp, take thy strengthe vnto ỹ A put on thy honeste rayment, O Jerusalem, thou holye cytye. For from thys time forth: there shal no vncyrcumcised nor

nor vncleane persone come in the. Shake the frō the dust: aryse and stande vp, O Jerusalē: Pluk out thy necke from the bond of ꝑ captiue daughter Syon for thus sayth the Lorde, * ye are sold for naught, therfore shall ye be redemed also wout any monye. For thus sayeth the Lorde God * My people wente downe afore tyme into Egypt there to be straungers, ‡ and the kynge of ꝑ Assyrians oppressed thē without any cause. And nowe what prokyte is it to me (sayth the Lorde) that my people is frely caried awaye, & brought into heupnes by theyr rulers, * & my name euer styll blasphemed sayth the Lorde? But that my people maye knowe my name, therfore I say in that daye they shall knowe it, that I am he that do speake I saye euen I. * Howe bewtyful are the fete of the ambassadour, ꝑ bryngeth the message from the mountayne, & proclaymeth peace that bryngeth good tydynges, and preacheth helth, & sayeth vnto Syon: thy God is the kyng Thy watchemen shal lyft vp theyr voyce: wyth loud voyce shal they preach of hym for they shal * se hym present, when ꝑ Lord shal conuert Siō

B * Be glad wyth thanksgeuynge. O thou desolate Jerusalem, & reioyce together: for the Lorde hath comforted his people, he hath delyuered Jerusalem. The Lorde hathe made bare hys holye arme, & shewed it forth in the syght of all the Gētyles, * and all the endes of the earth hath sene ꝑ sauynge health of our God ‡ Awaye awaye, get you out from thence, & touch no vncleane thyng Go out from amonge suche. And be cleane that beare the vessels of the Lorde. For ye shall not escape by runnynge nor by flyinge awaye: but * ꝑ Lorde shall go before you, and the God of Israell shall gather you together.

Behold, my seruaunt shal deale wysely therfore shall he be magnyfyed, exalted, and greatly honoured. Lyke as the multytude shall wonder vpon hym, because hys face shalbe so defourmed and not as a mans face, hys * bewty lyke no mā Euen so shall the multytude of ꝑ Gentyles loke vnto hym, and kynges shal shut theyr mouthes before hym * For they that haue not bene told of hym, shall see hym, and they that heard nothyng of hym shal beholde hym.

¶ The. liii. Chapter.

¶ He prophecyeth eudently of the Passyon of our Sauyour Jesus Christ.

A BUt who hath * geuen credence vnto the thing that we haue heard? Or to whō is the arme of the Lorde knowen? For he dyd growe before the Lorde lyke as a braunch and as a rote in a drye grounde, * He hath nether bewtye nor fauoure. When we shal loke vpon hym there shalbe no fayrnes: we shall haue no lust vnto hym. * He is dyspysed & abhorred of men, he is such a man as is full of sorowe & as hath good experyence of infyrmities: We haue rekened hym so vyle, ꝑ we hyd our faces from hym: yee, he was dyspysed and therfore we regarded him not, Howbeit * he onely hath taken on hym our infirmities, & borne our paynes. Yet we dyd iudge hym, as though he were plaged and cast downe of God: and punysched * where as he (not wythstandynge) was wounded for oure offences, and smytten for our wyckednes. For the chastesment of oure peace was layde vpon hym, and wyth hys stryppes we are healed.

* As for vs, we haue goone all astraye (lyke shepe) euery one hath turned hys owne waye. But the Lorde hath heaped together vpon him ꝑ iniquitie of vs al He suffred vyolence and was euell intreated, and dyd not yet open his mouth * He shalbe led as a shepe to be slayne, yet shall he be as styll as a lambe before the shearer, and not open hys mouthe. He was had awaye frome prysō: hys cause not heard and wythout anye indgemente: Whose generacyon yet who maye nombre? he was cut of from the ground of the lyuynge: wherfore punyshemente dyd go vpon hym, for the transgressyon of my people, which in dede had deserued that punishment. * His graue was geuen hym wyth the condempned, and wyth the ryche man at hys death * Where as he dyd neuer vyolence nor vnryght, neyther hath there bene any dysceatfulnes in hys mouth.

D * Yet hath it pleased the Lorde thus to burste hym wyth plages, and to smyte hym wyth infyrmyte, that when he had made hys soule an offerynge for synne he myght se longe lastyng seed. And thys deuyce of the Lorde shall prosper in hys hande. Wyth trauell and labour of hys soule, shall he optayne frute and he shalbe satysfyed * by the knowlege of hym which is my ryghteous seruaunt: he shal iustyfye the multytude, for he shal beare awaye theyr synnes. Therfore wil I geue hym the multytude for hys parte, and he shal deuyde the spoyle wyth ꝑ strongest, because he geueth ouer hys soule to death, * And is reckened amonge the trangressours, which neuerthelesse hath taken awaye the synnes of the multytude, and made intercessyon for the mysdoers.

C The.lv. Chapter.

A consolacyon and comforte to the people. The fruyte and profet of the worde of God.

*Come to ꝑ waters al ye that be thyrsty, and ye ꝑ haue no monye. Come bye that ye maye haue to eate. Come, bye wyne and mylke wythout any monye, or mony worth, wherefore do ye laye out youre mony for ꝑ thynge ꝑ fedeth not, & spẽde your laboure about the thyng ꝑ satisfieth you not? But herken, herken rather vnto me, and ye shal eate of the best, & your soule shall haue her pleasure in plenteousnes. Enclyne youre eares, and come vnto me, take heade (I saye) and your soule shal lyue. *For I wyll make an euerlastynge couenaunt wyth you euen the sure mercyes of Dauid

B Beholde, I gaue hym for a wytnes among ꝑ folke, for a Prynce & captayne vnto the people, Lo thou shalte call an vnknowen people, & a people that had no knowlege of the shall runne vnto the: because of the Lorde thy God, & the holye one of Israell, whyche glorifyed the. Seke the Lorde whyle he maye be founde: and call vpon hi whyle he is nye. *Let ꝑ vngodly mã forsake his owne wayes, and the vnryghteous hys owne ymagynacyons, and turne agayne vnto the Lord so shall he be mercyful vnto hym, and to our god for he is verye redye to forgeue.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: my thoughtes are C not your thoughtes, and your wayes are not my wayes, but as farre as the heauens are hyer thẽ the earth, so farre do my wayes exceade youres, and my thoughtes yours. * And lyke as the rayne and snowe commeth downe from heauen, and returneth not thyther agayne but watereth the earth, maketh it fruytfull and grene, ꝑ it maye geue come vnto the sower, and breade to hym that eateth, So the worde also that commeth out of my mouth: shall not turne agayne voyde vnto me, but shall accomplyshe my wyll and prospere in the thynge wherto I sende it.

The xxxi. Chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth that the people of Israel shal be restored agayne vnto theyr prosperite. To be turned from synne is the gyfte of God. The byrth of Chryst is prophecyed. All the wycked shall dye in theyr wyckednes. The newe Testament and couenaunt is prophecyed. The Chrystyan are taughte & instructe of the Lorde. Oure synnes shalbe so remitted, that they not once bethought on God promyseth that he wyl call of the Jewes. The buyldynge agayne of Jerusalem.

Thus sayth the Lorde* the people of Israel, whyche escaped in the wyldernes

Thou shalt take thy tabrets agayn, and go forth with them that leade the daunce. Thou shalte plante vynes agayne vpon the hylles of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shall plant, and comenly eate of it.

B For the dayes shall come when the watchemen vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye, a-

Beholde, I wyll brynge them agayne from out of the north lande, and gather them from the endes of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be great with chylde, and suche as be also delyuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be great.

They shall come weppynge & with mercyfull pitye wyl I bryng them hyther agayne, I wyll leade them to the ryuers of water in a strayght

Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye Gentyles, preache in the yles, that lye farre of, and saye: he that scatered Israel, shall gather hym togyther agayne, and shall kepe hym, as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the Lorde hath redemed Jacob, and ryd hym from the hande of the violent, and they shall come, & reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plenteousnesse of goodes, whiche the Lorde shall gyue them. Namely, wheate, wyne, oyle, yonge shepe & calues. And theyr conseyence shall be as a well watred garden, for they shall no more be hungry.

C Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, yee, bothe yonge and olde folkes. For I wyll turne theyr sorowe into gladnes, and wyll comforte them from theyr sorowes: and make them ioyfull. I wyll powre plenteousnesse vpon the hertes of the preastes, & my people shal be satisfyed with my goodnes, sayth the Lorde.

But now sayth the Lord, leaue of from weppynge and crpenge, withholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded, sayth the Lord. And they shal come agayne out of the lande of theyr enemyes: Yee, euen thy posteritye shall haue consolacyon in this, sayth the Lorde, that thy childzen shall come agayne into theyr owne lande. And when it is now buylded, and set vp of thys fashyon, it shall neuer be broken nor caste downe any more.

¶ The.xxxii Chapter.

¶ Jeremy is cast into the prison, because he prophecyed that ỹ cytye shulde be takẽ of the kynges of Babylon: by the felde that Jeremye bought at the commaundement of the Lorde, is signyfyed, that the people shulde come agayne to theyr owne possessyon. The people of God are hys seruauntes and he is theyr Lorde. To feare God is Goddes gyfte, to the entent that synnes maye be forshewed.

A THese wordes spake the Lord vnto Jeremye, in the tenthe yere of Zedekiah kyng of Juda: whyche was the eyghtene yere of Nabuchodonozor, what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hoost layde syege vnto Jerusalẽ But Jeremye the Prophete laye bounde in the court of the prison, whyche was in the kyng of Judaes house: wher Zedekiah ỹ kyng of Juda cau
Jere.xxxvii.a xxxviii.b.viii.a & xxxix. sed hym to be layde, because he had prophecyed of thys maner: Thus sayth the Lorde: * Beholde, I wyll delyuer thys cytye into the handes of the kynge of Babylon, whych shall take it. As for Zedekiah the kynge of Juda, he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely he shal come into the handes of the kynge of Babylon whyche shall speake wyth hym mouthe to mouthe and one of them shall loke another in the face. And Zedekiah shalbe carryed vnto Babylon, and there shall he be, vntyll the tyme that I vysyt hym sayth the Lorde. But yf thou takest
B in hande to fyghte agaynste the Chaldees thou shalt not prospere.

And Jeremye sayde: thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me. Beholde, Hananeel, the sonne of Selum thyne vncles sonne, shall come vnto the and require the to redeme the lande that lyeth in Leuit.xxv.b Nu.xxxvi.a and.xxvi.b.i.a Ruth.iiii.a Anathoth vnto thy selfe * for by reason of kynred it is thy ryght to redeme it, and bye it oute.

And Hananeel, myne vncles sonne camme to me in the courte of the prison, accordynge to the worde of the Lorde and sayde vnto me: Bye my lande, I praye the: that lyeth in Anathoth in the countreye of Ben Jamin: for by heritage ỹ hast ryght to lose it out for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceyued that thys was the cõmaundement of the Lorde, and so I bought the lande from Hananeel of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne and waged hym there the money: euen seuen syccles, and ten syluer pence.

I caused hym also to make a wrytynge, and C to seale it: and called recorde therby, and weyed him there the money vpon the weyghtes. So I toke the euydence with the coppe when it was orderly sealed & red it ouer, and I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch the sõne of Neriah, the sõne of Maasiah in ỹ syght of Hananeel, my cosyne, and in the presence of the wytnesses, that be named in the euydence: and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them, saying. The Lorde of hostes the God of Israel cõmaundeth the, to take this sealed euydence with the coppe: and to laye it in an erthen vessell, that it may longe contynue. For the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel hath determined that houses feldes, and vynepardes shalbe possessed agayne in this lande. Now when I had delyuered the euydence vnto Baruch ỹ sonne of Nẽriah, I be-
Gene.i.a Jere.x.b sought the Lorde, saying: O Lorde God, * it is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy great power and hye arme, and there is nothing

Thou hast done great tokens and wonders D
Exo.viii.vnto the fifteen chapter. * in the lande of Egipt, as we se this daye vpon the people of Israel, & vpon those men, to make thy name great, as it is come to passe this day. Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lande of Egypt with tokens, with wonders with a myghty hand, with a stretched out arme and with greate terrybleneſſe: and hast gyuen them this lande, lyke as thou haddest promised vnto theyr fathers. Namely, that thou woldest gyue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and hony. * Now when they came therin, and Judi.ii.iii.iiii.vi.viii. Ester.v.d possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, & walked not in thy lawe, * but all that thou cõmaundest them to do, that haue they not done, & therfore come all these plages vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulwarkes made nowe agaynst the cyty to take it: and it shalbe wonne of the Chaldees that besyege it with swearde, with hunger, & death: and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shall come vpon them.

For lo, al thynges are present vnto the. Yet E (sayst thou vnto me O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shall loose a pece of lande vnto my selfe, & take wytnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the cytye is delyuered into the power of the Chaldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me saying: Behold I am the Lord God of all flesh is there any thynge then to harde for me: Therfore thus sayth the Lord: * Behold, I shall de-Jere.xxxii.b. xxxiii.b lyuer this cytie into the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor, the kynge kynge of Babylon, they shall take it.

For the Chaldees shal come and wynne this citie, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it, with the gorgyous houses, in whose parlers they haue made sacrifyce vnto Baal, and powred drynke offerynges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. For seynge the chyldren of Israell, and the chyldren of Juda haue wrought wyckednes before me euer from theyr youth vp what haue they els done but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes, sayth ỹ Lord?

Or what hath this cytye ben els but a prouokyng of my wrath, euer sence the day that they buylded it, vnto this houre wherin I cast it out of my syght, bycause of the great blasphemyes of the children of Israel and Juda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yee they, their kynges theyr prynces, theyr preastes, theyr prophetes, the men of Juda, & the cytezyns of Jerusalem.

Jere.xi.d * When I stode vpearly, and taught them & instructed them, they turned their backes to me and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be Jere.vii.d. reformed & correct, + but set theyr ydols in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hye places for Baal, in the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, to bowe theyr sonnes & doughters vnto Moloch, which I neuer cõuaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thought to make Juda synne with suche abhominacyon. And nowe therfore, thus hath the Lorde God of Israell spoken, concernynge this citie, which (as ye your selues confesse) shal be delyuered into the hande of the kynge of Babylon when it is wonne with the swearde, with Deu.xxx.a hunger, and with pestilence. * Beholde, I wyll gather them togyther from al landes, wherin I haue scatred them in my wrath in my fearfull & great displeasure, & wyl bryng them agayn vnto this place, where they shall dwell safely. And they shall be my people, & I wyll be theyr God.

Ezech.xxxvi.c * And I wyll gyue them one hert & one way, that they may feare me al the dayes of their life that they & theyr chyldren after them may prospere. Ezec.xxxvii.c * And I wyll set vp an euerlastyng couenaunt with them. Namely, that I wyll neuer cease to do them good, and that I wyll put my feare in their hartes, so that they shal not runne deu.xxxiv.b awaye from me. Jer.xxxii.c * Yee, I wyll haue a lust, and pleasure to do them good, & faythfully to plant them in this lande with my whole herte, & with all my soule. For thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people, euen so wyll I also bryng vpon them all the good that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue theyr possessions in this lande: whereof ye saye now, that it shall neuer be inhabyted of the people, nor of catell: but be delyuered into the handes of the Chaldees. Yee, lande shalbe bought for money, and euydences made therevpon, & sealed before wytnesses in the countrey of Ben Jamin, and rounde about Jerusalem, in the cyties of Juda, in ỹ cyties that are vpon the mountaynes, & in them that lye beneth: yee, and in ỹ cyties that are in ỹ south. For I wyll bryng theyr prysoners hyther agayne, sayth the Lord.

¶ The prophete is monyshed of the Lorde to praye for the delyuerance of the people, whyche the Lorde promyseth: God forgeueth synnes, and doth graciously to the people, for his owne renowne. Of the byrth of Chryste. The kyngdome of Chryste in ỹ churche shall neuer be ended, Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremye on thys maner, * when he was yet bounde in the Courte of the prysone. Thus sayeth the Lorde, whych fulfylleth the thynge that he speaketh: the Lorde whyche perfourmethe the thynge that he taketh in hande, euen he whose name is the Lord * crye vnto me and I wyll answere, and shew ỹ greate and hye thynges, whych were vnknowne vnto the. Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israell, cõcernynge the houses of this cytye and the houses of the kyng of Juda, ỹ they are brokẽ thorowe the ordynaũce & the swearde: Because the inhabyters of this cytie haue come to fyght against ỹ Chaldees, and they are fylled with the deade karkases of men whome I haue slayne in my wrathe and displeasure: when I turned my face from thys cytye, because of all her wycked nesse. Beholde sayth the Lorde, I wyll repayre and heale theyr woundes, and make them whole I wyl open them the large treasure of peace and truth. And wyll returne the captyuyte of Juda and Israell: and wyll set them vp agaynas they were afore. * From all mysdedes, wherein they haue offended agaynst me, I wyll clense them.

And all theyr blasphemyes whych they haue done agaynst me, when they regarded me not, I wyl forgeue them. And thys shal get me a name a prayse, and honour amonge all the people of ỹ earth, wyche shall heare all the good that I wyl shewe vnto them: yee, they shalbe afaryde: and astoyned at all the good dedes and benefytes ỹ I wyll do for them. Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde: * In thys place where of ye saye that it Jere.xxxiii.b shalbe a wylderneſſe, wherin nether people nor catell shall dwell: in lyke maner in the cytyes of Juda and wythoute Jerusalem (whych also shal be so voyde, that neyther people nor catell shall dwelthere shall the voyce of gladnesse be heard agayne, the voyce of the brydegrome and of the bryde, ỹ voyce of them that shall syng: * Prayse ỹe.xxxvii.a the Lorde of hoostes, for he is louynge: and hys i.Mac.iii.b mercye endureth for euer, and the voyce of them that shall offer vp giftes in the house of ỹ Lorde For I wyll restore the captyuytie of thys land, as it was afore: sayth the Lord, Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes, It shall come yet therto, that in thys lande, which is voyde from men and catell and in all the cytyes of the lande, there shalbe set vp shepeheardes cotages: in the cityes vpon the mountaynes: and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne, and in the cytyes of the south.

¶ In the lande of Ben Jamin, in the feldes of Jerusalem, and in the Cytyes of Juda shall the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hande of hym, that telleth them, sayth the Lorde: * Be- Jer.xxxiii.a holde, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lorde: that I wyll perfourme that good thynge, whyche I haue promysed vnto the house of Israell, and to the house of Juda.

In those dayes and at the same tyme, I wyll bryng forth vnto Dauid, the braunche, of rygh teousnesse, and he shall do equytie and ryghteous nesse in the lande. In those dayes shall Juda be Ma.xxxii.c helped* and Jerusalem shall dwel safe, and he ỳ shal call her, is euen God our ryghteousnes. For ii.Re.viii.e thus the Lorde promyseth * Dauid shall neuer

i.Reg.ii.g racll: * neyther shall the Preastes and Leuytes want one to offer alwaye before me burnt offerynges, to kyndle the meate offerynges, and to prepare the sacrifyces.

D And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye after thys maner. Thus sayth the Lorde:
Gen.viii.d Haue the couenaut * whych I haue made wyth daye and nyght broken, that there shulde not be day and nyght in due season: Then maye my couenaunt also be broken, whyche I made with Dauid my seruaunt, & so he not to haue a sonne
‡ i.Pet.ii.a to raygne in hys throne, ‡ so shal also the preistes Gene.xv.b. and Leuytes neuer fayle, but serue me. *— For and.xxii.c lyke as the starres of heauē may not be nombred neyther the sande of the see measured: so wyll I multyplye the sede of Dauid my seruaunte, and the Leuytes, my mynysters.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremye, sayinge: Consydereste thou no what this people speaketh? Two kynredes (say they) hath the Lorde chosen, and those same two hath he cast away. For so they haue despysed my peo ple, and they reputed them as though they were no people. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Yf I haue made no couenaunt wyth daye and nyght, and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: thē wyll I also caste awaye the sede of Jacob & Da-uid my seruaunt, so that I wyll take no prynce out of his sede, to rule the posteryte of Abraham Isaac and Jacob. But yet I wyll turne agayne theyr captyuyte, and be mercyfull vnto them.

¶ The.xxxiiii. Chapter.

¶ He threteneth that the cytye, & the kyng zedekyah also shal-be geuen into the handes of the kyng of Babylon. He rebuketh them that broughte suche of theyre brethren into captyuyte, as were pardoned to go at theyr lybertye.

A THese are the wordes wyche the Lorde Jer.xxix.a spake vnto Jeremye * what tyme as Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon & all his hostes (out of all the kingdomes that were vnder hys power) and all hys people fought agaynste Jerusalem, and all the cityes ther of. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Go, and speake to zedekiah the kyng of Ju da, and tell hym: The Lord sendeth ỳ thys word iiii.Reg. Beholde, * I wyll delyuer this cytie into ỳ hand xxv.a. of the kynge of Babylon: he shall burne it, and Jere. xxi.a thou shalt not escape his handes, but shalt be led and.xxiv.a awaye prysoner, and delyuered into hys power.
Thou shalt loke the kyng of Babylon in the face and he shall speake wyth the mouth to mouth: & then shalt thou goo to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O zedekiah, ỳ kynge of Juda: Thus sayth the Lorde vnto the. Thou shalt not be slayne wyth the swearde, but shalt dye in i.re.xxxi.f. peace. * Lyke as thy forefathers the kinges, thy progenytours were brent: so shalt thou be brent also, & in thy mournyng they shall say: Oh Lord
For thus haue I determined, sayth the Lorde.

Then sayd Jeremye the prophete all these B wordes vnto zedekiah kyng of Juda in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kyng of Babylons hoost besieged Jerusalē, & the remnaunt of the cytics: Namely, Lachis and Azekah, which yet remay ned of the * stronge fensed cyties of Juda. ii.Par.xi.s

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophete, when zedekiah was agreed with all ỳ people at Jerusalē, that there shulde be proclaymed * a libertie, so that euery Exod.xxi.a man shulde let his seruaunt & handmayde go Leui.xxv.f
fre: Hebrue, and Hebruesse, and no Jewe holde Deu.xv.d his brother as a bondman. Nowe as they had consented, all the princes, & all the people which had gathered vnto this agrement, ỳ euery man shulde set at libertye his bonde seruaunt, & bond woman, & no longer to holde them bonde, euen so they were obedyent, and let them go fre. But afterwarde they repented and toke agayne the seruauntes and handmaydens, whom they had let go fre, and so made them bonde agayne.

For the whiche cause the worde of the Lorde C came vnto Jeremye from the Lorde hym selfe, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel.
* I made a couenaunt with your fathers, when Deu.xv.a
I brought them out of Egipt, (that they shulde Exo.xxi.a nomore be bondmen) saying: When seuē yeres are out, euery man shal let his bought seruaunt an Hebrue go fre, yf he haue serued hym syxe yeres. But your fathers obeyed me not, and herke ned not vnto me. As for you, ye were nowe turned, and dyd ryght before me in that ye proclay-med, euery man to let his neyghbour go fre, and in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in ỳ tem ple that beareth my name. But yet ye haue tur ned your selues agayne, & blasphemed my name
In this, ỳ euery man hath requyred his seruaūt and handmayden agayne, whom ye haue let go quyte and fre, and compelled them to serue you agayne, & to be your bondmen, and bondwomen And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclayme fredom vn to his brother and neyghbour: wherfore I wyll call you vnto a fredome, sayth the Lorde: euen vnto the swearde, to the pestilence & to hunger, and wyll make you to be plaged in al the kyng-domes of ỳ earth. Yee, those men that haue broken my couenaunt, & not kept the wordes of the appoyntmēt which they made before me, when * they hewed ỳ calfe in two, & when there went Gen.xv.d
thorow the two halues therof: the princes of Ju da, the prynces of Jerusalē, the gelded men, the preastes, and all the people of the lande, whiche went thorowe the two sydes of the calfe Those men wyll I gyue into the power of their enemyes, and into the handes of them that fo-lowe vpon theyr lyues.

* And theyr dead bodyes shalbe meate for psal.lxxix.a the foules of the ayre, and beastes of ỳ felde. As Jerre.vii.d for zedekiah the kyng of Juda and his princes,
I wyll delyuer them into ỳ power of theyr ene-myes, and of them that desyre to slay them, and into ỳ hande of ỳ kyng of Babilons hoost, which
* now is departed from you: But thorowe my Jer.xxxvii.c
cōmaun

commaunoement (sayth the Lorde) they shall come agayne before this cytye, they shall fyght agaynst it: wynne it, and burne it: Moreouer, I wyll laye the cytyes of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

¶ The.xxxv. Chapter.

¶ He propoundeth the obedyence of the Rechabites, & therby confoundeth the pryde of the Jues. The cõmaundement of Jonadab, the father of the Rechabites. He threatenyth punyshment vnto the rebellyous Jewes. He promyseth prosperytye vnto the Rechabites, for theyr obedyence.

A THe wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye, in the raygne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda are these: Go vnto the house of the
*1.kill,xe.r.c. *Rechabites, & call them out, and bryng them to the house of the Lorde into some commodyous place, & gyue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Jazaniah, the sonne of Jeremy the sonne of Habaztniah, & his brethren, & all his sonnes, and the whole household of the Rechabytes: and brought them into the house of the Lorde, into the closet of ỹ chyldren of Hanan, the sonne of Jegedal[illegible]h the man of God, whiche was by the closet of the prynces, that is aboue the closet of Maaslah the sonne of Selum, whiche is
B the treasurer. And before the sonnes of the kynred of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne and cuppes, and sayd vnto them: Drynke wyne. But they sayd: we wyl drynke no wyne: for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father cõmaunded vs, saying: Yee and your sonnes shall neuer Jere.xxxv.b drynke wyne, * buylde no houses, sowe no sede: plant no vynes, yee: ye shall haue no vynyardes but for all your tyme, ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye may lyue long in the lande wherin ye be straungers. Thus haue we obeyed the cõmaundement of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father, in all ỹ he hath charged vs, & so we drynke no wyne all our lyfe longe: we nor our wyues our sonnes & our doughters. Neither buylde we any house to dwell therin, we haue also amonge vs neyther vynyardes, nor corne lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obey, & do accordyng vnto all ỹ Jonadab our father cõmaunded vs.

But now that Nabuchodonosor the kynge
¶ of Babylon came vp into the lande, we sayde: come, let vs go to Jerusalẽ, that we may escape the hoost of the Chaldees and the Assirians, and so we dwell now at Jerusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell the men of Juda and the inhabitours of Jerusalẽ: Wyll ye not be reformed to obey my wordes, sayth ỹ Lorde? The wordes whiche Jonadab the sonne of Rechab cõmaunded his sonnes, that they shuld drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kepte: for vnto this day they drynke no wyne, but obey theyr fathers commaundement. But as for me * I haue stande vp Je.xviii.a. and.xxb.a. early, I haue spoken vnto you, & gyuẽ you earnest warnynge: and yet haue ye not ben obedyent vnto me. Yee, I haue sent my seruauntes all ỹ prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, & sent you word, saying: O turne you now euery man from his wycked waye: amende your lyues, and go not after straunge goddes to worshyp them: that ye may contynue in the lande wyche I haue geuen vnto you and youre fathers, but ye wolde neyther heare me, nor folowe me.

The chyldren of Jonadab Rechabs sonne, D haue stedfastly kepte theyre fathers commaundement, that he gaue them, but thys people is not obedyent vnto me. And therfore thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: Beholde, I wyll bryng vpon Juda, and vpon euerye one that dwelleth in Jerusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuysed agaynst them. * For I haue spo- Prouer.c e Esay.lxv.d Jere.b;.b ken vnto them, but they wholde not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuertheles, they wolde geue me no answere: Jeremye spake also to the householde of the Rechabythes: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell. For so much as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Jonadab your father, and kepte all his preceptes, and done accordynge vnto all ỹ he hath bydden you. Therfore thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: * Jonadab the sonne of Rechab shall Je.xxxiii.c not fayle, but haue one out of hys stock, to stand alwaye before me.

¶ The.xxxvi. Chapter.

¶ Baruch wryteth, as Jeremy endyteth the boke of the curses agaynst Juda & Israell. He is sent wyth the boke vnto the people and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers and readeth it before them also. The rulers shew vnto the kyng the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the boke and readeth a lytle of it, and casteth it in the fyre. Ther is another wryte at the commaundement of the Lorde.

IN ỹ fourth yere of Jehoakim ỹ sonne A of Josiah the kyng of Juda, came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremy, sayinge. * Take a boke, and wryte ther Jere.xxx.a in all the wordes that I haue spokẽ to ỹ agaynst Israell, agaynst Juda, and agaynste all the people, from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josyah) vnto thys daye. That when the house of Juda heareth of the plage, whych I haue deuysed for them they maye paraduenture * turne euery man from hys Jer.xxvi.a wycked waye: that I maye forgeue theyr offences and synnes. Then dyd Jeremye cal Baruch the sonne of Neryah * and Baruch wryte in the Jere.xlv.a boke at the mouth of Jeremye all the wordes of the Lorde, wyche he had spoken vnto hym.

And Jeremye cõmaunded Baruch saying: I am in pryson, so that I maye not come into the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyther and reade the boke that ỹ hast written at my mouth Namely, the wordes of the Lorde and reade thẽ in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng day, ỹ the B people, whole Juda, and all they that come oute of the cytyes may heare. Peraduẽture, they wyll pray mykely before the face of the Lorde, & turne euery one from hys wycked waye. For great is the wrath and displeasure, that the Lorde hath taken agaynst thys people. So Baruch ỹ sonne of Neriah dyd accordynge vnto all that Jeremy the prophet cõmaunded him, readyng ỹ wordes of ỹ Lord out of ỹ boke in ỹ Lordes house. And this was done in ỹ fyft yere of Jehoakim ỹ sõne of Josiah kyng of Juda, in the .ix. moneth, when * it was cõmaunded, that all the people of Jeru Josue.xiv.a salem shulde faste before the Lorde & they also ỹ were come from ỹ cities of Juda vnto Jerusalẽ.

¶ Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremye oute of the booke wythin the house of the Lord:
oute of the tresury of Gamariah ẏ sonne of Sa phan the scrybe, whyche is belyde the hyer lofte Jer.xxvi.a of the * newe dore of the Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Now when Micheah ẏ sonne of Gamariah, the sonne of Saphan hade harde all the wordes of the Lord oute of ẏ boke he wente downe to the kynges palace into the Scrybes chambers, for ther all the princes were set. Elisama the Scrybe, Dalaiah the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, Gama-riah the sonne of Saphan, zedekiah the sonne of Hananiah, wyth all the prynces. And Micheah tolde them all the wordes ẏ he harde Baruch reade oute of the boke before the people.

Ꝑ Then all the prynces sent Jehudi the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thyne hande the boke, where oute thou haste red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah, toke the boke in hys hande, and came vnto them. And they sayde vnto hym: Sytte downe and reade the boke, that we maye heare also. So Baruch red that they myght heare.
Nowe when they had harde al the wordes, they were abasshed one vpon another, and sayde vnto Baruch: We wyll certyfye the kynge of all these wordes. And they exampned Baruch, sayinge: tell vs howe dyddeste thou wrytte all these wordes out of hys mouth. Then Baruch answe red them: He spake all these wordes vnto me w̄ hys mouth, and I wrote them in the boke.

Then sayde the prynces vnto Baruch: Go
E thy waye, hyde the with Jeremy, so that no man knowe where ye be: And they went into ẏ kyng to the courte. But they kepte the booke in the chambre of Elizama the Scrybe, and tolde the kyng all the wordes that he myght heare. So ẏ kyng sent Jehudi to fet hym the boke whyche he brought out of Elisama the scrybes chambre.
And Jehudi red in it that the kynge and all the princes whyche were about hym myght heare.
Nowe the kynge sat in the wynter house, for it was in the .ix. moneth, and ther was a fyre before hym. And when Jehudi had red thre or foure lea ues therof, he cut the boke in peces w̄ a penknyfe
1.Mac.xvi.e and *caste it into the fyre vpon the harth vntyll ẏ boke was all brent in the fyre vpon the harth.

Ꝑ Yet no man was abasshed therof, or rente hys clothes: neyther the kynge hym selfe, nor his seruauntes, thoughe they harde all these wor-des. Neuertheles, Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Gamariah besoughte the kynge that he wolde not burne the boke: not withstandyng the kynge wold not heare thē. but cōmaunded Jerahmael the sonne of Amelech: Saraiah the sonne of Ezrell, and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the scribe, & vpon Jeremy the prophet: but ẏ Lorde kept them out of syght
After nowe that the kynge had brent the booke and ẏ sermons which Baruch wrote at ẏ mouth of Jeremy. The worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Take an other booke and wrytte in it all the fore sayde sermons, that were wrytten in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoakym the kynge of Juda hath brente.

And tell Jehoakim the kynge of Juda: thus G sayth the Lorde: thou hast brent the booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast ẏ wrytten therin, that ẏ kynge of Babylon shall come and make this lande waste: so ẏ he shall make bothe people and catell to be out of it. Therfore thus the Lorde sayth of Jehoakim the kyng of Juda. *There shall none of his generacyon syt iiii.Regum vpon ẏ throne of Dauid. His dead corse shalbe xxiiii.c.
cast out, that the heate of the daye, & the frost of Jere. xxii.e
the nyght may come vpon hym. And I wyl vi-syte the wyckednes of hym, of his sede, & of his seruauntes. Moreouer, all the euyl that I haue promysed them (though they harde me not) wyl I bryng vpon them, vpon the inhabitours of Jerusalem, & vpon all Juda. Then toke Jeremy another boke, & gaue it Baruch ẏ Scrybe the sonne of Neriah, which wrote therin out of the mouth of Jeremy, all the sermons that were in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoakim the kynge of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons then before.

¶ The.xxxvii. Chapter.

¶ zedekiah succeded Cononia. He sendeth vnto Jeremye to praye for hym. Jeremy goynge into the lande of Ben Ja-myn is taken. He is beaten and put in pryson. He is delyue-red by kynge zedekiah.

Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah * whiche A nosor kyng of Babylon, raygned in the xxiiii.d.

lande of Juda, in the steade of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoakim. But neyther he nor his seruauntes, nor the people in the lande wolde obey the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he spake by the prophete Jeremy. *Neuertheles, Jer.xxxi.a zedekiah ẏ king sent Jehucal the sonne of Sele- xxxii.a.
miah, & Sophoniah ẏ sōne of Maasiah ẏ preest to the prophete Jeremy, saying: O praye thou vnto the Lorde our God for vs. Now Jeremye walked fre amonge the people at that tyme, and was not put in pryson as yet. *Pharaos hoost Ezr.xxii.b also was come out of Egypt: whiche when the Chaldees that besyeged Jerusalem perceyued, they departed from thence. Then came ẏ worde B of the Lorde vnto the prophet Jeremy, saying:
Thus sayth ẏ Lord God of Israel, this answer shall ye gyue to the kyng of Juda that sent you vnto me for cōsayle. *Behold, Pharaos hoste Jere.xlvi.a whiche is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egipt into his owne lande: but the Chaldees shall come agayn and fyght agaynst this cytie, wynne it, & set fyre vpon it. For thus sayth the Lorde: disceyue not your owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner: Tush, ẏ Chaldees go now theyr waye frō vs. No, they shall not go theyr waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hoste of the Chaldees that besyege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tent, yet shulde they stande vp and set fyre vpon this cytye.

Nowe when the hoste of the Chaldees was C broken vp from Jerusalem, for feare of ẏ Egipcians armye: Jeremye went out of Jerusalem, towarde the lande of Ben Jamin, to gette hym from amonge the people.

And

And when he came vnder Ben Jamyns porte there was a porter, called Jeryah, the sonne of Selemyah the sonne of *Hananiah, whych fell Je.xxxviii.b vpon hym, and toke hym, sayinge thy mynde is to runne to the Chaldees. Then sayde Jeremy It is not so, I go not to the Chaldees. Neuerthe les, Jeryah wolde not beleue hym: but brought Jermy bound before the prynces. Wherfore the prynces wer angry wyth Jeremy, & smote hym and layde hym in prison in the house of Jona= thas the scrybe. For he was the ruler of the pry= son. Thus was Jeremye put into the dongeon &
Je.xxxviii.b prison, and so laye there a longe tyme. ‡ Than Sedekyah the kynge sent for hym, and called him and asked hym quyetly in hys owne house, say= inge thynckest thou thys busynes (that nowe is in hande) commeth of the Lord? Jeremy answe red, yee, that it doth: and thou (sayde he) shalt be delyuered into the kynge of Babylons power.

D Moreouer, Jeremye sayde vnto kynge Sede kyah: What haue I offended against the, against thy seruauntes, or agaynst thys people, that ye Je.xxxviii haue put me in prison? *Where ar your prophe tes which haue prophecyed vnto you, and sayd: that the kynge of Babylon shulde not comme a gaynst you and thys lande? And therfore heare nowe O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and send me no more into the house of Jonathas the scrybe, ϸ I dye not there, Then Sedekyah the kynge commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entrye of the prison, and day ly to be geuen hym a kake of breade oute of the bakers streate vntyll all the breade in the cytye war eaten vp. Thus Jeremye remayned in the fore entrye in the prison.

The.xxxviii.Chapter.

¶ By the mocyon of ϸ rulers Jeremy is put into a dongeon. At the requyst of Abemelech the chamberlayne: the kynge comma= undeth Jeremy to be brought forth of the dongeon. Jeremye sheweth the kynge howe he myght escape death.

A Saphatyah the sonne of Mathan, Godo liah the sonne of Phashur, Jucal ϸ sone of Semelyah, and Pashur the sonne of Melchyah perceaued the wordes, that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people: namelye on thys maner, Thus sayeth the Lorde, *Who Jere. xxi.b & xxxviii.a. so remaynyth in thys cytye, shall perysshe, eyther wyth the swearde, wyth hunger or wyth pesty= lence: But who so falleth vnto ϸ Chaldees, shal escape, wynnyng hys soule for a praye, and shal
Jere.xxxii.a lyue, *For thus sayth the Lord: Thys cytye (no doubte) must be delyuered into the power of the kynge of Babylon, and he shall wynne it. Then sayde the prynces vnto the kynge: Syr we bese= che you let thys man be put to death, For thus he discouragyth the handes of the soudyers that be in thys cytye, and the handes of all the people whē he speaketh such wordes vnto them. This man verely laboureth not for peace of the people but myschefe, Sedekyas the kynge answered &
B sayde: loo, he is in youre handes, for the kynge maye denye you nothynge. Then toke they Jere mye, and cast hym into the dongion of Melchiah the sonne of Amelech that dwelte in ϸ fore entry of the prison: And they let downe Jeremy wyth coardes into the dongyon, where there was no water but myre. So Jeremye stacke fast in the myre. Nowe when Abemelech ϸ Moryan, being a chamberlayne in the kynges courte, vnderstod that they had cast Jeremye into the dongyon, he wente oute of the kynges house and spake to the kynge, (whych then sat vnder the porte of Ben= Jamyn) these wordes: my Lord the kyng, wher as these men medle wyth Jeremy the prophete, C they do hym wronge, Namely in that they haue put him in prison, ther to dye of hunger, for ther is no more breade in the cytye. Then the kynge commaunded Abemelech the Moryan and sayd Take from hence .xxx. men whom thou wylte, & drawe vp Jeremy the prophet out of the donge on before he dye, So Abemelech tooke the men wyth hym, and went to the house of the kynge: and there vnder the treasury he gat olde ragges and worne cloutes, and let them down by a coar de into the dongeon to Jeremye.

And Abemeleche the Moryan sayde vnto the prophte Jeremye: O put these ragges and D cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwyxte them and the coardes: and Jeremye dyd so, So they drewe vp Jeremy with coardes, and toke hym out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entrye of the prison. Then *Sedekiah the kyng Je.xxxvii.c sent, and caused Jeremye the prophet to be cal= led vnto hym, into the thyrde entrye that is in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayd vn= to Jeremy: I wyll aske the somwhat, but hyde nothyng fro me. Then Jeremy answered Sede= kiah: Yf I be playne vnto the, thou wylte cause me to suffre death: Yf I gyue the counsayl, thou wylte not folowe me. So the kynge sware an oth secretly vnto Jeremy, sayinge: As trulye as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wyll not slaye the, nor gyue the into the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto Sedekiah: Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel. E
*Yf case be, that thou wylte go forth vnto the Je.xxxviii kyng of Babylons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this cytie shall not be brent: yea, bothe thou and thy housholde shall escape wyth youre lyues. But if thou wylt not go forth to ϸ kynge of Babylons princes, then shall this cytie be de= lyuered into the handes of the Chaldees, whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape them. And Sedekiah sayde vnto Jere= my: I am afrayed for the Jewes that are fledde vnto the Chaldees, lest I come in theyr handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremye answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O herken vnto the voyce of ϸ Lord (I beseche the) which I speake vnto the so shalt F thou be wel and saue thy lyfe. But yf thou wilt not go forth, ϸ Lord hath tolde me this playnly Beholde, all the women that are lefte in ϸ kyng of Judaes house, shalbe led forth out to ϸ kynge of Babylons prynces. And they shall saye, that thou art discepued: and the men in whome thou dydest put thy truste haue gotten the vnder, and set thy feet fast in the myre, and goue theyr way from the. Therfore all thy wyues with theyr chyldren shall they lede forth vnto the Chaldees and thou shalt not escape theyr hãdes, but shalte be the kynge of Babylons prysoner: and thys cytye shalt thou cause to be brent. Then sayd zedekyah vnto Jeremy: loke that nobodye knowe of these wordes, and thou shalte not dye. But yf the prynces perceaue that I haue talked wyth ỹ and comme vnto the, sayinge: O speake, what sayde the kynge to the? hyde it not from vs, and G we wyl not put the todeathe. Tel vs (we prayе the) what sayde the kyng to ỹ? Se thou geue thẽ thys answer: I haue humbly besought the king that he wyll let me lye no more in Jehonathans house, that I dye not ther. Then came al the prynces vnto Jeremy, and asked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kynge badde hym. Then they helde theyr peace and let hym alone: for they perceaued nothynge* So Jeremy abod Jer.xxxix.c styll in the fooze entrye of the pryson, vntyll the daye that Jerusalem was wonne.

¶ The.xxxix.Chapter

¶ Nabuchodonozor besegeth Jerusalem, zedekyah flyeth. He is taken of the Chaldees. Hys sonnes are slayne, His eyes are thrust out. Jeremy is prouided for. Abemelech is deliuered frõ captyuite, because of the confidence that he had in God.

Jer.xxxii.a
.iiii.re.xxv.a
IN the* when the cyty of Jerusalem was taken (for in the. ix. year of zedekyah kynge of Juda, in the tenth moneth, came Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon and all hys host, and beseged Jerusalem, and fought agaynste it, And in the. xi. yeare of zedekiah in the. iiii. moneth, the. ix. daye of the moneth, he brake into the cytye) Then all the prynces of the kynge of Babylon came in, and satte them downe vnder the porte Neregel, Sarezer, Samgarnebo, Sarchachym, Rabsarys, Neregell, Sarezer, Rabmag wyth all the other prynces of the kynge of Babylon* And when zedekyah the kynge of Ju ie.xxxiii.a, da wyth hys souldyers sawthem, they fled, and departed out of the cytye by nyght, thorowe the kynges garden, and thorowe the port that is betwene the two walles, and so they went toward the wyldernes.

But the Chaldees hoost folowed faste after
B them, and toke zedekyah in the felde of Jerycho, and brought hym prysoner to Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babilon vnto Reblath, that lyeth in the land of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon hym. So the kynge of Babylon caused ỹ chyldren of zedekyah and al ỹ nobles of Juda to be slayne before hys face at Reblath. And made zedekyas eyes to be put out, and bounde hym wt two chaynes, and sent hym to Babylon.

¶ *Moreouer, the Chaldees brente vp the kyn-
.iiii.re.xxv.b ges palace, wyth the other houses of the people,
Jere.xxxii.d and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remnaunte of the people that were in the citie: and such as wer come to helpe them (what soeuer was lefte of the cõmon sorte) Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne carped them to Babilon But Nabuzaradan the chefe captaine let the rascall people (and those that had nothynge) dwell styll in the lande of Juda, and gaue them vynеyardes and corne feldes at the same tyme. Nabuchodonozor also the kynge of Babylon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge concerning Jeremy sayinge: take, and cherysh hym and make much of hym, se thou do hym no harme but intreate hym after hys owne desyre. D

So Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, Nabusazban Rabsares, Nergal, Sarezar, Rabmag and all the kynge of Babylons Lordes sente for Jeremye, *and caused hym to be fet oute of the xl.xxxviii.b fore entrye of the pryson, and cõmytted hym vnto Godoliah the sõne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan: that he shulde carye hym home: * and so he Jere.xl.b dwelte amonge the people. Nowe whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore entrye of the prysõn, the worde of the Lorde came vnto hym saying: Go and tel Abemeleche the Mozian. Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Beholde the cruel and sharpe plage that I haue deuysed for thys cytye, wyll I bryng vpon them that thou shalt se it, but I wyll delyuer the (sayeth the Lorde) and thou shalte not come in ỹ handes of those men whom thou feareſt. For doubteles, I wyll saue the, so that thou shalt not perysshe wyth the swearde: but thy lyfe shalbe saued and that because thou hast put thy truste in me: sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The.xl.Chapter.

¶ Jeremye hath licence to go whether he will. He dwelleth with the people that remayneth at Jerusalem. Ouer whom Godolyah ruleth Johanan prophecyeth death vnto Godoliah.

THis is the worde that ỹ Lord spake A

The Lorde thy God spake myghtely before, of the mysery vpon thys place. Nowe the Lorde hath sent it, and performed it, as he hath promysed. For ye haue sinned agaynst the Lorde: and haue not bene obedyent vnto hys voyce, therefore commeth thys plage vpon you. Beholde, I lose the bandes frome thy handes thys daye: yf thou wylte nowe go wyth me vnto Babylon, vp then: for I wyll se to the and prouyde for the. D Yee, all the Iewes also that dwelte in Moab vnder the Ammonytes in Idumea and in all the countryes when they herde that the kynge of Babylon had made Godolyah the sonne of Ahycam the sonne of Saphan gouernoure, vpon them that were lefte in Juda. All the Iewes (I saye) returned out of all places where they were fled vnto, and came into the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, and gathered wyne and other frutes, and that very much.

Moreouer Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoste that were scatered on euery syde in the lande, came to Godolyah in Mizpa, and saye vnto hym: Knowest thou not that Baallis the kynge of the Ammonites hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah to slay the? But Godolyah the sonne of Ahicam beleued thẽ not. Then sayde Johanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godolyah in Mizpa these wordes secretly Let me go I praye the and I wyll sley Ismael ỹ sonne of Nathanyah, so that no body shal know it. Wherfore wyll he kyl the, that all the Iewes whych resorte vnto the, myghte be scatered, and the remnaunt in Juda perysh? And Godolyah ỹ sonne of Ahycam sayde vnto Johanan the sonne of Careah. But in the seuenth moneth it happened, * that Ismael the sonne of Nathanyah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynges bloud) came wyth thẽ that were greatest aboute the kyng and ten men that were sworne wyth hym: vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Mizpa, & they dyd eate to gether. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah with those tenne men that were sworne to hym, starte vp, and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahycam the sonne of Saphã wyth the swerd and slewe hym, whõ the kynge of Babylon had made gouernour of the lande. Ismael also slew all the Iewes that were with Godoliah at Mizpa & all the Chaldees that he founde there wayting vpon hym & those that were able to fyght he slewe wyth hym.

The nexte daye after that he had slayne Godolyah (the matter was yet vnknowen) & there came certayne men from Sychem, from Syloh and Samaria, to ỹ nombre of .lxxx. whych had shauen theyr beardes, rente theyr clothes, & wer all heauye, bryngynge meate offerynges and incence in theyr handes to offre it in the house of ỹ Lord. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah wẽt forth of Mizpa * weppynge, to mete them. Now Eccle.xii.e when he met them, he sayde: Go youre waye to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam. And when they came into the myddest of the cytye, Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah (with thẽ that wer sworne vnto hym) slewe them, euen at the myddest of ỹ pyt. Among these foure score men there wer ten that sayde vnto Ismael: Oh, sley vs not for we haue yet great atreasur in the feld of wheat, barlye, oyle, and honye.

So he spared them, and slewe them not wyth C theyr brethren. Nowe the * pyt wherein Ismael iii.re.yyb.e dyd cast the deade bodyes of the men (whome he slewe because of Godoliah) had kynge Aza caused to be made for feare of Baaza the kyng of Israel, & the same pyt dyd Ismael fyll wyth slayne men. As for the remnaunt of the people, the kynges doughters and all the people that were yet selfe at Mizpa vpon whom * Nabuzaradan the iiii.re.yyb.e chefe captayne had madde Godolyah the sonne of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah caryed them awaye prysoners towarde the Ammonytes. Nowe when all the people whõ Ismael led captyue, sawe Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the other captaynes of the host, they were glad. So all the people ỹ Ismael had caryed away frõ Mizpa, were brought agayne D And when they returned, they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. ¶The.xliii.Chapter.

¶ He reproueth the people for their ydolatry. They that set lyght by the threatenyng of the Lorde are chastened. The destruction of Egypt and the Jewes therin is prophecyed.

THis is the worde that was shewed to Jeremy cõcerning al the Jewes: which dwell in Egypt: at Migdol at Taphnis, at Noph, & in the land of Patures. Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Ye haue sene al the misery that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem, & vpon the cyties of Juda: so that this daye they are desolate, and noman dwellynge therein: and that bycause of the greate blasphemyes whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto angre. In that they wente backe to do sacrifyce and worshyp vnto straunge goddes: whome neyther ye nor your fathers haue knowẽ. Howbeit, I sent vnto them my seruauntes al the prophetes. * I rose vp early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warnyng. ☞ do not suche abhominable thinges & thynges ẏ I hate. But they wolde not folowe nor herken to turne from their wickednes, and to do nomore sacrifyces vnto straunge goddes.

Jere.xxv.a and.xxvii.c.

Wherfore myne indignatiõ and wrath was kyndled, and it brent vp the cyties of Juda, the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalẽ, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Howe happeneth it, that ye do so great euyll vnto your owne soules: thus to destroye the men & women: children and babes of Juda: so that none of you is lefte, because ye prouoke me vnto wrathe wyth the workes of your owne hãdes: When ye offre vnto straunge Goddes in the lande of Egypte, where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye myghte vttetly perysshe, and that ye myghte be reuyled and shamefully intreated of all nacyons. As for the remnaunte of Juda, that purposly went into Egypte, there to dwell, I wyll take thém, *and they shall al be destroyed. In the land of Egypte shal they perisshe, beinge consumed wyth the swearde and with hunger. For from the least vnto the most, they shall perisshe with the swearde and with hunger. Moreouer, they shalbe reuiled, abhorred, shamed, and cõfounded: For I wyll vysyt them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue vysyted Jerusalem, wyth the swearde, wyth hunger, and wyth pestylence So that none of the remnaunt of Juda, whych are gone to dwel in Egypte, shalbe left to come agayne into the lande of Juda although they thyncke to come thether agayne, & to dwel there For noone shall come agayne, but suche as are fled awaye.

Get you away, saue your liues, and be like vnto the heath in the wyldernes. * For because thou hast trusted in thyne owne workes and treasure, thou shalt be taken. Chamos with his preastes and princes shall goo away into captiuyte. Esay.xl.b. Jere.xlviii.b Ezec.xxiv.b

The destroyer shall come vppon all cytyes none shal escape. The valleys shalbe destroied, and the feldes shalbe layed waste, lyke as the Lorde hath spoken. B

Gyue wynges vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedyly: for her cytyes shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therin.

Cursed be he that doth ꝑ worke of the Lorde negligently, and cursed be he that kepeth backe his * swearde from shedynge of bloude. Jere.xlviii.

Moab hath euer ben ryche and careles from her youth vp, she hath sytten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessell into another (ꝑ is) she neuer went away into captiuitie, therfore her sauour remayneth, and her sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme commeth sayth the Lorde, ¶ that I shall sende her trussers to trusse her vp, which shall remoue her from her dwellyng: and empty her vesselles, & breake her wyne pottes. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of * Bethel, wherin she put her trust: Wherfore do ye thynke thus, we are myghty and stronge men of warre? Moab is destroyed: and her cyties brent vp: her chosen yongmen be slayne, sayth ꝑ kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes. The destruction of Moab cōmeth on a pace, and her fall is at hande. xlii.xvii.b

All her neyghbours shal mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name, shall say, O how happeneth it, that the strong staffe, & the goodly rodde is thus brokē? And thou doughter Dibō come downe from thy glory, and syt in thyrste. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, & breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete, & loke aboute the, aske them that are fled and escaped, and say: what thyng is happened? Oh, Moab is confounded and ouercome. D

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. For iudgement shall come vpon the playne lande. Namely: vpon Holon, and Jahazah, vpon Mephaath & Dibon: vpon

Nabo

Nabo, and the house of Deblathaim vpon Cariathiarim and vpon the house Gamull, vppon the house Moan, and Carpothe vpon Bozrah, and all the cities in the lande of Moab whether they lye farre oz neare.

The hozne of Moab is smytten dowone and her arme broken, sayeth the Lozde. Make her dzoncken, foz she magnyfyed herselfe aboue the Lozde, that men may clap theyz handes at her vomite, and ỹ she also may be laughed to scozne O Israell, shalt thou not laugh hym to scozne, Nu.xxb.a when he is taken among theues. * Yee, because of thy wozdes that thou haste spoken agaynst hym ỹ shalt be dzyuē away. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cities, & dwel in rockes of stone and be come lyke doues ỹ make theyz nestes in holes.

E * As foz Moabs pzyde, we haue heard (Esay.xvi.a Jere.xlix.c) how she is very hye minded. I knowe her stoutnesse, her bostynge, her arogancye, and the pzyde of her stomacke, sayeth the Lozd, I know (sayeth the Lozde) her indignacyon, she doth not rycht, her wozdes are lyes, and they haue not delt truly. Therfoz shall there mournynge be made foz Moab, and euery man shall crye foz Moabs sake: a lamentacyon shalbe made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So wyll I mourne foz the also, O Jaser, and foz the, O thou vyneyarde of Sabmah. Thy vine braunches shal come ouer the see, and the braunches of Jazer, but vnto the see: the destroyer shall breake into thy harueste and grapegatherynge: myrthe and chere shall be taken awaye frome the tymbrye felde, and from the hole lande of Moab.

I There shalbe no swete wyne in the pzesse, the treader shall haue no stomacke to crye: yea, ther be none to cry vnto hym: which afoze tyme wer herde frō Hezebon to Cleale and Jahaz, whiche lyfted vp theyz voyce from zoar vnto Hozonaim, the bullocke of thre yere olde shall go mourning. The waters also of Nemrim shalbe dzyed vp. Wozeouer, I wyll make Moab cease, sayth the Lozde, from the offerynges and censyng ỹ she hath made vnto her Goddes in hygh places. Wherfoz my hert mourneth foz Moab, lyke a croude playing an heup song: and foz the mens sake of the bzyckwall my hert mourneth also: euen as a pype that pypeth a doleful song: foz they shalbe very fewe, and destroyed.

Esay.xb.d * All heedes shalbe shauen, and all beerdes clypped of, all handes bounde, & loynes gyrded about with sackcloth. Upō all the house toppes and stretes of Moab there shalbe lamentable mournyng: Foz I wyll breake Moab lyke an vnprofytable vessell, sayth the Lozde: O how is she destroied! O how mourneth she! O howe doth Moab hange downe her heed, and is ashamed! Thus shall Moab be a laughynge stocke, and had in derysion of all them that be rounde about her. * Foz thus sayth the Lozd: Behold: Deu.xxbiii.c Jere.xlix.d the enemy shall come flyinge as an Egle: and spred his wynges vpō Moab. They shal clyme ouer the walles, and wyn the stronge holdes. Then the myghtye mens hertes in Moab shalbe lyke ỹ herte of a womā trauelyng with child

And Moab shalbe made so desolate that she shall nomoze be a people bycause she hath set vp her selfe agaynst the Lozde. * Feare, pyt & snare shall come vpon the, O Moab, sayth the Lozde. Who so escapeth the feare shall fall in the pyt, & who so getteth out of the pyt shalbe taken in the snare. Foz I wyll bzynge a yeare of vysytation vpon Moab, sayth the Lozde. They that are hable to flye, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Hesebon: foz there shall go a fyze oute of Hesebon, and a flame from Syon, and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, and the top of those sedycyous chyldzen. G Esa.xxiiii.e

Wo be vnto the, O Moab, foz thou people of Chamos shalt perysh. Yea, thy sōnes & doughters shalbe led away captyue. Yet at the laste, wyll I bzynge Moab out of captyuytie agayne sayeth the Lozde. Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

¶ The.xlix.Chapter.

¶ The wozde the Lozde agaynste the Ammonytes, agaynste the Idumea, Damascus, Cedar and Elam.

A Ezec.xxi.d xxb.a Amos.i.a

AS concernynge the * Ammonytes, thus the Lozde sayth: Hath Israell no chyldzen, oz is he wythoute an heyze: Why hath youre kynge then taken Gad in? Wherfoze doeth hys people dwel in his cytyes? Beholde therfoze, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lozde: that I wyll bzynge a noyse of warre into Rabah of the Ammonites: and it shal be layed on a desolate heape and her cyties bzent vp: and the Israelytes shalbe lozdes ouer those that had them in possessyon afoze, sayth the Lozd Hesebon shall mourne: foz Ay shalbe roted out of the grounde, sayth the Lozde.

The cytyes of Rabah shal crye out, and gyrd them selues wyth sackecloth, they shall mourne. and rūne about the walles: foz theyz kynge shall be led awaye pzysoner: yea, hys pzestes and pzinces wyth hym. B

Wherfoze trustest thou in the valleye? they valley hath flowed away, O thou fearce doughter, and thynkest thou that thou arte so safe, by reason of thy treasure, that no man shall come to the? Beholde, I wyll bzynge a feare vpon the sayth the Lozde God of hoostes, frome all those that be about the: so that ye shalbe scatred euery man from an other, and no man shall gather thē togyther agayne that be fled. But after that I wyll bzynge the Ammonytes also oute of captyuytye agayne.

Esay.xxi.b Ezec.xxb.b xxi.f xxb.a * Upon the Edomytes hath the Lozde of hostes spoken on thys maner: Is ther nomoze wisdome in Theman? Is there nomoze good counsayle amonge hys people? Is theyz wysdome then tourned clene to nought? Get you hence, tourne youre backes, crepe downe into the depe, O ye cytyzens of Dedan. C

Foz I wyll bzynge destructyon vpon Esau: yea, & the day of hys vysytacyon. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, shoulde they not leue some grapes? If the nyght robbers came vpon the shuld they not take so moch as they thought were ynoughe?

But I wyll make Esau bare, and dyscouere hys secretes, so that he shall not be hable to hyde them.

them. Hys sede shalbe wasted awaye: yea, his bzethzen and his neyghbours: and he hym selfe shall not be lefte behynde.

Thou shalte leaue thy fatherles chyldzen behynde the, and I wyll kepe them: and thy wyddowes shal take theyr comfozte in me. Foz thus hath the Lozde spoken. * Beholde they that mē thought were vnmete to dzynke of the cuppe, haue dzonken wyth the fyzst: and thynkest thou then to be free.

No, no, thou shalt neyther be quyte noz free: but thou muste dzynke also. Foz why? I haue swozne by my selfe, sayeth the Lozde: that Bozrah shall become a wyldernesse, an open shame a laughynge stocke and cursynge: and al her cyties shalbe a continuall deserte.

D Foz I am perfytlye informed of the Lozde that he hath sent a message already vnto the hethen. Gather you together, & go fozth agaynste them: make you ready to the batayle: foz lo, * I wyll make the but small amonge the heathen, and lytle regarded amonge men.

* The hye stomacke and the pzyde of thy hert haue deceaued the, bycause thou wylt dwel in ỹ holes of stony rockes, and haue the hye moū taynes in possession. Neuertheless, though thy nest were as hye as the Eagles: yet wyll I caste the downe, sayeth the Lozde. Mozeouer, Idumea shalbe a wyldernes: * who so goeth by it, shalbe abashed, & wondze at her miserable plages. * Like as Sodom, Gomozre, and the cities that laye there aboute were turned vpsydowne sayeth the Lozde: so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shal haue his habitacion there Beholde, lyke as ỹ Lyon, so shall a destroyer come vp from the pleasaūt medowes of Jozdan vnto the stronge dwellynge place: and when I haue made him quyet, I wyll make hym to flye from her: and all chosen men wyll I set in araye agaynst her: Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that wyl stryue with me? What shepherd may stande in my handes?

* Therfoze heare the counsayle of the Lozde that he hath taken vpon Idumea: and hys purpose that he hathe deuysed vpon the cytizens of Thema. The least of the flocke shall teare them in peces, and loke what fayze thynge they haue they shall make it waste: and them selues also. At the noyse of theyr fall: the earth shal quake: the crye of theyr voyce shalbe herd vnto the red see. Beholde the enemye shal * come and flye vp hyther, lyke as it were an Eagle, and spzed hys wynges vpon Bozrah. Then shal the hertes of the wozthyes in Edom be as the harte of a woman traueylynge of child. * Upon Damascus, Hemath and Arphad shall come confusyon: foz they shall heare euell tydynges, they shalbe tossed to and fro lyke the see that can not stand styl Damascus shalbe soze afrayde, & shal flye tremblynge shal come vpon her. Sozowe and payne shall ouertake her as a woman traueling with chyld. But how shuld so wozshypful & glozious a citie be fozsaken? Here therfoze: her pouge mē shal fal in the stretes, & al her men of war shalbe takē away in that time, sayeth ỹ Lozd of hostes I wyl kyndle a fyze in the walles of Damascus whych shal consume the palace of Benhadad.

* As foz Cedar and the kyngdome of Hazoz whom Nabuchodonozoz the kyng of Babylon smote downe, the Lozde hath spoken thus vpō them: Aryse, & get you vp vnto Cedar, and destroye the people toward the east. Theyr tentes and their flockes, shal they take away: ye, theyr hangynges and theyr vessels. Theyr Cammels also shal they cary away with them. They shall crye to them: Feare is on euery syde.

Flee, get you sone awaye, creape into caues, that ye may dwel there, O ye inhabyters of Hasoz, sayeth the Lozde: foz Nabuchodonozoz the kynge of Babylon hath holden a coūcel concernyng you: and cōcluded hys deuyce agaynst you Aryse, and get you vp agaynst ponder rych and careles people (sayth the Lozd) which hath neyther gates noz dooze barres, but dwell alone. Theyr Camels shalbe stolen, and the dzoues of theyr catell dzyuen away. Mozeouer, those wyl I scatter toward al the wyndes: and bzyng thē to destruction: yea, and that thozow theyr owne familyers, sayeth the Lozde. Hasoz also shalbe a dwellyng foz dzagons, & an euerlastinge wyldernes: so that no body shall dwell there: and no man shal haue there his habitation.

These are the wozdes that the Lozd spake to the pzophet Jeremy, concerninge * Elam, in the begynnyng of ỹ raygne of Zedekiah king of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lozde of hoostes: Beholde, I wyll bzeake ỹ bowe of Elam, and take away theyr strength: and vpon Elam I wyll bzynge the foure wyndes from the foure quarters of heuen, and wyll scatter them agaynste the same foure wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall flee vnto them.

Foz I wyll cause Elam to be afrayde of their enemyes, and of them that seke theyr lyues: and wyll bzynge vpon them the indignacion of my wzath, sayeth the Lozde. And I wyll persecute them wt the sweard, so long tyll I haue bzought them to naught. I wyll set my thzone in Elam, I wyll destroye both the kynge and the pzinces from thence, sayeth the Lozd. Bnt in pzocesse of tyme I wyll bzynge Elam out of captiuitie agayne, sayeth the Lozde.

The.l. Chapter.

¶ The pzophecieth the destruccion of Babylon, and the deliueraunce of Israell, which was in captiuitie.

THe wozdes that the Lozde spake vnto the pzophete Jeremy, concernynge Babylon, and the landes of the Chaldees: * Pzeache amonge the Gentyles, let youre voyce be herde, make a token, crye out, kepe no silence, but say: Babylon is wonne * Bell is confounded, and Merodach is ouercome.

+ Yea, theyr goodes be bzoughte to shame and theyr ymages burst in peces. Foz out of the nozthe there dothe come a people agaynste her, whyche make her lande so waste, that no bodye dwell therin, neyther man, noz beaste: foz they flye and departe from thence, * In those dayes &

at that tyme, sayeth the Lorde: the chyldren of Israel shal come, they and the chyldren of Juda weppyng & makyng hast, and shal seke the Lord theyr God. They shal aske the waye to Syon, thyther shall they turne theyr faces, sayenge: Come and we wyll cleaue to the Lorde, in a couenaunt that neuer shalbe broken.

Yet shall ye flye from Babylon, and departe out of the lāde of the Chaldees & be ye as the rammes that go before the flocke.

Jere.l.g * For lo, I wyll wake vp an hoost of people frō the northren lande, and bryng them vnto Babylon: these shal laye sege to it, and wyn it. Theyr arrowes shall not mysse, lyke as a connynge archer shuteth not wronge.

Go downe: O thou auenger, into ỹ enemyes lande, & visit thē that dwell therin: downe with them, & smyte them vpon the backes, sayeth the Lord: do accordyng to al that I haue cōmaūded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter & great murther, namely on this maner. Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole world is thus brokē & broysed in sonder? How chaūceth it: ỹ Babylō is become a wylderne s among ỹ heathen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed wayte for the, & thou art takē: vnawares arte ỹ trapped and snared: for why? thou hast prouoked the Lord vnto angre. I wyll burne vp his cyties wyth fyre, and it shal consume al that is rounde aboute hym.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: The chyldren of Israel and Juda suffre violēce together
M Al they that haue them in captuite, kepe them faste, and wyll not let them go but theyr auenger and redemer is myghty. Whose name is the Lorde of hostes: he shal mayntayne theyr cause he shall make the lāde shake, and iudge thē that dwel therin, one wyth another. The sweard shal come vpon the Chaldees, sayeth the Lorde vpon them that dwel in Babylon, vpon theyr prynces, and vpon theyr wyse mē. The sweard vpon theyr sothsayers, as for those, they shal become fooles. The sweard vpon theyr worthies, so that they shall stande in feare. Jer.l.b, & and.l.a

THus hath the Lordes said: *behold I wyll rayse vp a perilouse wynde agaynst Babylon and her cytizens that beare eupl wyl agaynst me. Therfore wyl I rewarde the cytie of Babylon, and al her cytezens, the Chaldees wyth al the euel whyche they haue done vnto Sion: yea, that ye your selues shal se it, sayeth the Lorde: Behold, I come vpon the, thou noysome hyll, sayeth the Lorde: thou that destroyest al lãdes: I wyl stretche out my hande ouer the, and cast the downe from the stony rockes: and wyl make the a brente hyl: so that neither corner stones, nor pinacles, nor foũdacions of stones shalbe taken any more out of the, but wast and desolate shalt thou lye for euermore, sayeth the Lorde.

Set vp a tokẽ in the lande: blowe the trõpettes amonge the Heythen: prouoke the nacyons agaynest her, call the kyngedomes of Ararat, Mynni: & Ascanes agaynste her: Set the prince agaynst her, bynge as greate a sorte of teryble horses agaynste her: as ik they were greshoppes Prepare agaynste thē the people of the Medes wyth theyr kynges, princes, and al the chefe rulers: yee, & the whole lande that is vnder hym.

The lande also shal shake and be afrayde whē the deuice of the Lorde shal come forth agaynst Babylon: to make the land of Babilon so wast that no man shall dwell anye more therin. The worthyes of Babylon shall leaue the batayle and kepe them selues in stronge holdes, theyr strength hath fayled them, they shalbe lyke wemen. Theyr dwellynge places shalbe brent vp, their barres shalbe broken. One pursenaūt shal mete an other: yee, one post shal com by another to bryng ỳ kynge of Babylon tidinges: that his citye is taken in on euery syde, the foordes occupyed, the fennes brent vp, and the souldiers sore afrayde.

D For thus sayeth the Lorde of hosts the God of Israel: the doughter of Babilon hath ben in her tyme lyke as a threshyng floure, but shortly shal her haruest come. Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilō hath deuoured & destroied me, he hath made me an empty vessel. He swalowed me vp lyke a dragon, and fylled hys bely wyth my dylycates: he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substaunce away, and the thynge that was left me hath he caryed vnto Babylon, sayeth ỳ doughter ỳ dwelleth in Syon: yea, & my bloude also vnto the Chaldees, sayeth Jerusalē. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyl defende thy cause, and auenge the: I wyll drynke vp her see, and drye vp her water sprynges.

E * Babylon shal become an hepe of stones a dwellynge place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondryng, because no mā dwelleth there. They shall roare together lyke lyons, & as the yonge Lyons when they be angrye, so shal they bende them selues. In theyr heate I shall gyue them a dyner and they shalbe dronken for ioye. * Then shal they slepe an euerlastynge slepe, and neuer wake, sayeth the Lorde. I shal cary them downe to be slayne lyke shepe, like wethers and goates O, how was Selach wonne? O, how was the glory of the whole lāde taken? howe happeneth it, that Babylon is so wondred at amonge the Heythen? The see is rysen ouer Babilon, & hath couered her wyth his great waues. Her cyties are layed wast, the lande lyeth vnbuylded and voyde: it is a lande where no man dwelleth, and where no man trauayleth thorowe. Moreouer, * I wyl vyset Bel at Babylon: and the thynge that he hathe swalowed vp, that same shall I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyls also shal runne nomore vnto hym: yea, and the walles of Babylon shal fal.

O my people, * come out of Babylon, that euery man maye saue his lyfe from the fearful wrath of the Lorde. Be not faynthertед, and feare not at euery rumour that shalbe heard in the lande: for euery yere bryngeth newe tydynges, and in the yere folowynge newe tydynges, and robbynge in the lande and lorde vpon lorde And lo, the tyme cōmeth that I wyll vysite the ymages of Babilon, and the whole lande shall be confounded: yea, and her slayne shal lye in the myddest of her. Heauen and earth wyth al that is therin, shal reioyse ouer Babylon when the destroyers shal come vpon her from the northe, sayeth the Lorde.

F * Lyke as Babilon hath beaten downe and slayne many out of Israel, so shal ther fal many and be slayne in al her kyngdome. Ye ỳ haue escaped ỳ sweard hast you, stāde not styl, remembre the Lorde afarre of, & thynke vpon Jerusalem, for we are ashamed to heare ỳ blasphemies our faces were couered with shame, bycause the straunge aleauntes came into the sanctuarye of the Lorde. Wherfore beholde, (sayeth the Lord) the tyme cōmeth ỳ I wyll vyset the ymages of Babylon, and thorowe the hole lande they shal mourne and fal. * Though Babylon clymed vp into heauen, & kepte her power on hye: yet shal I sende her destroyers, sayeth the Lorde.

A pytious crye shalbe herde from Babylon and a great mysery from the lande of the Chaldees when the Lord destroyeth them, and when he driueth out the hye stomack and proude boastynge, wherwyth they haue bene as furious as the waues of great waterfloudes, & made great crakes wyth theyr wordes. For the destroyers shal come vpō her (euen vpon Babilon) whych shal take theyr worthyes, and breake theyr bowes: for God is disposed to auēge hym selfe vpon them and sufficiently to recompence them. Yea (sayeth the Lorde) I wyl make theyr prynces, theyr wyse mē, theyr chefe rulers, & al theyr worthyes dronkē: so that they shal slepe an euerlastynge slepe: and neuer wake. Thus sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hooستes.

G Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde of hooستes The thycke wall of Babylon shalbe broken, & her hye gates shalbe brēt vp. And ỳ thynge that the Gētyles and the people haue wrought wyth great trauayle and labour, shal come to nought and be consumed in the fyre.

Thys is the charge that Jeremye gaue vnto Saraiah the sonne of Neriah, the son of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babylon wyth Zedekiah ỳ kynge of Juda, in ỳ fourth yere of hys raygne. Nowe thys Saraiah was a peaceable prince. Jeremy wrote in a boke all the mysery that shulde come vpon Babylō: yea and al these sermons that be wrytten agaynst Babylō, and gaue Saraiah thys charge. When thou cōmest vnto Babylon, se that thou reade al these wordes, and saye: O Lorde, thou art determined to rote out thys place, so ỳ neither people nor catel shal dwell there any more: but to lye waste for euer: and when thou haste redde oute the boke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: Euen thus shal Babylon synke, and be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble, that I wyl bryng vpō her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the Preachynges of Jeremye.

¶ He repeteth the takynge of zedekiah. Jerusalem is taken of the Chaldees, zedekias sonnes are kylled before hys face, and hys eyes put out. The cytie is burned. The temple is spoyled and robbed. They that were lefte in Jerusalem are caryed to Babilō, kyng Jehoachin is brought forth of pryson, and fed lyke a kynge.

ZEdekiah was * one and.xx.yeare olde, when he was made kynge, and he reygned a leuen yeare in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutall, Jeremyes daughter of Libna. He lyued wyckedly before the Lorde euen as Jehoachim dyd. For the Lorde was angry at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyl he had cast them out of his presence. And zedekiah fell from the kynge of Babylon.

Je.xxxix.a. iiii.Re xxiv.a

*But in the vyntheyeare of hys reygne, in the tenth moneth, ỹ tenth day of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonozor the king of Babilon with al his host came before Jerusalem, and beseged it, and made them bulwarkes round about it. And this besegyng of the cityе endured vnto the eleuenth yeare of kynge zedekiah.

*And in the fouth moneth, the.ix.day of the moneth, there was so great honger in the citye: that there were nomore vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldiers brake awaye, and fled out of the citye by nyghte thorowe the way of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the citye rounde aboute, yet wente these men theyr waye towarde the wyldernes.

And so the Chaldees folowed vpon them, and toke zedekiah the kyng in the felde of Jericho, when his hoofte was runne from hym: So they caryed ỹ kyng away prysoner to Reblath vnto the kynge of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, * where he gaue iudgement vpon hym.

Je.xxxix.b

C The kyng of Babylon also caused zedekias sonnes to be slayne before hys face, yee, and put all the princes of Juda to death at Reblath Moreouer, he put out the eyes of zedekiah, and caused hym to be bounde wyth two cheynes, to be caryed vnto Babylon: and let hym lye in prison, tyll he dyed:

Nowe the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth, in the nynthe yeare of Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babylon, Nabusaradā the chefe captayne, and the kynge of Babylons seruauntes came vnto Jerusalem, and brent vp the house of the Lorde. He brent vp also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgeous buyldynges in Jerusalem. And the whole host of the Chaldees ỹ were with the chefe captayne, brake downe al ỹ walles of Jerusalem rounde aboute.

D As for the pore people and suche folke as yet was lefte in the citye: which also were fallen to the kynge of Babylon, yee, and what people as yet remayned: Nabusaradan the chefe captayn caryed them away prysoners. But the pore people of the countrey, dyd Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupy the vynepardes and feldes. The Chaldees also brake ỹ brasen pyllers that were in ỹ house of the Lorde yee, the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and caryed all the metall of them vnto Babylon. Haue ye no regarde, O all ye ý go farby beholde and se, yf there be any sorowe lyke vnto myne, wherwith the Lord hath troubled me, in the day of his fearfull wrath. From aboue hath he sent downe a fyre into my bones and it burneth them cruelly: he hath layed a net for my feet and thrown me wyde open: he hathe made me desolate, so that I must euer be mournynge.

The yoke of my transgressyon is come at the E last, wyth his hande hath he tak ẽ it vp, and put it aboute my necke. My strengthe is gone: the Lord hath delyuered me into those hãdes, wherout I can not quyte my selfe. The Lord hath destroyed al the myghty men, that were in me. He hath proclaymed a feast, to slaughter al my best men. The Lord hath troden downe the doughter of Juda, lyke as it were in a wyne presse.

¶ The.ii. Chapter.

ALas, *how hath the Lorde darkened the A doughter of Syon so sore in his wrath? & Thre.iiii.b As for the honoure of Israel, he hath cast it downe frõ heauẽ vnto ý earth. Howe happened it, ý he remembred not his owne *fote stole i.pa.xxix.a whẽ he was angry? The Lord hath cast downe pl.xcviii.a all the habitacions of Jacob wout any fauour: al the strong places of the doughter Juda hath be broken in his wrath, and throwẽ thẽ downe to the grounde: her kyngdome and her prynces hath he suspended. In the wrath of his indignacyon he hathe broken all the horne of Israel: he hath withdrawen his right hand frõ the enemye a, a flambe of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, & hath cõsumed vp all rounde about: He hath bent hys bowe lyke an enemy: he hath fastened his ryght hande as an aduersary: and euery thyng ý was pleasaũt to se, he hath smyttẽ it downe. He hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre into the tabernacle of the doughter of Syon.

The Lorde is become lyke as it were an enemy, he hath deuoured Israel and al his palaces:

yea, all hys stronge holdes hath he destroyed, & fylled the doughter of Juda wyth much sorowe and heuynesse.

Jere.bii.b * Her tabernacle (whych was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solempne feastes hath he put downe. The Lorde hathe brought it so to passe: ý the hye solempne feastes and Sabbothes in Sion: are cleane forgotten. In hys heuye displeasure hath he made the kynge and preestes to be dispysed.

The Lorde hath forsaken hys owne aulter, and hath abhorred his owne Sanctuarye, and hath gyuen the walles of theyr townes into the handes of the enemye. Theyr enemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

C The Lorde thought to breake downe ý walles of the doughter of Syon, he spreade out hys lyne, and dyde not in hys hãde tyl he had destroyed them. Therfore mourne the turrets and the broken walles together.

Her gates are sonke downe to the grouñde her Jere.lii.b barres are broken, and smytten in sondre, * her kynges and prynces are caryed awaye to ý gentyles. They haue neyther lawe nor prophetes, nor yet any vysion from the Lorde.

The senatours of the doughter of Syõ syt vpon the grounde in sylence: they haue strawed asshes vpon theyr heedes, and gyrded them selues wyth sakcloth. The maydens of Jerusalem hãge downe their hedes to ý grouñd. Myne eyes

D Euen when they spake to theyr mothers: where is meate and drynke? for whyle they so sayde, they fel downe in the stretes of the cytie, lyke as they had bene wounded, and some dyed in theyr mothers bosome.

What shall I saye of the, O thou doughter Jerusalem, to whom shall I lykẽ the? To whõ shal I compare the, O thou doughter Sion, to cõforte the wythall? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne see: who maye heale the?

E * Thy prophetes haue loked out vayne and

All thyne enemyes gape vpõ the, whyspernge & bytynge theyr teeth, sayeng let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we loked for, is come, we haue founde and sene it.

The Lorde hath fulfylled the thinge that he
F was purposed to do: & perfourmed that he had deuysed longe ago: he hath destroyed, and not spared: he hath caused thyne aduersarye to tryumphe ouer the, and set vp the horne of thyne enemye. * Let thyne herte crye vnto the Lord, O

Stande vp, and make thy prayer in the fyrste watche of the nyght, poure out thyne hert lyke water before the Lorde: lyft vp thyne hãdes for the lyues of thy yonge chyldren, that dye of honger in the stretes. Beholde, O Lorde, and consyder, why hast thou gathered me vp so cleane? Shall the women then eate theyr owne frute, G euen chyldren of a spanne longe? Shall the prestes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuarye of the Lorde? Yonge & olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens and yonge men are slayne wyth the swerde: whome thou in the daye of thy wrathfull indignacion hast put to death: yea euẽ thou hast put them to death, and not spared tem. My neyghbours ý are roũde about me, hast thou called as it were to a feast daye: so that in the daye of the Lordes wrath none escaped, neyther was anye lefte behynde. Those that I haue brought and nourysshed, hath myne enemye destroyed.

C The.iii. Chapter:

I Am the man, that (thorowe the rod A of his wrath) haue experience of misery. He droue me forth, and led me pea, into darkenesse, but not into lyght. Agaynst me onely he turneth hys hande, and layeth it euer vpon me.

My flesche and my skynne hath he made olde and my bones hath he bruised. He hath buylded rounde about me, and closed me in with gal and trauayle. He hath set me in darkenesse, as they that be deade for euer.

He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath layed heuye lynkes vpon me. Though I crye and cal pitiously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped vp my wayes B with foure squared stones, and made my pathes croked. He layeth wayte for me lyke a Bere, & as a Lyon in a hole. He hath marred my wayes, and broken me in peces, he hath layed me waste altogether. He hath bent his bow and made me as it were a marke to shote at. The arowes of hys quyuer hath he shot euen into my reynes.
* I am laughed to scorne of all my people, they Jere.xx.b make songes vpon me all the daye longe. He hath lylled me wyth bytternesse, and gyuen me wormewod to drynke. He hath smytten my teth in peces with stones, and rolled me in the dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget al good thynges, I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde. O remembre yet my myserye, and my trouble, the wormewood and the gall.

Yea thou shalt remembre them, for my soule C melteth awaye in me. Whyle I consyder these thinges in my hert, I get a hope againe. Namely it is of ý Lordes mercyes that we are not vtterly consumed. For truly his pytiful cõpassion hath not ceassed. Newe mercyes shall the Lorde shewe vpon the earlye in the daye sprynge, (O Lorde) great is thy faythfulnesse.

* The Lord is my porcion, sayeth my soule Psal.xvi.a therfore wyll I hope in hym. O howe good is the Lord vnto thẽ, that put theyr trust in him, & to the soule that seketh after hym. The good man wyth stylnes and pacience, tarryeth for the health of the Lorde.

D O how good is it for a mā to take the yoke vpon hym from hys youth vp. He sytteth alone he holdeth styll, and dwelleth quyetly by hym selfe. He layeth hys face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to be any hope. He offreth his cheke to ỹ smyter. He wyl be cōtent wt reproues

i.reg.iii.b For the Lorde wyl not forsake for euer, * but though he punyshe hym: yet accordynge to the multitude of hys mercyes, he receyueth to grace agayne: For he doth not plage, and cast out the chyldren of men from hys herte.

To treade al the prysonners of the earth vnder hys fete. To moue the iudgement of man before the moost hyghest.

C To condempne a mā in hys cause. The Lord hath not pleasure in such thynges.

What is he then that sayeth: ther shuld some thynge be done wythout the Lordes commaundement. Out of the mouthe of the most hyghest goeth not euell and good?

Wherfore then murmureth the lyuyng mā? let hym murmure at hys owne synne.

Iob.xxvi.d Pla.xiiii.a * Let vs loke well vpon our owne wayes & remembre oure selues, and turne agayne to the Lorde. Let vs lyfte vp our hertes with our handes vnto the Lorde that is in heauen. We haue bene dissemblers, and haue offended, wylt thou therfore not be intreated? Thou hast couered

Eee.xxvi.d vs in thy wrathe, and persecuted vs, thou haste slayne vs wythout any fauoure. * Thou haste hyd thy selfe in a cloude, that oure prayer shulde not go thorowe. Thou hast made vs outcastes, and to be despysed amonge the people. All oure enemyes gape vpon vs.

Feare, and pytie is come vpon vs, yea, deceyte and destruccion. * Whole ryuers of wa-

Tren.i.d ter gush out of myne eyes, for the great hurte of my people.

Myne eyes rūne, and can not cease, for there F is no rest. O Lord, when wylt thou loke downe from heauen, and consydre?

Myne eyes breake my herte because of all the doughters of my cytie. Myne enemyes hunted me out sharply, lyke a byrde, yea, and ỹ without cause. They haue put downe my lyfe into a pyt, and they haue cast stones vpon me. They poured water vpon my heade, then thought I: nowe am I vndone. I called vpon thy name, O lord, out of ỹ depe pyt. Thou hast herd my voice & hast not turned away thyn eares fro my syghynge & crienge. Thou hast enclined thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and haste sayde: feare not. Thou (O Lorde) hast mayntened the cause of my soule, and hast redemed my lyfe. O Lord thou hast sene my blasphemers, take thou G my cause vpon the. Thou hast wel consydered howe they go aboute to do me harme, and that all theyr counselles are agaynst me. Thou hast heard theyr despytfull wordes (O Lorde) yea, and all theyr ymaginacions agaynst me.

The lyppes of myne enemyes, and theyr deuyses that they take agaynste me, all the daye longe. Thou seyst also theyr settyng downe and theyr rysyng vp: they make theyr songes of no thynge but of me. Reward them (O Lorde) accordynge to the workes of theyr handes. Geue them an obstinate herte euē thy curse. Persecute them (O Lorde) wyth thyne indignacion, and rote them out from vnder the heauen.

and nacyons that are rounde about her, but she hath despised my iudgemētes more then ỹ Gen-

ward all the wyndes, and drawe out the swerde after them. Thus I wyl perfourme my indigna cyon, and set my wrath agaynst them, and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfylled myne D angre agaynst them, they shal knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche with a feruent gelousye haue

a gasynge and wondrynge stocke, amonge the heythen that lye about the. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and it shal come to passe, when I shote amonge them the perylous dartes of hungre, whiche shalbe but death. Yea, therfore shall

you. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

The. vi. Chapter.

This sheweth that the people shal be plaged for the synne of idolatrye. He prophecieth the repentaunce of the remnaūt of the people, and their deliueraunce. The destruction of the frowarde is prophesyed.

AND the worde of the Lord came vn A to me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the * mountaynes ezec. xxxvi. a of Israel, that thou mayest prophe cye vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleyes and dales. Be-holde I, I my selfe I saye: wyll bringe a swerd ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I wyll cast downe your alters, and breake downe your ymages. Youre slayne men wyll I laye before your goddes, and the deed carcasses of the chyldren of Israel wyll I cast before theyr idolles, your bones wyl I destroye rounde aboute your aulters and dwellyng places.

The cyties shal be desolate, the hyll chapels B layed waste: your aulters destroyed and broken your goddes cast downe, and taken away, your tēples layed euen with the grounde, your owne workes cleane roted out. Your slayne men shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe, how that I am ỹ Lorde. Those that be amonge you, and haue escaped the swearde, wyl I leaue amonge the Gentyles, for I wyll scattre you among the nacions. And they that escape of you shal thynke vpon me among the heythen, where they shalbe in captiuitie. As for that whorish & vnfaythfull hertes of theyrs, wherewith they runne awaye fro me: I wyll breake it: yea, and put out those eyes of theyrs, that commyt fornicacion with theyr idols.

Then shal they be ashamed and displeased C with theyr selues, for the wickednesses and ab-hominacyons whiche they haue done: and shall learne to knowe that I am the Lorde, how that it is not in vayne, ỹ I the Lorde spake, to bryng suche mysery vpon them. The Lorde sayd more ouer vnto me: Smyte thyn handes togyther, & stampe with thy feet, and saye: Wo worth al the abhominacions and wyckednesses of the house of Israel, for bycause of them they shal perisshe with the swerde, with hungre, and with pestilence. Whoso is farre of shal dye of the pestilence he that is nye at hande, shall perysshe with the swerde: and the other that remayne and that are besieged, shal dye of hungre.

Thus wyll I satysfy my wrathful displea- D sure vpon them. And so shal ye learne to knowe that I am the Lorde, when your slayne men lye amonge your idolles, and about your aulters, vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountanes,
among all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes euen in the places where they dyd sacrifyce to al theyr idols. I wil stretch myne hande out vpon them, and wyll make ỹ lande waste. So that it shal lye desolate and voyde, from the wildernes of Deblothah forth, thorow al theyr habitacōs to learne them for to knowe, ỹ I am the Lorde.

The. vii. Chapter.

The ende of all the lande of Israel shall sodaynly come.
The cause of the destruction therof. The prophet is commaunded to shewe the summe of the euyls that are at hād.

The

A The woꝛde of the Loꝛde came vnto me on this maner: The I call, O ỹ sõne of man. Thus sayth the Loꝛd God vnto the lande of Israel: The ende cõmeth vpon the lande of Israel: yea, verely the ende cõmeth vpon all ỹ four cozners of ỹ lande. But now shall the ende come vpon the, foꝛ I wyll sende my wꝛath vpon the, and wyl punish the accoꝛding to thy wayes, and reward ỹ after all thyne abhominaciõs. Myne eye shal not ouerse the, neyther wyll I spare the but reward the accoꝛdynge to thy wayes, and declare thyne abhominacions. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Loꝛde. Thus sayeth the Loꝛde God: Behold, one mysery and plage shal come after an other, the end is here. The ende (I saye) is come, it watched foꝛ the, beholde, it is come alreadye, thy destruction is earlye come a-B gaynst the, that dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicyon is harde by, and the crye shal not be as the soundynge agayne of the mountaynes. Therfoꝛe I wyll shoꝛtely poure out my soꝛe displeasure ouer the, and fulfyll my wꝛath vpon the. I wil iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abhominacions. *Myne eye shal not ouerse the neyther wyll I spare the: but reward the after thy wayes, and thyne abhominaciõs shalbe punished in ỹ myddes of the, to lerne you to know
C how that I am the Loꝛd that smyteth. Behold the daye is here, the daye is come, ỹ houre is run out, the rod flouryssheth, pꝛyde wareth grene, malicyous violence is growen vp, and the vngodlye waxen to a staffe. ¶ An apperaunce of ỹ similitude of god. Ezechiel is bꝛought to Ieruſalem in the spꝛyte. The Loꝛde sheweth the pꝛophet the ydolatryes of the house of Israel, and chefely of the pꝛeestes.

A IThappened, that in the syxt yere, ỹ fyfth daye of the syxt moneth, I sat in my house, and the loꝛdes of ỹ coũsayl of Juda wt me: and the hande of the Loꝛd god fell euen there vpõ me. And as I loked vp, * I sawe as it were a lyke- Ezech. i. e

the heery lockes of my heed, and the spyꝛite lyft me vp bet wyxt heauen and earth: and bꝛought me in a vysion to Ieruſalem, into the entry of ỹ inner poꝛte that lyeth towarde the Noꝛth: there stode an ymage, with whom he ỹ hath all thynges in his power was very wꝛoth.

And beholde, the gloꝛye of the God of Israel C was in the same place: euen * as I hadde sene it a Ezech. i. a foꝛe in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, O lyft vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the Noꝛth. Then lyft I vp myne eyes towarde the Noꝛth, and beholde: beyde the poꝛte noꝛthwarde, ther was an aulter made vnto the ymage of pꝛouocacion in the verye entrynge in. And he sayde furthermoꝛe vnto me: Thou sõne of man, seest thou what these do? Seest thou ỹ greate abhominacions that the house of Israel cõmitteth in this place, to dꝛyue me from my sãctuary? But turne the about, and thou shalte se yet grea yet greater abhominaciõs. And with ỹ brought he me to the courte gate: and when I loked, beholde, there was an hole in the wall. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou son of man, dygge thorowe the wall. And when I dygged thorow the wall behold, there was a doze. And he sayde vnto me go thy way in, and loke what wycked abhomynacions they do here. So I went in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes and beastes, all ydols and abhominacyons of the house of Israel, paynted euery one rounde about the wall: There stode also before the ymages. *lxx. lordes of the coũsel of ỹ house Ezo.xbiiii Num.xi.d of Israel, and in the mydst of them stode Jaazanih, the sonne of Saphan. And euery one of thẽ had a censour in his hand, and out of the insence there went a smoke as it had ben a cloude.

E Then sayde he vnto me: thou sonne of man, hast thou sene what the senatours of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chambre? Job.xxii.b *For they saye: Tushe, the Lorde seeth vs not, Esa.xxix.c the Lorde regardeth not ỹ world. And he sayde Jer.xxiii.d vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt Ezech.ix.c se yet greater abhominacions that they do. And with that he brought me to the doze of the porte of the Lordes house towarde the norty. And beholde, there sat women mournyng for Tamus. Thã sayd he vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Turne the about, and thou shalte F se yet greater abhominacions then these are. And so he brought me into the inwarde court of the Lordes house: And behold, at the porte of the Lordes house, betwyxte the fore entrye and the aultar, there were xxv. men, that tourned theyr backes vpon the temple of the Lorde, and theyr faces towarde the Easte, and these worshypped the Sunne.

G And he sayde vnto me: hastte thou sene this, thou sonne of man? thynketh the house of Juda that it is but a tryfle, to do these abhominaciõs, here? Shulde they fyll the lande full of wyckednesse, and vndertake to prouoke me to angre? Yea, and purposely to cast vp theyr noses vpon me? Therfore wyll I also do some thynge in my wrathful displeasure, so that myne eye shall not prouer.i.c ouerse them, neyther wyll I spare them. * Yea, Jerem.xi.c xviii.b and though they crye in myne eares with a loud Mich.iii.a voyce, yet wyll I not heare them.

¶ The.ix. Chapter.

¶ The destruction of ydolatrers, and the conuersion of the ryghtous. They that shalbe saued are marked. They that are vnmarked are slayne. A cõplaynt of the prophet for the destruction of the people.

A ND cryed also with a loude voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come. Heare ye rulers of ỹ cytie, euery mã with his weponed hãd to the slaughter. Then came there syxe men out of ỹ strete of the vpper port towarde the north, and euery man a weapon in his hande to the slaughter. There was one amongest them that had on hym a lynnen rayment, and a writers ynkhorne by his syde.

These wente in, and stode besyde the brasen B aulter: for the glorye of the Lorde was gone a- Exo.xl.c Naum.iv.c waye from the *Cherub which was vpon hym and was come downe to the threshold of ỹ house xli.re.viii.b and he called the man ỹ had the lynnen rayment vpon him, and the writers ynkhorne by his side and the Lorde sayd vnto hym: go thy way thorowe the citie of Jerusalẽ, and set a marke vpon the foreheades of them that mourne and are sory for all the abhominacions that be done therein. And to the other he sayde, that I myght heare. *Go ye after hym thorowe the cytie, slaye, ouer Jud.ii.a se none, spare none: kyll, and destroye both olde men and ponge, maydens, chyldren and wyues.

But as for those, that haue the marke vpon C them, se that ye toutch them not: *and begynne Jere.xxb.d xliv.b at my sanctuary. Then they beganne at the el- i.pet.iiii.c ders, which were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto them: When ye haue defyled the temple, & fylled the courte with the slayne, then go youre waye forth. So they went out, and slue downe thorowe the cytie. Nowe when they had done ỹ slaughter, and I yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lord God, wylt thou then destroy al the residue of Israel, in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wyckednesse of the house of Israel & Juda is very great D so that the land is ful of bloude and the cytie ful of vnrighteousnesse. For they saye: *Tushe, the Job.xxii.b Esa.xxix.c. Ec.xviii.d Lorde regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not. Therfore wyl I vpon them †myne eye shal not †Eze.viii.a ouerse them: neyther wyl I spare them, but wyl recompence theyr wickednesse vpon theyr hedes And behold, the man that had the lynen raymẽt vpon him and the writers ynkhorne by his side tolde al the matter how it happened, and sayd: Lorde as ỹ hast cõmaunded me, so I haue done.

¶ The.x. Chapter.

¶ Of the man that toke hote burnyng coles out of the myddle of the wheles of the Cherubins, in token of the burning of Jerusalem. A rehearsall of the vysyon of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the Cherubyns.

AND as I loked, behold, in the firma- A mẽt that was aboue the Cherubins there appered ỹ similitude of a stole Ezech.i.a of Saphir vpon them: *Then sayd he that sat therin, to him that had ỹ lynen raymẽt vpon him: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins, and take thyne hande full of hote coles out from betwene the Cherubins and cast them ouer the citie. And he crept in, that I myght se.

Nowe the Cherubins stode vpon the ryght syde of the house when the man went in, and the ii.pa.viii.a cloude fylled the inner courte. *But the glorye of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubyns, and came vpon the threshelde of the house: so that ỹ temple was full of cloudes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lordes glorye: Yea, and the sounde of the Cherubins winges was herde into the forecourte, lyke as it had ben the voyce of the almyghtye God, when he speaketh. Now when he had bydden the man that was clothed in lynnen, to go and take the hote coles from the mydst of the wheles which were vnder the Cherubins: he went and stode besyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forth his hande from vnder the cherubins, vnto the fyre ỹ was

Betwene the Cherubyns, and toke thereof, and gaue it vnto him that had on the linen rayment in his hande: which toke it, and went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lykenesse of a mans hande. I sawe al so four wheles besyde the Cherubynnes, so that by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the fassyon of the precyous stone of Tharsis: yet, (vnto the syght) they were all foure of one fassyon, as yf one whele had bene in an other.

C When they went forth, they went all foure togyther, not turnynge aboute in theyr goinge
But where ỹ first went, thither went they after also, so ỹ they turned not about in theyr goinge.
Theyr whole bodyes, theyr backes, theyr han-des and winges: yea, and the wheles also wer al full of eyes rounde about them all foure. And I Ezech.i.b hearde hym cal the wheles. *Euery one of them had four faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an eagle, and they were lyf ted vp aboue. This is the beaste that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubins went the wheles wēt with them, and when the Cherubins shoke theyr winges to lyft them sel-ues vpward, the wheles remayned not behinde but were with them also. Shortelye when they stode these stode also. And when they were lyf-ted vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them for the spyrite of lyfe was in the wheles.

D Ezech. xi.d xliii.a * Then the glorye of the Lorde was lyfte vp from the threshold of the temple and remayned vpon the Cherubyns: And the Cherubyns flackered with theyr wynges, and lyfte them selues vp frō ỹ earth: so that I sawe when they wente and the wheles with them. And they stode at ỹ eastesyde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glory of the Lord was vpon thē
This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israel by the water of Cobar. And I perceyued that it was the Cherubyns. Euery one had four faces, and euery one four winges, & vnder their wynges, as it were mens handes. Nowe the fy-gure of their faces was euen as I had sene them by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of them. Euery one in his goinge went strayght forwarde.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

¶ Who they were that seduced the people of Israel. Agaynst persed abrode. The renuyng of the herte cōmeth of God, otherwyse can we not walke in hys commaundementes.

He threatneth them that leane vnto theyr owne cōsels

A Moreouer, the spirite of the Lord lift ne vp, and brought me vnto ỹ east porte of the Lordes house. And be-holde there were .xxv. men vnder ỹ dore amonge whom I sawe Jaazniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sōne of Bananiah, the rulers of ỹ people. Then sayd the Lorde vnto me. Thou son of man, these men ymagine myschefe, and a wycked cōsayle take they in this cytie, sayinge: Tushe, there is no destruction at hande, let vs buylde houses: this Je rusalem is the cauldron, and we be the flesshe.

Therfore shalte thou prophecye vnto them:
yea, prophecye shalte thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And with that fell the spirite of ỹ Lorde vpon me, and said vnto me: Speake, thus sayth B
the Lord: On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I know the ymaginacions of your hertes. Many one haue ye murthered in this cytie, and fylled the stretes full of the slayne Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: The slayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in the citye are the flesshe, and this citie is the cauldron:

of this citie and delyuer you into your enemyes hand, and wyl condempne you. Ye shalbe slayne in all the costes of Israel, I wyll be auenged of you: to lerne you to knowe that I am the Lord.
This cytie shall not be youre cauldron, neyther shal ye be the flesh therin: but in the costes of Israel wyll I punysshe you, that you may knowe that I am the Lord: in whose cōmaundementes ye haue not walked, nor kepte hys lawes: *but Leu.xviii.a
haue done after the customes of ỹ heythen, that Deut.xii.d

Now when I preached, Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah dyed. Then fel I downe vpon my C face and cried wt a loude voyce, sayinge: O Lord God, wylt thou then vtterly destroy all the rem naunt in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: thou sonne of mā, thy brethren, thy kynsfolke, and ỹ whole house of Juda which dwell at Jerusalem, saye: With drawe ye farre from the Lorde, for the lande is gyuen vs in possessyon. Therfore tell thē: Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll sende you far of among the Gentyles, and scattre you among the nacyons, and I wyll hallowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shall come. Tell them also Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll gather you agayne out of the nacyons, and bryng you from the countryes where ye be scatred, and I wyll gyue you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shall come thyther: And they shal take away all theyr ydols, and all theyr abhominacions from thence. *And I wyll gyue you one herte, and I D wyll plant a newe spyrite within your bowels. Jer. xxxi. f That stonye herte wyll I take out of youre Eze. xxxbis bodye, and gyue you a fleshly herte, that ye may walke in my cōmaundementes, and kepe myne ordynaunces, and do them: that ye maye be my people, and I your God. But loke whose hertes are disposed to folowe theyr abhominacyons & wicked liuinges those mens dedes wyl I bring vpon theyr owne heedes, sayeth the Lord God.
After this did the Cherubins lyft vp theyr win-ges, and the wheles went with them, and ỹ glory of the Lorde was vpon them. * So the glo- Eezech..x.a ry of the Lorde went vp from the middest of the xi.i.a cytie, and stode vpon the mount of the cytie, to-warde the East. *But the wynde toke me vp, & Ezec.viii.d in a vysion (which came by the spyrit of God) it xliii.a brought me agayne into Caldea among the pri-

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) make thy gere readye to flyt, and go forth by fayre daye lyght, that they may se. Yea, euen in theyr sight shalt thou go from thy place to an other place: yf peraduenture they wyll consyder, that they be a disobedient housholde. ¶ The.xiii.Chapter.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst false prophetes, which teache the people the counsayles of theyr owne hertes.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto A me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man Speake, prophecye agaynst those prophetes, that preache in Israel: and saye thou vnto them ẏ prophecye out of theyr owne hertes: Hear the worde of ẏ Lorde, thus sayth the Lord God:

eze.xxxiii.c

* Wo be vnto those foolysh prophetes ẏ folowe their owne spyryte, and speake where they se no thyng, O Israel, thy prophetes are like ẏ foxes vpõ the drye felde: For they stande not in ẏ gappes, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men myght abyde the battayl in the daye of the Lorde. Vayne thinges they se, & tell lyes, * to mayntayne theyr preachyngs withal. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in very dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Vayne vysions haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecyes, when ye saye: the Lorde hathe spoken it, where as I neuer sayde it.

Therfore thus sayth ẏ Lorde God: Wycause B youre wordes be vayne, and ye seke oute lyes. Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayeth the Lorde.

Myne

Myne handes shal come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, and preache lyes: they shal not be in the councel of my people, nor wrytten in the boke of the house of Israel, neyther shall they come in the lande of Israel: that ye maye knowe how that I am the Lorde God And that for bycause: they haue dysceyued my Jere.viii.b people, *and told them of peace, where no peace was. One setteth vp a walle, and they dawbe it wyth loose clay e.

Therfore tell them whyche dawbe it wyth vntempered morter, that it shall fal. *For there
Math.vii.c shall come a great shower of rayne, great hayle stones shal fall vpon it, & a sore storme of wynd shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shal it not thē be sayd vnto you: where is now the morter that ye dawbed it wyth all: Therfore thus sayeth ꝑ Lord God: I wyl breake out in my wrothful displeasure with a storme wind so that in myne anger there shal come a myghty shower of rayne, and hayle stones in my wrath, to destroye wythall.

C As for the wall that ye haue dawbed wyth vntempered morter, I wyll breake it downe, make it euen wyth the groūde: so that the foundacion therof shall remoue, and it shall fall, yea and ye youre selues shall perysshe in the myddest therof: to learne you for to know, that I am the Lorde: Thus wil I perfourme my wrath vpon thys wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then wyl I saye vnto you: the wal is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are ꝑ prophetes of Israel, which prophecye vnto the cytie of Jerusalem, and loke out visyons of peace for them, wher as no peace is sayeth the Lorde God. Wherfore, (O thou sonne of mā) set thy face agaynst the doughters of thy people, which prophecy out of their owne hertes: and speake thou, prophecy agaynst them and sayethus.

D Thus sayeth ꝑ Lord God: Wo be vnto you, that sowe pyllowes vnder al arme holes, & bolsters vnder the heades both of yonge and old to Wherfore thus sayeth ꝑ Lord God: Behold I wyl also vpō the pyllowes, wherwith ye catche the soules in flying: them wyl I take from your armes, and let the soules go that ye catch flying Your bolsters also wyl I teare in peces, and delyuer me people out of your hande, so that they shall come nomore in your handes to be spoyled and ye shal knowe that I am the Lord. C The.xiiii.Chapter.

C The Lorde denyeth his worde to the people for theyr synnes sake. The despysers of the worde doth the Lorde sometyme deceaue by false prophetes. A comforte of them that fled vnto Babylon.

A Here resorted *vnto me certayne of Ezech.xx.a the elders of Israel, and sat downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, these mē beare theyr vnclēnes in theyr hertes, and go purposely vpon the stomblinge blocke of theyr owne wyckednesse: shulde I then answere at theyr request? Therfore speake vnto them, and saye: thus sayth the Lorde God: Euery man of the house of Israell, that beareth hys vncleane Idolles in hys herte, purposynge to stomble in his owne wyckednes and cōmeth to a prophet, to enquyre any thynge at me by hym: vnto that man wyl I the Lorde my selfe gyue answere, accordyng to the multytude of his Idolles: that the house of Israel may be snared in theyr owne hertes, because they be cleane gone from me, for theyr abhominacions sakes. Wherfore, tell the house of Israell: thus Ezech.xx.c sayeth the Lorde God: * Be conuerted, forsake your Idolles, and turne your wyues from your fylthynesse, and turne your faces from all youre abhominacions.

B For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger) that sogeourneth in Israell, whyche departeth fro me, and carryeth Idolles in hys herte, purposynge to go styll stomblynge in hys owne wyckednesse, and commeth to a prophet, for to aske councell at me thorowe hym: vnto that man wyll I the Lorde gyue answere, by myne owne selfe. I wyl set my face agaynst that man, and wyll make hym to be an example for other, yea, and a comen byworde: & wyll roote hym out of my people, that he maye
C iii.re.xxii.b knowe howe that I am the Lord: *and yf that Accordynge to the synne of him that asketh, shall the synne of the Prophete be: that the house of Israell be led nomore from me thorowe erroure, and be nomore defyled in their wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I theyr God, sayeth the Lorde God.

D And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynste me, and goeth forth in wyckednesse: I wyll stretche out myne hande vpon

E Yf I bringe noysome beastes into ꝑ lande to waste it vp, and it be so desolate, ꝑ no man may go therin for beastes: yf these thre mē were also in the lande, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall saue neyther sonnes nor doughters, but be onely delyuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shalbe wast.

F Or yf I brynge a swerde into the lande, and charge it to go thorowe the lāde: so that I slay downe man and beast in it, and yf these thre men were therin: As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) they shal deliuer nether sonnes nor doughters, but only be saued them selues. Yf I sende a pestilence into the lande, and poure oute my sore indignacion vpon it in blood, so that I rote out of it both man and beast. And yf Noe, Daniel & Job were therin, as truely as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shal delyuer nether sonnes nor doughters, but saue theyr owne soules in theyr righteousnes. Beholde there shalbe a remnaunt saued therin, which shal bryng forth theyr sonnes and doughters. Beholde, they shal come forth vnto you, and ye shall se theyr waye, and what they take in hande; and ye shalbe comforted, as touchynge all the plages that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem. They shall comforte you, when ye se theyr waye and workes: and ye shal knowe, howe that it is not without a cause that I haue done so agaynst Jerusalē, as I dyd sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The.xv. Chapter:

¶ As the vnprofytable wood of the vyne tree is cast into the fyre, so sayeth he that Jerusalem shalbe brente.

A The worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man: What cōmety of the vyne amonge al other trees: and of the wylde vyne stocke amōge al other tymber of the groue Do men take wood of it, to make any worke wal? Or may there a nayle be made of it, to hange any thynge vpō? beholde, it is caste in the fyre to be brent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it the mydst is brent to asches. Is it mete then for any worke? No. Seynge then that it was mete B for no worke, beyng whole: much lesse may ther any thynge be made of it, whē the fyre hath consumed and brent it. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Lyke as I caste the vyne into ỹ fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wood: Euen so wyl I do wyth them that dwel in Jerusalem and set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume thē Ezech.xiii.e and xiv.b; * Then shal ye knowe, ỹ I am the Lorde, when I set my face agaynst them, and make the lande wast: because they haue so sore offended, sayeth the Lorde God.

The.xvi. Chapter.

¶ The prophete entendyng to speake of the abhominacions of Jerusalem, doth fyrst shewe the benefites of God toward it. Jerusalem is reproued of vnkyndnesse, for her fornicacion wyth Idolles. He iustifyeth the wyckednes of other people in comparyson of the synnes of Jerusalem. The cause of the abhompnacyons into whych the Sodomytes fell. Mercy is promysed to the repentaunt.

A Gayne the worde of the Lord spake vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man shew the cytie of Jerusalem their abhominacions, and say: thus sayeth ỹ Lord God vnto Jerusalē: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the lande of Canaan thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethite, thus was ỹ maner of thy birth. In the day of thy byrth when thou wast borne, ỹ stryng of thy nauel was not cut of: ỹ waste not bathed in water to make ỹ cleane: Thou wast nether rubbed wt salt, nor swadled in cloutes. No man regarded ỹ so much, as to do any of these thynges for the, for to shewe the such fauour, but ỹ wast vtterly cast out vpon ỹ felde: yea, despysed wast thou in the day of thy byrth. Then came I by ỹ and saw the troden downe in thyne owne blood and sayde vnto the: Lyue, although thou be defyled in thyne owne blood, yea, euē I (I tell the) sayde vnto the lyue, although thou be defyled in thyne owne blood. * So I plāted the, as ỹ blossom of ỹ felde thou arte growen vp, and waxen greate: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaunt beuty, thy brests are come vp, thy heere is goodlye growē, where as ỹ wast naked & bare afore. Ezay.b.a Jerr.xi.c

Nowe when I went by the, and loked vpon B the: behold, the tyme was come: yee, euen ỹ time to wowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer ỹ to couer thy dishonestye: yee: I made an oth vnto ỹ * and maryed my selfe with the (sayth the Lord God) & so thou becamest myne owne. Thē washed I the with water, and pourged thy blonde from the. I anoynted the with oyle, I gaue the chaūge of raymentes, I made the shoes of Taxus lether: I gyrded the about wyth whyt sylke: I clothed ỹ wyth kerchefes, I decked the wyth costly apparel, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpō thy fore heade, earerynges vpon thyne eares, & set a beutyful crowne vpon thyne heed. Thus wast thou decte wyth syluer and gold, & thy rayment was of fyne whyte sylke of nedle worke, and of dyuers colours. Thou dydest eat nothyng but simnels, honye and oyle: maruelous goodly wast ỹ and beutyful: yee euen a very quene waste thou. Jere.iii.a Ose.xii.c

In so muche ỹ thy beuty was spoken of amōge C the Hethen, for thou wast excellent in my beuty which I put vpon the, sayth ỹ Lorde God. But thou hast put confidence in thyne owne beuty, & playde the harlot: when thou hadst gotten the a name. Thou hast cōmytted whoredome with al that went by ỹ, and hast fulfylled theyr desyres: yea, thou hast taken thy garmētes of diuerse colours, & decte thyne altares therwith, wherupō thou myghtest fulfyll thyne whoredome, * and Jere.ii.iii. and.b.b of such a fashion, as neuer was done, nor shalbe * The goodly ornamētes & iewels which I gaue the of myne owne gold & syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymages therof, and cōmytted whoredome wythall. Thy garmentes of dyuerse coloures hast thou taken, and decte them therwith: myne oyle and incense hast thou sette before theym. My meate whych I gaue the, as symnels, oyle, honye: (to fede the withall) that hast ỹ set before them

And yet in all thy abhominacyōs and whoredomes, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, how naked and bare ỹ wast at that tyme, and trodē downe in thyne owne bloude. Eze.xvi.a * Thou hast played the whore also wyth the Assyrians, because thou waste insatiable: Yea, thou hast (I saye) with them played the harlot, and yet haddest not thou ynough. Thus haste thou furthermore cōmytted thy fornicacion frō the land of Canaan vnto the Chaldees, and yet thy luste not satisfyed. Howe obstinate is thyne herte (sayth the Lorde God) seynge thou dost al these workes of an erraunt whore: buyldynge thy stewes at the heade of euery strete, and thy brodell houses in all places? Thou hast not ben as another whore that holdeth scorne of a small rewarde, but a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, & taketh ōther in steade of her husbande. Gyftes are gyuē to al other whores, but thou gyuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: & offerest them gyftes, to come vnto the out of all places, and to cōmytte fornicacion with the. It is come to passe wyth the in thy whoredoms contrary to the vse of other wemen: yea, there hath no suche fornicacion bene commytted after the, seynge ỹ thou proferest gyftes vnto other, and no rewarde is geuen the: thys is a contrary thynge.
Therfore, heare the worde of the Lorde, O ỹ harlot, thus sayth the Lorde God: For so much as thou hast sette forth thy youth to whordome and dyscouered thy shame, thorowe thy whoredome wyth al thy louers, and with al the ydols of thy abhominacyons in the bloude of thy chyldren, * whome thou hast geuen them: Behold,

They
* shall burne vp thy houses, and punyshe the in iiii. Regū. the syght of many wemen. Thus wyll I make xxb.b thy whordom to ceasse, so that thou shalt geue out no more rewardes. Shuld I make my wrath to be styl, take my gelousye frō the, be contente and nomore to be dysplealed? seynge thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thynges? Beholde therfore, I wyl bryng thyne owne wayes vpon thyne heade, sayth the Lord God: howbeit I neuer dyd vnto the accordynge to thy wyckednes and all thy abhompynacions. Beholde, al they ỹ vse comen prouerbes, shal vse this prouerbe also agaynst the suche a mother, such a doughter.
Thou art euen thy mothers owne doughter that hath cast of her husbande and her chyldren: Yea, thou art the syster of thy systers, which for sake theyr husbandes and theyr chyldren. Your * mother is a Cethyte, and your father an Amorite. Eze.xvi.a Thyne eldest syster is Samaria, she & her doughters that dwel vpon thy left hande.
But thy yongest syster that dwelleth on thy F ryght hāde is Sodoma and her doughters. Yet haste ỹ not walked after theyr wayes, nor done after theyr abhominaciōs: but thou stodest a lytel and very smal tyme, and in all thy wayes ỹ hast bene more corrupt then they. As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God: Sodoma thy syster with her doughters, hath not done so euell, as ỹ and thy doughters. Beholde, * the synnes of thy Gene.xiii.c syster Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of xviii.b.c meate, aboūdaunce and ydelnesse: these thynges had she and her doughters. Besydes that they reached not theyr hande to the poore and nedye, but were proud, and dyd abhominable thinges before me: therfore I toke them awaye, as pleased me. Nether hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, * yea thou hast exceaded thē in wyckednesse: Iere. iii.c In so muche that in comparison of all the abhominacions which thou hast done thou hast made thy systers good wemen. Therfore thou (which dideste condempne thy syster) beare thyn owne shame, for thyne owne offences, that thou hast cōmytted, more obhominable then they did which in dede are more ryghteous then thou art be thou (I say) ashamed, and bear thy shameful rebuke: seyng that thou hast proued thy systers in comparyson of the ryghtwyse.
As for theyr captiuitie, namely the captiuite of Sodoma, and her doughters: ỹ captiuitie of Samaria & her doughters: I wyl bryng thē a gayne, so wyl I also bryng agayne thy captyuitie amonge them: that thou mayst take thyne owne confusion vpon the, and be ashamed of al that thou hast done, & to comforte them. Thus thy systers (namely) Sodoma and her doughters: Samaria and her doughters with thy selfe and thy doughters shalbe brought agayne to your olde estate. When thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wyckednes came to lyght: ye wolde st not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, vntyl the tyme that the Syriās wyth al theyr townes, and the Philistynes with all that lye roūde aboute them, brought the to shame and confusion: that thou myghtest beare thyne owne fylthines and abhominacion sayeth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God, I shulde (by ryght) deale wyth the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the oth, and broken the couenaūt Neuertheless, I wyll remember the couenaunt that I made wyth the in thy youth, in so muche that it shalbe an euerlastyng couenaunt: so that thou also remēbre thy wayes, and be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder and ponger systers, whō I wil make thy doughters, and that besyde thy couenaunte. * And so wyl I renue my couenaunt wyth the, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord, that ye mayst thynke vpō it: be ashamed, & excuse thyne owne confusyon nomore: when I haue forgeuē the, all that thou hast done, sayethe the Lorde God.

The. xvii. Chapter.

The parable of the two Aegles.

THe worde of ye Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou son of man: put forth * a darke speakyng & a parable, vnto the house of Israel, & saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God. There came a great * Aegle wyth great wynges: yea, wyth a myghtye longe body, & full of fethers of dyuers colours vpon the mounte of Libanus, and toke the hyest braūche from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of hys twygge, and caryed it into ye lande of Canaan, and set it in a citie of marchaūtes. He toke also of the seede of the lande, & planted it in a fruteful grounde, he brought it vnto great waters, & set it as a wyllow tree therby. Thē dyd it growe, and was a great vyne stock, but lowe by the grounde whose braunches turned into it selfe, and the rootes of it were fastened vnder it, thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossoms, & spred out braūches.

Ezech. xvii. a
Dan. vii. a

B But there was another Aegle, a greate one, whyche had great wynges & many fethers: and beholde, the rotes of this vyne had an hōger after hym, & spred out hys braunches toward him that he myght water her wyth ye orchyard that he had planted. Neuertheles, it was plāted vpon a good grounde besyde great waters: so that (by reason) it shulde haue brought out braunches and frute, and haue bene a goodlye vyne.

C Speake thou therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: Shal thys vyne prosper? shal not hys rootes be plucked oute, hys frute be broken of, hys grene braunches wyther and fade away? yea, without ether stroge arme or many people, shal it be plucked vp by ye rotes. Behold, it was planted: shal it prosperе therfore? Shal it not be dryed vp and wythered: yea, euen in ye shutynge out of his blossoms, assone as ye east wind bloweth?

D Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Speake to ye froward housholde: knowe ye not, what these thynges do sygnifye? Tell them: Behold, * ye kyng of Babilon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kynge and his prynces, and led them to Babilon. He toke of the kinges sede, and made a couenaunt wyth hym, and toke an othe of hym: The prynces of the lande toke he wyth hym also, that the lande myght be holden in subiection, and not to rebell, but kepe the couenaunte, and fulfyll it. But he fell from hym, and sente hys ambassytours into Egypte, that he myghte haue horses and muche people.

iiii. Regum xxiiii. c

Shulde that prospere? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth suche thynges? Or shulde he escape, that breaketh hys couenaunt? As truly as I lyue sayth the Lorde God, he shall dye at Babylon, in the place where the kynge dwelleth, ye made hym kynge: whose othe he hath despysed, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Neyther shall Pharao wyth hys great hoost and multytude of people, mayntayne hym in the war: whē they cast vp dytches, & set vp bulworkes to destroye muche people: For seynge he hath despysed the othe, and broken the couenaunte (where as he yet gaue his hande therupon) and done all these thynges, he shal not escape.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: As truly as I lyue, I wyl brynge myne othe ye he hath despysed, and my couenaunt that he hath brokē vpon hys owne heade. * I wyll cast my nette aboute hym, and catch hym in my yarne. To Babylon wyl I cary hym, there wyl I punyth him because of the great offēce that he made me. As for those that fle from hym out of the host, they shalbe slayne wyth ye sweard. The residue shal be scatered towarde al the wyndes: and ye shall knowe that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Ezec. xii. b and. xxiii. a

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl also take a braunche from an hye Cedre tree, and wyll set it, and take the vppermost twygge, that yet is but tender, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Syon wyll I plante it, that it may brynge forth twygges, and geue frute, and be a great Cedre tree: so that all maner of foules maye buylde in it, and make theyr neastes vnder the shadowe of hys braunches.

G

And all the trees of the felde shal knowe that I the Lorde haue brought downe the hye tree, & set the low tre vp: that I haue dryed vp ye grene tree, & made the drye tre to florysche. Euen I the Lorde ye spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

¶ The.xix. Chapter.

¶ The captyuyte of Jeohahaz and of Jehoachin is sygnyfyed by thy lyons whelpes, and by the lyon. He setteth oute the prosperyte of the cytye of Jerusalem that is past, and ẏ mysery therof that is present.

BUt thou sõne of mã mourne thou for A the prynces of Israel, and say. Wherfore lay thy mother ẏ lyoneesse amõge the lyons, and norished her põge ones amõge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lyon, it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The heathen
B hearde of hym, and toke hym in theyr nets, and brought hym in chaynes vnto ẏ lãde of Egypt.

Nowe when the damme sawe, that all her hope and comforte was away, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a lyon of hym: wheych wente amonge the lyons, and became a fearse lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed theyr palaces, and made theyr Cyties waste. In so muche that the whole lande and euery thynge therin, were vtterlye desolate, thorowe the very voyce of hys roarynge.

C Then came the heathen together on euerye syde out of al countrees agaynst him, layd their nettes for hym, and toke him in theyr pytte. So iiii.re.xxba *they bounde hym wyth cheynes, and brought Je.xxxix.a hym to the kynge of Babylon: wheych put hym and.lii.a. in prison, that hys voyce shulde nomore be herd vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a vyne in thy bloud, plãted by ẏ water syde: her frutes and braũches are growẽ out of many waters, her stalkes were so strõge that men myght haue made staues therof for scepters: she grewe so hye in her stalkes.

So when men sawe that she exceaded the heygth & multitude of her braunches, she was rooted oute in displeasure, and caste downe to the grounde. The Easte wynde dryed vp her frute, her stronge stalkes were broken of: wythered & brent in the fyre. But nowe she is planted in the wyldernesse, in a drye and thyrsty groũde. And there is a fyre gone oute of her stalkes, whyche hathe brente vp her braunches and her frute: so that she hathe no mo stronge stalkes, to be staues for offycers. Thys is a pytious and myserable thynge.

¶ The.xx. Chapter:

¶ The Lorde denyeth that he wyll answere them when they praye for the offence of vnkyndnesse whyche he here obiecteth. He promyseth that hys people shall returne from captyuyte. By the wood that shulde be brente, is sygnifyed the burnynge of Jerusalem.

A Exo.xliij.a

IN the seuenth yeare the tenth daye of ỹ fyfth moneth, *it happened, that certayne of the elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came ỹ word of the Lorde vnto me on thys maner: Thou sonne of man: speake vnto the elders of Israell, & saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: are ye come hyther to aske any thinge at me? As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll gyue you no answere. Wylte thou not reproue them (thou sonne of man) wylte thou not reproue them? Shewe them the abhominacions of theyr forefathers and tell them.

B Exod.iii.b

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the daye when I chose Israel, & lyft vp myne hande vpõ the sede of the house of Jacob, & shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea, when I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, & sayd: I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye that I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, to brynge them out of ỹ lande of Egypte, into a lande that I had prouyded for them, which floweth with mylke and hony, and is a pleasaunt lande amonge all other.

* Deu.viii.a

Then sayd I vnto them. * Caste awaye euerye man the abhominacions that he hath before hym and defyle not youre selues wyth the ydolles of Egypte, for I am the Lorde your God.

But they rebelled against me, and wold not folowe me: to caste awaye euery man the abhominacions of hys eyes, and to forsake the ydols of Egypte. Then I made hym to poure myne indignacion ouer them, and to satisfye my wrath vpon them: yea, euen in the middest of the lande of Egypt. But I wold not doit: for my names sake: that it shulde not be vnhalowed before the heathen, amonge whom they dwelt, & amonge whome I shewed my selfe vnto them, ỹ I wold bryng them out of the lande of Egypte. Nowe when I had caryed them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wyldernesse: I gaue them my cõmaundementes, and shewed thẽ my lawes, * whych who so kepeth shall lyue in them: I gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a token betwyxte me & them, & therby to know that I am the Lorde, whych halowe them. And yet ỹ house of Israel rebelled agaynst me in the wyldernesse, they wolde not walke in my commaundementes, they haue cast away my lawes (which who so kepeth shal lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

* Then I made me to poure out myne indignacion vpon them: and to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake, lest it shuld be dishonoured before the Heathen, from the whych I had caryed them awaye. But I swore vnto them in ỹ wyldernesse that I wold not bryng them into ỹ lãde, which I gaue them: a lãde that floweth wyth mylke & hony, and is a pleasure of al landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my cõmaundemenees, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for their hert was gone after their ydols. Neuertheles, myne eye spared them, so ỹ I wold not vtterly slaye them, & consume them in the wyldernesse. Moreouer, I said vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: * walke not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe not theyr ordynaũces, & defyle not your selues wt theyr ydolles for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes and doo them, halowe my Sabbothes, * for they are a token betwixte me and you, that ye may knowe how that I am the Lorde your God. Notwythstandynge, theyr sonnes * rebelled agaynst me also, they walked not in my statutes, they kepte not my lawes to fulfyl them (which he that doth shal lyue in thẽ) nether halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Thẽ I made me againe to poure out myne indignacion ouer them, & to satisfye my wrath vpõ them in the wyldernesse. Neuertheless, I withdrewe my hãde for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amõge the hethen, before whom I had brought them forth I lyft vp myne hande ouer them also in the wildernesse, that I wold scater them amonge the Heathen, and strawe them amonge the nacions, because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast aside my cõmaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabbothes, and lyfte vp theyr eyes to theyr fathers Idols. Wherfore I gaue them also cõmaundementes not good, & lawes thorowe the whych they shulde not lyue, and I vnhalowed them in theyr owne gyftes * (when I appoynted for my selfe all theyr fyrst borne) to make them desolate: that they myght knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

The.xxi. Chapter.

The threateneth the swearde, that is to saye, destruccion to the cytie of Jerusalem. He sheweth the fall of kynge Zedekiah. He is commaunded to prophecye the destrucpon of the chyldzen of Ammon. After the slaughter of other, at the laste the Lozde threateneth death vnto Nabuchodonosoz hym selfe.

THe wozde of the Lozde came to me, A sayenge: Thou sonne of mã, set thy face towarde Jerusalem, speake against the Sanctuary, and prophecye agaynst the lande of Israel, say to the lande of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lozde: Beholde, I wyll vpon the, and wyll dzawe my swearde out of the sheath, & rote out of the both the ryghteous and the wycked. Seyng thẽ that I wyl rote out of the both the ryghteous & wycked, therfoze shall my swearde go oute of hys sheath agaynst all flesche from the Nozth to the South: that al flesche may knowe how that I ỹ Lozde haue dzawen my swearde out of ỹ sheath and it shall not be put in agayne.

Mourne therfoze (O thou son of man) that B thy loynes cracke wythal, yea mourne bytterly foz them in theyz pzesence. And yf they saye: wherfoze mournest thou? Then tell them: foz ỹ tydynges that cõmeth, at the whyche al hertes shall melte, all handes shalbe letten downe, all stomackes shall faynte, and all knees shal waxe feble. Beholde, it commeth and shal be fulfylled sayeth the Lozde God.

Agayne, the wozde of the Lozde came vnto C me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophecy, and speake. Thus sayth ỹ Lozde God: speake. The swearde, the swearde is sharpened and wel scoured. Sharpened is it foz the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be bzyght. Shal we then make myzth? Agaynst the * trybe of my sonne it is gone fozth destroyeng al trees. Thus thorowe her whordome, she cleued vnto al the yong men of Assiria. Yea, she was mad vpon them, and defyled her selfe with all theyr ydols. Neither ceassed she from the fornicacyon that she vsed wt the Egyptians: for in her youth they lay with her, they brosed the brestes of her maydenheed, and poured theyr whordom vpon

Thus wyl I make an ende of thy fylthynesse
E and whordome, which thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypte: so that thou shalte tourne thyne eyes nomore after thē and cast thy minde nomore vpon Egypt. For thus sayth ỹ Lorde: beholde, I wyl delyuer the into the handes of them, whom thou hatest: yea, euen into the handes of them with whom thou hast fulfylled thy lust which shal deale cruelly with the:

All thy labour shal they take with them, and leaue the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthy whordome shall come to lyghte. All these thynges shall happen vnto the bycause of thy whordome which thou hast vsed amonge ỹ Gentiles, with whose ydolles thou hast defiled thy selfe. Thou hast walked in the waye of thy sister, therfore wyl I gyue her cup in thy hand.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou shalte drinke of thy sisters cuppe, howe depe and farre

Thou shalt be ful of dronkennesse and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy syster Samaria is a cuppe of destruction and wastynge: the same shalt thou drynke, and suppe it out euen to the dregges: yea thou shalt eat vp the brokē peces of it, and so teare thyne owne brestes. For euen I haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

F Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. For somoche as thou hast forgotten me and cast me aside behynde the, so beare now thyne owne filthinesse and whordome. The Lorde sayd moreouer vnto me: Thou son of man, wylt thou not reproue Oholah and Oholibah? Shewe them their abhominaciōs namely that they haue broken their wedlocke, and stayned their handes with blonde: yea, euen with their ydolles haue they commytted aduoutry *and offred them by the fyre their owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whom they had borne vnto me. Yea, & this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defiled my sāctuary in the same day, and haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For when they had slayne their childrē for their ydolles, they came the same daye into my sanctuary to defyle it.

And they went into her as vnto a cōmen harlot. Euē so went they (I say) to Oholah and Oholibah those fylthy women. Dal ye ỹ loue vertue and ryghtousnesse, iudge them, Leui.xx.b Eze.xbi.d punysh them: *as aduoutrers and murtherers, ought to be iudged and punyshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloud is in their handes. They shal slay their sonnes and doughters and burne vp their houses with fyre.

Thus wyl I destroy all suche fylthinesse out of the lande: that all women may learne, not to do after your vnclennesse.

And so they shall laye their fylthinesse vpon your owne selues, and ye shalbe punished for the synnes that ye haue cōmitted with your ydols, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

¶The.xxiiii.Chapter.

¶ He proueth the fyrynge of Jerusalem by a parable of a sethyng pot. The parable of Ezechiels wyfe being dead whych he after expoundeth.

IN the nynthyere, in the tēth moneth A the tenth daye of the moneth came ỹ word of the Lorde vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, wryte vp the name of this day: yea, euen the houre of this present day, when the kyng of Babilon set him selfe agaynst Jerusalē. Shewe that obstinat household *a parable and speake vnto thē ezec.xbii.a Thus sayth the Lorde God: Get the a *pot, set ezech.xi.b it on, and power water into it: put all the peces togyther in it all the good peces: the loyne and the shulder, and fyll it with the best bones. Take one of ỹ best shepe, and an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well, and let the bones seeth well therin. With that sayde the Lorde God on this Mali.iii.c maner. *Wo be vnto the bloudy cytie of ỹ pot, Abac.ii.b where vpon the rustinesse hangeth, & is not yet scoured away. Take out the peces that are in it one after an other: there neade no lottes be caste therfore, for the bloud is yet in it. Upō a playne dry stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the grounde that it myght be couered with duste. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloude vpon a playne dry stony rocke, bicause it shuld not be hyd, and that I myght bring my wrathful indignacion and vengeaunce vpon her.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde God: O wo be vnto that bloudthyrstie citie, for whom euen I my selfe wyll make a great fyre and set moche wood, and kyndle the fyre, and seeth the flesh, & C spyce the pot, so ỹ the very bones shalbe brent. Moreouer, I wyl set the pot emptye vpon the coles, so that his metall shalbe brent, and molten also for heate, and the filthinesse of it shalbe molten in it, and the drosse of it shalbe cōsumed. Thou takest great payne this to defyle thy selfe And it wyll not be pourged from the excedynge drosse in it: but thorowe fyre shall the drosse of it be purifyed. In thy filthinesse euen in the mischeuous dedes thou dost contynue, and bicause thy filthinesse is abhominable, for I haue clēsed the but thou art not clensed. Thou shalt not be purged from thyne vnclēnesse til I haue poured my wrathful indignacion vpō the. Euen I ỹ Lord haue so deuysed. Yea, it is come therto alreadye that I wyll do it: I wyll not goo backe, I wyll not spare, I wil not be entreated: but according to thy wayes and ymaginacions thou shalt be punyshed: sayth the Lorde God. And the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne E of man beholde, I wyll take away the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plage: yet shalte thou neyther mourne nor wepe, nor water thy chekes: therfore thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone but vse no deedly lamentacion. Hold on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes vpō thy feet, couer not thy face, & eate no mourners breed. So I spake vnto the people bytymes in the myrnynge, and F at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte morowe, I did as I was cōmaunded, and ỹ people sayde vnto me, wylt thou not tell vs what this signifieth toward vs, for this thou dost for our sake. G shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eat no mourners breed: youre bonnettes shall ye haue vpon your heedes, and shoes vpon your feet. Ye shall neither mourne noz wepe, but in your synnes ye shalbe sozowfull, and one repent with an other. Thus Ezechiel is your shewetokē. Fozlyke as ye haue done, so (when this cōmeth) ye shal do also: that ye maye learne to knowe that I am the Lozde God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man In the day whē I take from them their power, their ioye and honour, the lust of theyz eyes, the burthen of their lyues: namely theyz sonnes and doughters, shal not this be knowen? ¶ The wozde of the Lozde vpon the sonnes of Ammon, which reioyced at the fall of Jerusalem. Agaynst Moab and Seyr. agaynst Idumea, agaynst the Philistynes.

A The wozd of the Lozde came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, let thy face agaynste ỹ *Ammonites, prophecy vpō them, and saye vnto the Ammonytes: heare the wozd of the Lozde God. Thus saeyth the Lozde God: Fozsomoche os thou speakest ouer my sanctuarye. A, ha, I trowe it be now suspended: and ouer ỹ lande of Israel: I trowe it be now desolate: yea, and ouer the house of Juda, I trow they be now led away prisoners: Behold, I wyl delyuer the to the people of the east, that they may haue the in possessiō: these shall set theyz castels and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, and dzynke vp thy mylke. As foz Rabath, I wyll make of it a stall foz camels and of Ammon a shepefolde and ye shall knowe that I am the Lozde.

B Fozthus sayth the Lozde God: In somoche as thou haste clapped with thyne handes, and stāped with thy feet: yea, reioyced in thyne hert ouer the lande of Israel with despite: beholde, I wyl stretche oute myne hande ouer the also, and delyuer the, to be spoyled of the Heythen, & rote the out from among the people, and cause the to be destroyed out of all landes: yea, I wyll make the to be layd wast, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lozde.

Thus sayth the Lozde God: Fozsomoche as Therfoze beholde, I wyll open the syde af Moab, and take away theyz strength theyz cyties, and chefe coostes of theyz lande, whiche are the pleasures of thy countrye. Euen thus wyll I punysh Moab also that they maye knowe how that I am the Lozde.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lozde God. Bycause that Edom hath auenged and eased hym selfe vpon the house of Juda, & hath done great offence, and auenged him selfe vpon them therfoze thus sayth the Lozde: I wyll reache out my hande vpon Edom: and take awaye man and beast out of it. From Theman vnto Dedā wyl I make it desolate: they shalbe slayne with the swerde thozowe my people of Israel wyll I auenge me agayne vpon Edom, they shal handle hym accozdyng to my wzath and indignaciō, so that they shall knowe my vengeaunce sayth the Lozde God. Thus sayth the Lozde God: Fozsomoche as the *Philistines haue done this: namelye taken vengeaunce with despitefull stomackes, and of an olde euyll wyll set them selues to destroye, therfoze thus sayeth the Lozde God: Beholde, I wyl stretche out myne hande ouer the Philistines, and destroye the destroyer, and cause al the remnaunt of the see coost to perish. A great vengeaunce wyll I take vpon them, and punysche them cruelly: that they maye knowe how that I am the Lozde which haue auenged me of them.

The.xxvii. Chapter.

C The prophet is moued to bewayle the deſolatiõu of Tyꝛus He ſetteth out the pꝛayſe of Tyꝛus foꝛ the hauntyng of marchauntes thereto.

A Ezec. xxi.a xxviii. The woꝛd of the Loꝛd came vnto me ſaying: O thou ſon of man, make a lamentable cõplaynt vpon *Tyꝛe and ſaye vpõ Tyꝛe: thou which art a poꝛt of the ſee, that occupieſt with moche people, and many yles: thus ſpeaketh the Loꝛde God, O Tyꝛe, thou haſte ſayde: what I am a noble citie, thy boꝛders are in the myddeſt of ẏ ſee, and thy buylders haue made the maruelous goodlye. All thy tables haue they made of Cypꝛe trees of ẏ moũt Sanyꝛ. From Libanus haue they taken Cedꝛe trees, to make ẏ maſtes, and the okes of Baſan to make the rowers.

B Thy boꝛdes haue they made of yuery, and of coſtly wood out of ẏ yle of Cethym. Thy ſayle was of dyuers colours, ſmall nedle woꝛke oute of the lande of Egypt, to hange vpon thy maſte and thy hangynges of yelowe ſylke, purple, out of the yles of Eliſah. They of Sydon and Arnard were thy maryners, and ẏ wyſeſt in Tyꝛe were thy ſhipmaſters. The eldeſt and wyſeſt at Gebal were they that amended and ſtopped thy ſhyppes. All ſhyppes of the ſee with theyꝛ ſhypmen occupyed theyꝛ marchaundyſe in the. The Perſes, Lidians & Phutens were in thyne hoſt, and helped the to fyght, theſe hanged vp theyꝛ ſhyldes and helmettes with the, theſe ſet foꝛthe thy beautye.

They of Arnad were with thyne hooſt roũde aboute thy walles: and the Pygmenians were C thy watchemen vpon thy towers, theſe hanged vp theyꝛ quyuers rounde about the walles, and made ẏ maruelous goodly. Tharſis occupied wt the in all maner of wares, in ſyluer, yꝛon, tynne and leade, and made thy market greate. Jauan Tubal, & Meſech were thy marchaũtes, which bꝛought the men and oꝛnamentes of metall foꝛ thy occuppyng. They of the houſe of Thogarma bꝛought vnto the at ẏ tyme of thy marte, hoꝛſe, Ezec.xxv.f hoꝛſmen and mules. They of *Dedan were thy marchaũtes: and many other yles that occupied with the, bꝛought the wethers, elephant bones, and Pecockes foꝛ a pꝛeſent. The Sirians occuppyed wt the bycauſe of thy dyuers woꝛkes, and increaſed thy marchaundyſe, with Smaragdes with ſcarlet, with nedle woꝛke, with whyte lynen cloth, with ſylke, and with chꝛyſtall.

Juda and the lande of Iſrael occuppyed with D the, and bꝛought vnto thy markettes wheat of Minith, and Paneg, balme, hony, oyle, and triacle. Damaſcus alſo vſed marchaundyſe with the in the beſt wyne of Helbon, and with wol by cauſe thy occuppying was ſo greate, & thy wares ſo many. Dan, Jauan, & Meſal, haue bꝛought vnto thy markettes, yꝛon redy made, with Caſſia and Calamus, accoꝛding to thyne occupiig, Dedan occuppyed wt the in fayꝛe tapeſtry woꝛke and cuſchyns. Arabia, and all the pꝛinces of Cedar haue occuppyed with the, in ſhepe, werhers, and gootes.

The marchauntes of Seba and Rema haue E occuppyed alſo with the, in all coſtly ſpyces, in all pꝛecyous ſtones and golde, which they bꝛought vnto thy markettes. Haran Chene, and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Aſſiria, & Chelmad were all doers with the, and occuppyed with the. In coſtlye raymente of yelowe ſylke, and nedle woꝛke (verye pꝛecyous, and therfoꝛe pacte and bounde togyther with ropes.) Yea, and in cedꝛe wood, at the tyme of thy markettes. The ſhyppes of Tharſis were the chefe of thy occuppyng.

Thus thou art ful, and in great woꝛſhyppe, euen in the myddeſt of the ſee. Thy robbers ſhal F bꝛynge the into greate waters, the eaſt wynde ſhall ouerbeare the in the myddeſte of the ſee, ſo that thy wares, thy marchaundyſe, thy rycheſſe, thy mariners, thy ſhyppmaſters, thy builders of thy bꝛoken places, thy occuppyers (that bꝛought the thynges neceſſarye) the men of war that are in the, and al the cõmens ſhal peryſh in the myddeſt of the ſee, in the daye of thy fall: The ſuburbes ſhal ſhake at the loude cꝛye of the ſhypmen.

All

All whery men, and all maryners vpon the see, shall leape out of theyr botes, and set thē selues vpon the lande. They shall lyft vp theyr voyce bycause of the & make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust vpon theyr hedes, and lye downe in the asshes. They shall shaue them selues, and put sakcloth vpon them for thy sake.

G They shall mourne for the with hertfull sorowe and heuy lamentation: yea, they also shal wepe for the. Alas, what cytie hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is? When thy wares and marchaundyse came from the seas: thou gauest all people ynough. The kynges of ỹ earth hast ỹ made ryche, thorow the multitude of thy wares & occupying. But ỹ art now cast downe into the deepe of the see, all thy resorte of people is perysshed with the. All they that dwel in the yles are abasshed at the, and al theyr kynges are afrayed: yea theyr faces haue chaunged colour. The marchaūtes of the nacions wonder at the In that thou arte so cleane brought to noughte and commest nomore vp.

Regum xviii. d ez. xxx. xxxi & xxxvi. a of Israel: Whē they toke hold of the with theyr hand thou brakest and pryckedst them on euery syde: and yf they leaned vpon the, thou brakest & hurtedest the raynes of theyr backes. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: behold, I wyl bryng a swerde vpon the, and rote out of the both man and beast: Yea, the lande of Egypt shall be desolate and waste, and they shal knowe, that I am the Lorde. Bycause he sayd: the water is myne: I my selfe haue made it. Behold therfore, I wyl vpon the, and vpō thy waters: I wyll make the lande of Egypt waste and desolate and in abashment, from the towre of Syenes vnto the borders of the Mozians lande: so that in fourty yeres there shall no foote of man walke there, neyther foote of catel go there, neyther shall it be inhabyted. I wyll make the lande of Egypt to be desolate among other waste countryes, and her cyties to lye voyde fourtye yeres amonge other voyde cyties: And I wyl scatre the Egyptians among the Heythen and nacions, and strowe them in the landes about.

C Agayne: thus sayeth the Lorde God *when
Jer. xlvi. c the .xl. yeares are expyred, I wyl gather the Egyptians togyther agayne, out of the nacyons, among whom they were scatred, & wyll bryngе the prisoners of Egypte agayne into the lande of Pathures theyr owne natyue countrye, that they may be there a lowly small kyngdome: yea they shalbe the smallest amonge other kyngdomes, lest they exalt them selues aboue the Heythen: for I wyll so mynysh them that they shall nomore rule the Heythen. They shall nomore be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neyther prouoke them anye more to wyckednesse, to cause them turne backe, and to folowe them: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde God:

In the .xxvii. yere, the fyrst daye of the fyrste
D moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon hath made his host, with great trauayle and labour to come before Tyre that euery heed maye be balde, & euery shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre gyuen neyther him nor his hoost any reward, for ỹ great trauayle that he hath taken there. Therfore thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God: beholde, I wyll gyue the lande in Egypte vnto Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon, that he may take away al her substaunce, robbe her robbyes, & spoyle her spoyles to pay his host theyr wages withal. I wyl gyue him the lande of Egypt for his labour, that he toke for me before Tyre. At ỹ same tyme wyll I cause ỹ horne of the house of Israel to growe forth, and open thy mouth agayne among them: that they may knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

C The .xxx. Chapter.

C The destruction of Egypt and of hys cytyes is bewayled.

The worde of the Lorde came moreo- A uer vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, prophecy & speake: thus sayth the Lord God. Mourne, wo worth this daye, for the daye is here, the day of ỹ Lord is come: the darke day of ỹ heythē the houre is at hande. the swearde cōmeth vpon Egypt. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypte, when her people are taken awaye, and when her foundacyons are destroyed, the Mozians land shalbe afrayed: yea the Mozians land Libia and Lidia, al theyr cōmen people, & Chub and all that be confederate vnto them, shall fall with them thorowe the swerde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: The mayntayners of B
the lande of Egypte shall fall, the pryde of her power shal come downe euen vnto the towre of Syenes shal they be slayne downe w̄ the swerd sayeth the Lorde God: amonge other desolate countryes they shalbe made desolate, among other waste cyties they shalbe wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypt, and when al her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme shall theyr messengers go forth from me in shyppes, to make the careless Mozyans afrayed, and sorowe shall come vpon them accordyng to the daye of Egypt for doubtlesse it shall come.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl make an C
ende of the people of Egypt thorowe the hande of Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon. He and his people with hym: yea, and the cruell tyrauntes of the Heythen shall be brought to destroye the lande. They shall drawe oute theyr swerdes vpon Egypte, and fyll the lande full of slayne men. I wyll drye vp theyr floudes of water, and sell the lande into the handes of wicked people. The lande and all that is therein, I wyl destroye thorowe the enemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

And thus sayth the Lorde God: *I wyl de- D
stroye the ydolles, and bryng the ymages of zach. xiii. a Noph to an ende. There shall no more be a prince of Egipt, and a fearfulnesse wyl I sende into the Egiptians lande. As for Pathures, I wyll make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in Zoan the cytie. No, I wyll punysshe and poure my wrathful indignacion vpon Sin whiche is the strength of Egypte. All the substaunce of Alexandria wyll I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Sin shalbe in greate heynesse, Alexandria shall be rooted out, and Noph shall haue daylye sorowe. The best men of Heliopolys and Bubasto shalbe slayne with the swerd, and caryed awaye captyue. At Caphnis the daye shall be darke, when I breake there the sceptre of ỹ land E of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shal shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and her doughters shalbe ledde awaye into captiuitye. This wyll I punysh Egypt, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the eleuenth yeare, vpon the seuenth day of the first moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayenge: Beholde, thou sonne of man, I wyll breake the arme of Pharao kynge of Egypte: and lo, it shall not be bounde vp to be healed, nother shall any plaister be layd vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde a swearde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll vpon Pharao the kynge of Egypt, and bruse his strong arme (yet is it but a broken one) & wyl smyte the swearde out of hys handes.

As for the Egyptians, I wyll scattre them among the heathen, and strowe them in the landes aboute. Agayne I wyll strengthe the arme of the kyng of Babilon, and gyue him a swerde in his hande, but I wyll breake Pharaos arme, so that he shal hold it before him pyteously like a wounded man.

Ye, I wyll stablyshe the kyng of Babilons arme, and the armes of Pharao shal fal downe: that it maye be knowen, that I am the Lorde which gyue the kinge of Babylon my swerde in his hand, that he may drawe it out vpon ỹ lande of Egypt, & that when I scatre the Egipcias amonge the Gentyles, & strowe them in ỹ landes about, they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶The.xxxi.Chapter.

¶A comparisō of the prosperite of Pharao wyth the prosperite of the Assirians. He prophecyeth a lyke destruccyon to them both.

And it happened in the eleuenth yere, the fyrst daye of the thyrde moneth, that the worde of ỹ Lord came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharao the kyng of Egypt, and to all his people. Whom art thou like in thy greatnes? Beholde Assur was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the mounte of Libanus with fayre braunches: so thycke, that he gaue shadowes, & shote out very hye: hys toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym great, and the depe set him vp an hye. Rounde about the rotes of hym ranne there floudes of water, he sent out his lytle ryuers vnto all the trees of the felde. Therfore was he hyer then all the trees of the feld, and thorowe the multitude of waters that he sent frō him, he obtayned many longe braunches. All foules of the ayre made their nestes in his braunches: vnder his bowes gendred all the beastes of the felde, & vnder his shadowe dwelte al people. Fayre & bewtiful was he in his greatnes & in the length of his braunches, for his rote stode beside great waters, no Cedre tree myght hyde hym. In ỹ pleasaunt garden of God, there was no fyre tree like his braunches, the playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym.

All the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in hys bewty, so fayre & goodly had I made hym wyth the multitude of hys braunches. In so moche that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God had enuye at hym.

Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: for so moch as he hath lyft vp hym selfe so hye, and stretched his toppe into the cloudes, and seynge his harte is proude in hys hyghnes, I wyll delyuer him into the handes of the myghtyest among the heathen, whyche shall rote hym out. Accordynge to his wyckednes wyl I cast hym away, ỹ enemye shall destroye hym, and the myghtye men of the heathen shall so scatre hym, that his braunches shall lye vpon all moūtaynes, and in all valeys: his bowes shalbe broken downe to the grounde thorowe out the lande. Then al the people of the lande shall go from his shadowe, and forsake hym. When he is fallen, al the foules of the ayre shall syt vpon hym, and all the wylde beastes of the felde shall go aboute amonge hys braunches so that from henceforth, no tree in the water shall attayne to hys hyghnesse, nor reache hys toppe vnto the cloudes, nether shall anye tree of the water stonde so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shal they all be delyuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue, I wyll cause lamentacion to be made, I wyll couer the depe vpon hym, I wyll staunche his floudes, & the great waters shalbe restrained. I shal cause Libanus to be sorowfull for hys sake, and al the trees of the felde shall be smytten. I wyll make the heathen shake at the sounde of his fal when I cast hym downe to *hell, with them that descende into the pyt. Al the trees of Eden, with al the chosen and best trees of Libanus, yee, and al they ỹ are plāted vpon the waters shal mourne wyth hym also in the lower habitaciōs: for they shall go downe to hel wyth him, vnto them that be slayne wyth the swerde, whych dwelte afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heathen. To whom shalte thou be lykened, that art so glorious & great, amonge the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast downe vnder the erth (among the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonge vncircūcised, wyth them that be slayne wth the swearde. Euen thus is it wyth Pharao and all hys people, sayth the Lorde God.

¶The.xxxii.Chapter.

¶The prophete is commaunded to bewayle Pharao the kynge of Egypte. He prophecyeth that destruccyon shall come vnto Egypte thorowe the kynge of Babylon.

In the eleuenth yere, the fyrst day of ỹ twelueth moneth, the word of ỹ lord came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of mā, take vp a lamētaciō vpon *Pharao ỹ king of Egipt, & say vnto him: ỹ art reputed as a Lyon of the heathen, & as a whalfysshe in the see. Thou castest thy waters aboute the, thou troublest the waters wyth thy fete, and stampest in theyr floudes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: *I wyl spreade my net ouer the, namely, a great multitude of people, these shall dryue the into my yarne, for I wyl cast the vpon the lande: and let the lye vpon the felde, that all the foules of the ayre maye syt vpon the. I wyll gyue all the beastes of the felde ynoughe of the. Thy flesshe wyll I cast vpon the hylles, and fyl the valeys with thy highnesse. I wyl water the

lande with the aboundaunce of thy bloud, euen to the mountaynes, and the ryuers shalbe ful of thy bloude. When thou art put out, I wyll couer the heauē, and make his starres dymme * I wyll spreade a cloude ouer the Sunne, and the moone shall not gyue her lyght. All the lyghtes of heauen wyll I put oute ouer the, and bryng darkenesse vpon thy lande, sayth the Lord God I wyll trouble the hertes of many people, when I bryng thy destruction amonge the heythen and countryes, whom thou knowest not. Yea, I wyll make manye people with theyr kynges so afrayed thorowe the, that theyr heer shal stand vp, when I shake my swerde at theyr faces. Sodaynly shal they be astonyed, euery man in him selfe, at the daye of thy fall. For thus sayth the Lorde God, the kynge of Babylons swerde shal come vpon the, with ỹ swerdes of the worthyes wyll I smyte downe thy people. All they that be myghty among the Gentiles shal wast the proude pompe of Egypt, and bringe downe all her people. All the cattell also of Egypt wyll I destroye, that they shall come nomore vpon ỹ waters, so that neyther mans foote nor beastes claw e shall styrre them any more. Then wyl I make their waters depe, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayth the Lorde God. When I make the lande of Egypt desolate, and when the countrye with al that is therein, shalbe layd wast, and when I smyte all them which dwel in it, that they maye knowe that I am the Lorde. This is the mournynge that the doughters of the heythen shal make. Yea, a sorowe and lamē tacyon shall they take vp vpon Egypte, and all her people, sayth the Lorde God.

In the .xii. yeare, the .xv. daye of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā: Take vp a lamētation vpō the people of Egypt, & cast thē downe: yea them I say, & the myghty people of the heythen also euen wt them * that dwel beneth: and with them that go downe into ỹ graue. Downe (how fayr so euer thou be) & lay the with ỹ vncircumcised. Amonge those that be slayne with the swerde, shall they lye. To the swearde is she already delyuered: therfore plucke downe to the grounde, her & all her multitude. The myghty worthyes shal speake to him out of the hel & to his helpers that be gone downe and lye vncircumcised and with them that be slayne with the swerde.

Assur is there also with his companye, and theyr graues rounde about, whiche were slayne and fell all with the swearde, whose graues lye beside hym in the lowe pytte. His commens are buryed rounde aboute his graue, all togyther wounded and slayne with the swearde, whiche men afore tyme brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge.

* There is Elam also with all his people, & theyr graues round about: which al being wouded & slayne with the swerd are gone downe vncircūcised vnder the earth, whiche neuertheles somtyme brought feare into the lande of the lyuyng: for ỹ whiche they beare theyr shame, with the other that be gone downe to the graue.

Theyr buryall is gyuen them, and all theyr people, amonge them that be slayne. Theyr graues are rounde about all them whiche be vncircumcised, and with them that be slayne thorow the swearde: for seinge that in tymes past, they made the land of the lyuyng afrayed, they must nowe beare theyr owne shame, with them that go downe to the pytte, and lye amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tubal, and theyr people, and theyr graues rounde aboute. These al are amonge the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne with the swearde, bycause afore tyme they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also among ỹ worthyes & vncircūcised gyauntes? which wt theyr weapons are gone downe to hel whose swerdes are layed vnder theyr heedes, whose wickednes is vpon theyr bones: bycause that as worthyes they haue brought feare into the lande of the lyuyng. Yea, among the vncircumcised shalt thou be destroyed, and slepe with them that perysshed thorowe the swerde.

There is ỹ lande of * Edom with her kinges and princes also, which with theyr strength are layed by them that were slayne with ỹ swearde yea, among the vncircumcised, and them which are gone downe into the pytte. Moreouer, there be al the princes of the north, with all the Sydonians, which are gone downe to the slayne.

With theyr feare and strength they are come to confusion, and lye there vncircūcysed among those that be slayns with the swerde, and beare theyr owne shame, with them ỹ be gone downe to the pytte. Nowe when Pharao seeth this, he shal be cōforted ouer al his people, that is slayne with the swerde, both Pharao and al his hoost, sayth ỹ Lorde God. For I haue gyuen my feare in the lande of the lyuynge. But Pharao and al his people shall lye amonge the vncircumcysed and amonge them that be slayne with ỹ swerde, sayth the Lorde God.

The .xxxiii. Chapter.

The setteth out the office of a curate that preacheth the Gospell. He strengtheneth them that dispayre, and boldeneth them with the prompsse of mercy. The word of the Lorde agaynst the remnaunt of the people. Agaynst the mockers of the wordes of the prophete.

Agayne, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou son of man Speake to the chyldren of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a swerde vpon a lande, yf the people of the lande take a man of theyr countrye, and set hym to be theyr * watcheman, the same man (when he seeth the swerde come vpon the land) shal blowe the trompet and warne the people.

Yf a man nowe heare the noyse of the trompet & wyl not be warned, and the swearde come and take hym away, his bloud shalbe vpon his owne heed: for he herde the sounde of the trompet, and wolde not take hede, therfore his blond be vpon hym. But yf he wyl receyue warnyng, he shall saue his lyfe.

Agayne, yf the watchman se the swerd come and sheWe it not with thr trompette, so that the people people is not warned: yf the swearde come then, and take any man from amonge them: the same shalbe taken awaye in hys owne synne, but hys bloude wyl I requyre of the watchmans hande.

Ezech.iii.e *And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: that wheare as thou hearest any thynge out of my mouthe, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou shalt surely dye, and ỹ geuest him not warnyng, that he may beware of his vngodly way: then shal the wycked dye in hys own synne, but hys bloude wyll I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheles, if thou warne the wycked of hys way, to tourne from it, where as he yet wyll not be turned from it, then shal he dye because of his synne but thou hast deliuered thy soule.

¶ Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Yee, say thus: Our offẽces and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them, howe shulde we then be restored vnto lyfe

Eze.xviii.c Tell them: *As truly as I lyue sayeth ỹ Lorde God, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wycked, but much rather that ỹ wycked turne from hys waye, and lyue. Turne you, turne you from your vngodly wayes: O ye of the house of Israell Oh wherfore wyl ye dye?

Thou sonne of man, tell the chyldren of the Ez.xviii.d. people: * The ryghteousnes of the ryghteouse shal not saue him, when soeuer he turneth away vnfaythfully. Agayne, the wyckednesse of the wycked shal not hurte hym, whan soeuer he conuerteth from his vngodlines.

And the ryghteousnes of the ryghteouse shal not sauc his lyfe, whan so euer he synneth. If I say vnto the ryghteous, that he shall surely lyue and so he trust to his owne righteousnes, and do synne, then shall hys ryghteousnesse be no more

D thought vpon, but in ỹ wyckednes that he hath

Eza.lv.a. Jer.xviii.a. done he shall dye. *Agayne, yf I saye vnto the wycked: thou shalte surely dye: and so he turne from hys synnes, and do the thyng that is lawfull and ryght: In so muche that the same wycked man geueth ỹ pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and doth no wrong Then shall he surele lyue, and not dye. Yee, the synnes that he hath done, shal neuer be thought vpon. For in so much as he doth nowe the thing that is lawfull and ryght, he shal lyue. And yet the chyldren of thy people saye: Tush, the waye of the Lorde is not ryght, but they lye, where as theyr owne waye is rather vnright.

When the ryghteous turneth from his righteousnes and doth the thynge that is wycked he shal dye therfore. But if the wycked turne from his wyckednes, doyng the thyng that is lawful and ryght, he shal lyue therfore. Yet ye say: *the

xxxiii.a *I wyll iudge euery one of you after his waies

In the twelueth yeare, the fyfth daye of the tenth moneth of oure captiuitie, it hapened, that one whiche was fled out of Jerusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: the citye is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lord had bene vpon me the euenyng afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntyll the mornynge that he cam to me: yee, he opened my mouthe, so that I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, and sayd: Thou sonne of man, these that dwell in the wasted lande of Israell, say: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possessyon: nowe are we many and ỹ lande is geuen vs to possesse also. And therfore tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the bloude haue ye eaten, your Leu.xvii.b eyes haue ye lyfte vp to ydolles, *and haue shed Deut.iii.c. bloude: shal ye then haue the lande in possessyon?

Ye leane vpon your swordes, ye worke abhominatiõs, euery one defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: and shall he then possesse the lande? Saye thou these wordes vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue all ye that dwel in this wyldernes, shalbe slayne with ỹ sweard: what so euer is vpon thy felde, I wyl gyue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in strong holdes and dennes, shall dye of the pestylence. For I wyl make the land so desolate and waste and the pompe of her strength shall come to an ende. The mountaynes of Israel shalbe so wast that no man shall trauayle therby.

* Then shall they learne to knowe, that I G am the Lorde, when I make the lande wast and Eze.xv.e. desolate because of al theyr abhominatiõs, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man, the chyldren of the people that talke of the, by the walles and in the doores of theyr houses, sayenge one to an other. Come lette vs heare what worde is gone forth from the Lord. These come vnto the, after ỹ maner of a great people: yee, as who saieth they were my people, they syt downe before the, and here thy wordes, but they do not therafter: for in theyr mouthes they make a iest Esa.xxxix.e Mat.xv.a. of them, and theyr harte goeth after theyr owne couetous lucre, and as a balet that hath a swet tune, and is pleasaunt to singe, so shalte thou be vnto them: thy wordes shal they heare, but they wyl not do therafter. Whã this cõmeth to passe (for lo: it cõmeth in dede) then shal they knowe, that there hath bene a prophete amonge them.

¶ The.xxxiiii. Chapter.

¶ Agaynst Bishoppes and curates that despice the flocke of Christ, and seke theyr owne: The Lorde sayeth that he wyll vysyt hys dispersed flocke, and gather them together. He reproueth the malyce of certen of the flocke He prompteth the trew shepherd Christ, and with hym peace:

AND the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayenge: thou sonne of man, prophecy agaynst the shepherdes of Israell, prophecye and speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. *Wobe vnto the Eze.xiii.a. Jer.xxiii.b. shepherdes of Israel, that fede thẽ selues. Shuld not the shepherdes fede the flockes?

Ye haue eaten vp the fat, ye haue clothed you with the woll: the best fed haue ye slayne but the flocke haue ye not nourysshed. The weake haue ye not holden vp * the sycke haue ye not healed: Luke.xiii.b the broken haue ye not bounde together, the out castes haue ye not brought agayne: the lost haue

1.Petr.v.a. ye not sought, but * churlyshly & cruelly haue ye ruled them. Thus are they scatred here and there without a shepherde: yee, all the beastes of the felde deuoure them, and they go a straye.

B My shepe go wandrynge vpon all mountaynes, and vpon euery hye hyll: Yee, they be scatred abrode in all feldes, and ther is no man that careth for them, or seketh after them. Therfore O ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue, for so moche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wylde beastes of the felde, haupng no shepherde: & seynge that my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues onely, and not my shepe. Therfore, heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye shepherdes) Thus sayth the

C Lorde God: Beholde, I my selfe wyll vpon the shepherdes: and requyre my shepe from their handes, and make them ceasse from fedynge of my shepe: yee, the shepherdes shall fede them selues no more. For I wyll delyuer my shepe out of their mouthes, so that they shall not deuoure them after this: For thus sayth the Lorde God:

Ihon.x.a. Ezech.xxxiiii.d 1.pet.v.c.b a * Beholde, I wyll loke to my shepe my selfe, and seke them. Lyke as a shepherde among the flocke seketh after the shepe that are scatred abrode, euen so wyll I seke after my shepe, and gather them together out of al places, where they haue ben scatred in the cloudy and darke daye. I wyll bringe them out from all people, and gather them together out of all landes. I wyll bringe

D them in to their owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countrey. I wyl fede them in ryght good pastures, & vpon the hye moũtaynes of Israel shall their foldes be. There shall they lye in a good folde, and in a fat pasture shall they fede: euen vpon the mountaynes of Israel.

I wyll fede my shepe my selfe, & bringe them

Luke.xiiii.b Iohn.x.a. to their rest, sayth the Lorde God. * Suche as be lost, wyll I seke: suche as go a straye, wyll I bringe agayne: suche as be wounded, wyll I bynde vp: such as be weake, wyl I make stronge suche as be fat & stronge, those wyll I roote out, and fede them with the thynge that is lawfull.

E And as for you (O my shepe) sayth the Lorde

Mat.xxv.e God. * I wyll put a difference among the shepe, amonge the wethers and the gotes. Was it not ynough for you to eate vp the good pasture, but ye must treade downe ỹ residue of your pasture with your fete also? Was it not ynough for you to drynke clere water, but ye must trouble the residue also with your fete?

Thus my shepe muste be fayne to eate the thynge, that ye haue troden downe with your fete, and to drinke it, that ye with your fete haue defyled. Therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll seuer the fatte shepe from the leane: for so moche as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulders, and runne vpon them with youre hornes, so longe tyll ye haue vtterly scatred them abrode. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shall no more be spoyled: yee, I wyll discerne one shepe from an other. I wyll rayse vp vnto them one only shep-herde, euen my seruaunt * Dauid, he shall ‡ fede them, and he shall be their shepherde. I the Lorde wyll be their God, and my seruaunte * Dauid shall be their prynce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Ierem.xxx.b ‡Act.v.c. Ezech.b.a

Moreouer, I wyll make a couenaunt of peace with them, and dryue all euyll beastes out of the lande: so that they may dwell safely in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woddes. Good fortune and prosperitye wyll I gyue them, and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hyll. * A prosperous shoure and rayne wyll I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wodde may bryng forth their frutes, and the ground her encrease. They shall be safe in their lande, and shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, which haue broken their yocke, and delyuered them out of the handes of those that helde them in subiection.

Deut.xi.b. Ezech.xxxiiii.b

They shall no more be spoyled of ỹ heathen, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande: but safely shall they dwell, and no man shall fraye them. I wyll set vp an excellent plant for them, so that they shall suffre no more hunger in the lande, neyther beare the reproke of the heathen any more. Thus shall they vnderstande, that I the Lorde their God am with them, & that they (euen the house of Israel) are my people, sayth the Lorde God. Ye men are my flocke * ye are the shepe of my pasture: and I am youre God, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The destruccyon that shall come on the hyll Seyr, that is on the Idumeans, because they troubled the people of the Lorde.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sõne of man, turne thy face towarde the mounte * Seyr, prophecye vpon it, and saye vnto it. Thus sayth the Lorde God:

Esa.xxxiiii a. Ier.xlix.b Eze.xxxv.b and.xxxvi.c and.xxb.a. and.xxvi.a

Beholde (O thou mount Seyr) I wyll vpon the. I wyll reache out my hande ouer the, yee, waste and desolate wyll I make the. Thy cyties wyll I breake downe, and thou shalt lye voyde: that thou mayst knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. * For so moche as thou beareſt an olde enemytye agaynst the chyldren of Israell, and hast drawen the chyldren of Israell vpon the swerde, what tyme as they were troubled and punysshed for their synne: Therfore, as trewly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: I wyll prepare the vnto bloude, yee, bloude shall folowe vpon the: * seynge thou layest wayte for bloude, therfore shall bloude persecute the. Thus wyll I make the mount Seyr desolate and waste, and bringe to passe, that there shall no man go thyther, nor come from thence. His mountaynes wyll I fyll with his slayne men: thy hylles, valleys, and ryuers, shall lye full of them, that are slayne with the swerde. I wyll make the a perpetuall wyldernes, so that thy cyties shall not returne to their former estate, that ye may knowe how that I am the Lorde.

the Lord God: as truly as I lyue, I wyll handle the accordyng to thy wrath and gelousy lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly with them that I may be knowen among thē, howe I haue punyshed the yee, and ỹ thou also maist be sure, that Iỹ Lord haue herd al thy despyteful wordes, which thou D haste spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israell sayeng: Lo, they are made waste, and geuen vs to deuoure. Thus wyth your mouthes ye haue made your bost agaynst me, yee, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, whych I haue hearde altogether. Wherunto, thus sayeth the Lorde God: to the ioye of all the worlde wyll I make the waste. *And lyke as thou (O mounte Ezec.xxv.a and.xxvi.a Seyr) waste glad, because the herytage of the house of Israell was destroyed: euen so wyl I do vnto the also, that thou and whole Edom shall be destroyed, and knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ The.xxxvi.Chapter

¶ He promyseth the delyueraunce of the Gentyls vnto Israell. The benefytes done vnto the Iewes are to be ascribed to the mercye of God, not vnto theyr deserunges: God renueth our hartes that we may walke in hys commaundmentes.

A THou sonne of man, prophecye vpon the moūtaines of Israel and speake: Ezech.vi.a *Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord God because your enemye hath sayde vpon you: Aha, the hye euerlastynge places are nowe become oures, prophecy therfore, and speake: thus sayeth the Lorde God Seing ye be wasted and troden downe on euery syde and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gētyls: which haue brought you into mens mouthes and vnto an euell name amonge the people. Therfore, heare the worde of the Lorde God: O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleys and dales, to the voyde wyldernes and desolate cities, which are spoiled, and had in derision on euery syde, among the residue of the Heathen: Yee, euen thus sayeth the Lorde God. In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuice against the residue of the Gentyls, and agaynst all *Edom: which haue taken in my lande vnto Ezec.xxxv.a them selues for a possessyon: which also reioyced from theyr whole harte wyth a despyteful stomacke, to waste it, and to spoyle it.

B Prophecy therfore vpon the lande of Israell, speake vnto the mountaynes and hylles to valleys and dales, thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, this haue I deuised in my gelousy and terrible wrath. For so muche as ye haue suffred reprofe of the Heathen, therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. I haue sworne that the Gentyles which lye aboute you, shall beare theyr cōfusion thēselues. And as for you (O moūtaynes of Israel) ye shal shote out your braunches, & bryngе forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is harde by that it wyl come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyll I tourne me, that ye maye be tylled and sowen.

C I wyll sende you much people, whyche shalbe of all the house of Israell, the cities shalbe inhabited, and the decayed places shall be repayred agayne: I wyll prouyde you wyth muche people and cattel, which shal encrease and bryng frute: I wyll restore you also to your olde estate and shewe you more kindnes then euer ye had before wherby ye shal knowe that I am the Lord: Yee people wyll I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israell) whiche shall haue the inpossessyon, and ỹ shalt be theyr enheritaunce, so that thou shalte nomore be wyth them. Agayne thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so much as they say vnto you, thou arte an eater vp of mē, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, neyther destroy thy people any more sayth the Lord God. And I wyll not suffre the: for to heare thyne owne confusyon, amonge the Gentyles from hence forth. Thou shalte not beare the reprofe of the nacions, nor caste oute thyne owne people any more, sayeth the Lorde God.

D Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayeng: O thou sonne of man, when ỹ house of Israel dwelte vpon theyr owne groūde, they defyled thē selues wyth theyr owne wayes and ymaginacions: so that in my syght theyr waye was like the vnclennes of a menstruous woman Wherfore, I poured my wrathfull displeasure vpon them, because of the bloude that they had shed in the lande, and because of theyr ydoles, wherwyth they had defyled them selues. I scatred them also among the Heathen, so that they were strowed aboute in the landes. Accordynge to theyr wayes and after theyr owne iuncyons, so dyd I punyshe them.

E *Nowe when they were gone vnto the Heythen, and come in amonge them, they dyshonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them. Are these the people of God, and must go out of theyr owne land? Then spared I my holy name whyche the house of Israel had dyshonoured amonge the Gentyls, to whom they came. Therfore tel the house of Israel. Thus sayeth ỹ Lord God: I do not thys for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonoured among the Heathen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wyl halowe my great name agayne whych among the Gentyls is euell spoken of: for ye your selues haue dyshonoured it amonge them. And the Gentyls shall know that I am the Lorde, when I am honoured in you before theyr eyes, sayeth the Lorde God. Eſay.lvii.b Roma.ii.c

F As for you, I wyl take you from among the Heathen and gather you to gether out of al cōtrees, and bryngе you agayne into your owne lande. * Then wyll I poure cleane water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane: yee, from all your vnclennes and frō all your ydols shall I clense you A newe herte also wyll I gyue you, and a newe spyrete wyll I put into you. As for that stonye harte, I wyl take it out of your bodye, and geue you a fleshly hert. I wyl geue my spyrete among you * and cause you to walke in my commaundementes to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyl them. Eſa.xliii.a Iere.xxxi.c De.viii.d.

And so ye shall dwel in the lande, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I wyll be your God. I wyll healpe you out of al of all your vnclennes. I wyll call for the corne, and wyll encrease it, and let you haue no hunger. I wyll multiplye the frutes of the trees, and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shal beare no more reproke of hunger among the Heathen. Then shall ye remembre youre owne wycked wayes, and your ymagynacyons, whiche were not good: so that ye shall thynke that ye were worthy to be destroyed: for your synnes and abhominacyons.

G But I wyll not do this for your sakes (sayth the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israell, be ashamed of youre synnes. Moreouer, thus sayth ỹ Lord God: What tyme as I shall clense you from al your offences, then wyll I make the cyties to be occupyed agayne, & wyll repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shal be buylded agayn, which afore tyme laye waste in ỹ syght of al them that went by. Then shall it be sayd: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate & broken downe cyties are now stronge and defenced agayne. Then the residue of the Heathen that lye rounde about you, shal knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche repayre that that was broken downe, and plant agayne that, that was made waste. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and wyll do it in dede.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll yet once be founde agayn of the house of Israel, & do this for them: * I shall encrease them as a flocke of Jerem.l.a men. Lyke as the holy flocke and the flocke of Jerusalē are in ỹ hye solempne feastes: so shall also the wylde wasted cyties be fylled with flockes of men: & they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The.xxxvii. Chapter.

The prophecyeth the bryngynge agayne of the people beynge in captiuitie. He sheweth the vnion of the ten tribes wyth the two.

A THe hande of the Lord came vpon me and caryed me out in the spyryte of the Lorde, and let me downe in a playne felde, that laye full of bones, and he ledde me rounde aboute by them: and beholde the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, and merueylous drye also. Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sōne of man: thynkest thou these bones may lyue agayne? I answered, O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayd vnto me. Prophecy thou vpon these bones: and speake vnto them. Ye drye bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Behold, I wyl put breth vnto you, that ye may lyue: I wyl gyue you synowes and make flesche growe vpon you, and couer you B ouer with skynne: & so gyue you * breth, that ye Gen.ii.b. may lyue, and knowe that I am the Lorde.

So I prophecyed, as he had cōmaunded me. And as I was prophecyeng, there came a noyse and a great mocyon, so that the bones ran euery one to another. Now when I had loked, behold, they had synowes, and flesche grewe vpon them: and aboue they were couered with skynne, but there was no breth in them. Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne of man, prophecye thou toward the wynde: prophecye: and speake to the wynde. Thus sayth ỹ Lorde God. Come (O thou ayre) from the foure wyndes, and blowe vpon these slayne, that they may be restored to lyfe. So I C prophecyed as he had cōmaunded me: then came the breth in to them, & they receyued lyfe, & stode vp vpon theyr fete, a meruelous great sorte.

Moreouer, he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Our bones dryed vp, our hope is gone, we are cleane cutte of. Therfore D prophecye thou, and speake vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll open your graues (O my people) and take you out of youre sepulchres, and bryngе you in to the lande of Israel agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open your graues, and bryngе you out of them. My spryte also wyll I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I wyll set you agayne in your owne lande, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde whiche haue sayd it, and fulfylled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: thou sonne of man, take a stycke, & wryte vpon it. Unto Juda and to the chyldren of Israel his companyons. Then take another stycke and wryte vpon it: Unto Joseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the householde of Israell his companyons. And then take bothe these E togyther in thyne hande, so shall there be one stycke therof. Nowe yf the chyldren of the people saye vnto the, wylt thou not shewe vs what thou meanest by these? Then gyue them this answere: thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, * I wyll take the stocke of Joseph, whiche is Ose.i.b. in the hande of Ephraim, and of the trybes of Israell his felowes, and wyll put them to the stocke of Juda, and make them one stocke, and they shall be one in my hande. And the two styckes where vpon thou wryteſt, shalte thou haue in thyne hande, that they may se, and shalt saye vnto them.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll F take away the chyldren of Israel from amonge the Heathen, vnto whome they be gone, & wyll gather them togyther on euery syde, and bryngе them agayne in to theyr owne lande: yee, I wyll make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they al shal haue but one kynge. They shall no more be two peoples from hence forth, neyther be deuyded in to two kyngdomes: they shall also defyle them selues no more with theyr abhominacions, Idols, and all theyr wycked doynges. I wyll helpe them out of all theyr dwellynge places, wherin they haue synned: and wyll so clense them, that they shall be my people, and I theyr God.

Dauid my seruaunt shall be their kynge, and G they al shal haue one shepherde only. They shall walke in my lawes, and my cōmaundementes shall they bothe kepe and fulfyll. They shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaūt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt: yee, euen in the same lande shall they, their chyldren, and theyr chylders chyldren dwell for euermore, and my seruaunt Dauid shal be their euerlasting prince. Moreouer, I wil make a bond of peace wyth them, whyche shalbe vnto them an euerlastyng couenaunt. I wyl settle them also, and multiply them, my Sanctuarye wyll I set Leu.xxvi.b among the for euermoze.* Hy dwellynge shal be with them: yee, I wyl be theyr God, and they shalbe my people. Thus the Heathen also shall knowe, that I the Lozde am the holy maker of Israel, when my sanctuary shalbe among them foz euermoze.

The.xxxviii.Chapter.

The prophecieth that Gog and Magog shall come wyth an appoynted hoost into the lande of promes. Theyr entent. He reherseth that the cõmynge of Gog was before prophecyed of the prophetes. The destruccyon of hym.

AND the wozde of the Lozde came vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward Gog the lande of Magog whyche is the cheke prince at Mesech and Tuball: prophecye agaynste hym, and ezec.xxxix.b. Apoc.xx.c. saye: Thus sayeth the Lozde God: *O Gog thou cheke prince of Mesech and Tubal: behold, I wyll vpon the, and wyll turne the aboute and put a byt in thy chawes: I wyll bzyng the fozth and al thy host, both hozse and hozsemen, which be all weapened of the best fashyon, a great people, that handle altogether speares, shyldes, and swoordes: the Perses, Hozians and wyth them the Libians, whyche all beare shyldes and helmettes: Gomer and all hys hoostes: the house of Thogozma out of the nozth quarters, & all hys hoostes, yee, and muche people wyth the.

B Therfoze prepare the, set thy selfe in araye wyth all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou theyr defence. After many dayes thou shalte be visyted, and in the latter yeres thou shalte come into ỹ lande that hath bene destroyed wyth the swoorde, and nowe is replenyshed agayne wyth dyuerse people vpon the mountaynes of Israell, whyche haue longe lyen waste: Yee, they be brought out of the nacyons, and dwell all safe. Thou shalte come vp lyke a stozmy wether, to couer the land, and as it were a darcke cloude, thou wyth all thyne hostes, and a great multitude of people wyth the.

C Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lozde God: At the same tyme shal many thinges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn mischefe, and saye: I wyll vp to ponder playne lande, seynge they syt at ease, & dwell so safely (foz they dwell all without any walles they haue nether barres noz doores) to spoyle them, to robbe them to laye hande vpõ theyr so well inhabited wyldernesses agaynst that people, that is gathered together
D from amonge the Heathen, whyche haue gotten cattell and good and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shal Saba, & Dedan, and the marchaũtes of Tharsis with al theyr worthies saye vnto the: Arte thou come to robbe? Haste thou gathered thy people together, because thou wylt spoyle: to take syluer and golde: to cary awaye cattell and good, and to haue a greate pray?

E Therfoze, O thou sonne of man, thou shalte prophecy, and saye vnto Gog. Thus sayeth the Lozde God: In that day thou shalt knowe that my people of Israell dwelleth safe: and shalte come from thy place out of ỹ nozth partes: thou and muche people wyth the, whyche ryde vpon hozses, wherof there is a great multitude and an innumerable sozte. Yee, thou shalte come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloud to couer the land. Thys shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I wyll bzynge the vp into my lande, that the Heathen maye knowe me, whan I get me honoure vpon the (O Gog) befoze theyr eyes.

Thus sayeth the Lozde God: Thou arte he of F whom I haue spoken afoze tyme by my seruaũtes the prophetes of Israel, which prophecied in those dayes and yeares, that I shulde bzyng the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp into ỹ lande of Israel (sayeth the Lozde God) shal my indignaciõ go fozth in my wzath: Foz in my gelousy and hote displeasure I haue deuysed* that there shalbe a great trouble in the Dani.xii.a ma.xviiii.b Luke.xxi.c lande of Israel at that time. The very fyshes in the see, the foules of the ayze, the beastes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earthe, shall tremble foz feare of me.

The hylles also shalbe turned vp side downe G the stayzes of stone shall fall, and al walles shal synke to the grounde. I wyll calll foz a swearde vpon them in al my mountaynes sayeth ỹ Lozd God: so that euerye mans swearde shalbe vpon an other. Wyth pestilence and bloude wyll I punyshe hym: stozmy rayne and hayle stones, fyze and bzymstone wyll I cause to rayne vpon hym and all hys heape, yee, and vpon all that greate people that is wyth hym. Thus wyll I be magnifyed, honoured, and knowen amonge the Heathen: that they may be sure, howe that I am the Lozde.

The.xxxix.Chapter.

The shewth the destruccyon of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and hys host. He prophecyeth that Gog and hys company shall be deuoured of bzydes and beastes, wherfoze ỹ house of Israel is wasted: Theyr bzinge agayne from captiuite is prompted.

THerefoze, O thou sonne of man, A pozphecy agaynst Gog, & speake Thus sayeth the Lozd God: Behold, *O Gog: thou cheke pzince ez.xxxviii.e at Mesech & Tubal, I wyl vpon the, & punyshe the wyth syze plages and lead the from the nozth partes, & bzyng the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As foz thy bowe, I wyll smyte it out of thy lyfte hand, and cast thyne arowes out of thy right hande. Thou wyth all thyne heape, and all the people that is wyth the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Than wyll I geue the vnto foules & wylde beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there muste thou lye vpõ the felde: foz euen I the Lozd haue spoken it, sayeth the Lozde God.

Into Magog, and amonge them that syt so B careles in the yles: wyll I sende a fyze, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lozde, I wyll make also ỹ name of my holines to be knowen among my people of Israell: and I wyl not let my holy name be euel spoken of anye moze: but the verye Heathen also shal knowe, that I am the Lozde, the holy one of Israell: Beholde, it commeth, and shall be fulfylled in dede, sayeth the Lozde, God. Thys is the daye wherof I haue spoken.

They that dwell in the cyties of Israel, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the weapens, and burne them: shyldes and speares, bowes and arowes, bylles & clubbes: seuen yeares shall they be burnynge therof, so that they shall elles bryng no styckes from the felde, nether haue nede to hewe downe out of ỹ wodde. For they shall haue weapens ynough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoyled
C them, sayth the Lorde God. At the same tyme wyll I gyue vnto Gog, a place to be buryed in Israel, euen the valley, where thorowe men go from the east to ỹ see ward. Those that trauayle therby, shall stop theyr noses for stenche. There shall Gog & all his people be buryed: & it shall be called the valley of ỹ people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shal the house of Israel be buryeng of them, that they may clense the lande. Yee, all the people of ỹ lande shall bury them, D, it shall be a glorious daye, when I get me that honour,
D sayth the Lorde God. They shall ordeyne men also to be dead buryers, euer goynge thorow the lande, and appoynt them certeyn places to bury those in, which remayne vpon the felde, that the lande may be clensed. Frō ende to ende shall they seke, and that seuen monethes longe. Now those that go thorow the lande, where they se a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, tyll the dead buryers haue buryed it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the cytie shal be called Hamonah (that is a multytude.) Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

E And thou sonne of man: thus sayth the Lorde God, Speake vnto all the foules & euery byrde, yee, & to all the wylde beastes of the felde, heape you togyther & come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel, eate flesshe, and drynke bloude. Ye shall Apoc.xix.d *eate the flesshe of the worthyes, and dryncke the bloude of the prynces of ỹ lande: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the gotes, and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fatte your belly full, and dryncke bloude, tyll ye be dronken of the slaughter, whiche I haue slayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table with horses and stronge horsemen, with captaynes and men of warre, sayth the Lorde God.

F I wyll bringe my glory also among the gentyles, that all the Heathen may se my iudgement, that I haue kepte, and my hande whiche I haue layde vpon them: that the house of Israel may knowe, how that I am the Lord their God from that daye forth. And the Heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israel were ledde in to captiuitye: it was for theyr wyckednes sake, bycause they offended me.

For the whyche cause I hyd my face from them, and delyuered them in to the handes of theyr enemyes, that they myght all be slayne with the swearde. Accordynge to theyr vnclennesse and vnfaythfull dealynges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them:

G Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Now wyl I bringe agayne the captyues of Jacob, & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, & be gelous for my holy names sake. All their confusion and offence that they haue done agaynst me, shal be taken awaye: and so safely shall they dwell in theyr lande, that no man shall make them afrayde. And when I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them togyther out of theyr ennemyes landes, and am praysed in them before many Heathen: Then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde theyr God, whiche suffred them to be ledde in to captiuitye amonge the Heathen, but now haue I brought them agayne in to theyr owne lande, and not lefte one of them yonder.

After that wyll I hyde my face no more from them, * but wyll powre out my spryte vpon the Eze.xxxvi.d house of Israel, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The.xl. Chapter.

¶ The restoryng of the cityes and of the temple that was to come is shewed vnto the prophete.

IN the.xxv. yere of our captiuitie, in the A begynnynge of the yere, the tenth daye of the moneth: that is the.xiiii. yere after that the cytie was smytten downe: the same daye came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and caryed me forth: euen in to the lande of Israel brought he me in the visions of God: and set me downe vpon a meruelous hye moūtayne, where vpon there was a buyldynge (as it had ben of a cytye) towarde the north.

Thyther he caryed me, and behold, there was a man, whose similitude was lyke brasse, whiche had a threde of flare in his hande, and a metrod also. He stode in the dore, and sayd vnto me: thou sonne of man, marke well with thyne eyes, harken to with thyne eares, and fasten it in thyne herte, what soeuer I shall shewe the, for to ỹ entent that they myght be shewed the, therfore art thou brought hyther. And what soeuer ỹ seest, thou shalt certifye the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the outsyde B rounde aboute the house: the metrodde that he had in his hande, was syxe cubytes longe and a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buyldynge, whiche was a metrodde, and the heyght also a metrodde. Then came he vnto ỹ east dore, and wente vp the stayres, & measured the postes of the dore, wherof euery one was a metrodde thycke. Euery chambre was a metrodde longe & brode: betwene the chambres were fyue cubites. The post of the dore within the porche, was one metrodde. He measured also the porche of the innermer dore, whiche contayned a metrodde. Then measured he the entry of the dore, that contayned eyght cubytes, & his pyllers two cubites: and this entrye stode inwarde.

The chambres of the dore eastwarde, were C thre on euery syde: a lyke brode and longe. The pyllers also that stode of bothe the sydes, were of one measure. After this, he measured the wydenesse of the dore, whiche was ten cubytes, and the heyght of the dore thyrtene cubytes. The edge before the chambres was one cubyte brode vpon bothe the sydes, and the chambres syxe cubytes wyde of eyther syde. He measured

the doze from the rydge of one chambze to another, whose wydenes was.xxv.cubites, and one doze stode agaynst another. He made pyllers also.lx.cubytes hye, rounde aboute the courte doze Before the inwarde parte vnto the foze entry of the innermoze doze, were fyfty cubites. The chãbers & theyr pyllers wythin, rounde about vnto the doze had syde wyndowes. So had ỹ foze entreys also, whose windowes went round about wtin. And vpon the pyllers there stode date trees

Then brought he me into ỹ foze court where as were chambers and paued wozkes, made in the foze court round about.xxx.chambers vpon one paued wozke. Now the paued wozke was a longe beside ỹ dozes and ỹ was the lower paued wozke. After thys he measured the bzedth from the lower doze, vnto the innermoze courte of the outsyde, wyche had an hundzeth cubytes vpon the east and the nozth parte. And the doze in the vttermost courte towarde the nozthe, measured he after the length and bzeadth: hys thze chambers also on ether syde with his pyllers and foze entreys: which had euen the measure of the fyzst doze. His heygth was.l.cubites, the bzedth.xxv. cubites, hys wyndowes, and pozches wt his date trees, had euen lyke measure as the doze toward the east: there were seuen steppes to go vp vpon and theyr pozche before them. Nowe the doze of the inner courte stode streyght ouer agaynst the dooze, that was towarde the Nozthcast. From one doze to another he measured: C. cubytes.

D After that, he bzought me to the southsyde, where there stode a doze toward ỹ south: whose pillers and pozches he measured, these hadde the fyzst measure, and wyth theyr pozches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the fyzste wyndowes. The heyghe was.l.cubytes, the bzeadth xxv. wyth steppes to go vp vpõ: hys pozch stode before with his pyllers and date trees on eyther syde. And ỹ doze of the inner court stode toward the southe, and he measured from one doze to another an hundzeth cubytes. So he bzoughte me into the innermoze courte, thozowe the dooze of the southsyde whych he measured: and it had the measure afozesayde. In lyke maner, hys chambzes, pyllers and fozentrpes, had euen the fozesayd measure also. And he had with hys pozches rounde aboute wyndowes of.l.cubites heygth, and.xxv.cubytes bzode. The pozches rounde aboute were.xxv.cubytes longe, and fyue cubytes bzode: and his pozche reached vnto the vttermost court vpõ his pillers, there were date trees and eyght steppes to go vp vpon.

E He bzought me also into the inmoste courte vpon the east syde, and measured the doze accozdynge to the measure afozesayd, hys chambers, pyllers and pozches had euen the same measure, as the fyzste had: and wyth hys pozches he had wyndowes rounde aboute. The heygth was.l. cubytes, the bzeadthe.xxv: cubytes, hys pozche reached vnto the vttermoste courte: hys pyllers also had date trees on eyther syde, and.viii. steppes to go vp vpon. And he bzoughte me to the nozth doze, and measured it, whyche also had the fozsayde measure. Hys chambers, pyllers and pozches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heyghth was.l.cubytes and the bzeadth.xxv. Hys pillers stode toward the vtmoste court, and vpon them bothe were date trees, and.viii. steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambze also, whose entraunce was at the dooze pyllers, and there the burntoffrynges were washed.

In the doze pozch, there stode on eyther syde F two tables foz the slaughtyng: to slay the burnt offerynges: synofferynges and trespasofferynges therupon. And on the outsyde as men goo fozth to the nozth doze, there stode to tables. Foure tables stode on eyther syde of the dooze that is.viii.tables: wherupon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone foz the burnt offerynges, of a cubite and a halfe longe & bzode and one cubyte hye, whereupon were layed the vesselles and oznamentes whyche were vsed to the burnte & slayneoffrynges: when they were slaughted. And wythin, there were hokes foure fyngers bzode, fastened rounde aboute to hange flesshe vpon, and vpon the tables was layde the offerynge flesh. On the outside of the innermoze doze were the syngers chambers in the inwarde courte besyde the nozth dooze ouer agaynste the southe. There stode one also beyde the east doze nozthwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: Thys chambze on the G southe syde belongeth to the pzeastes, that kepe the habytacyon: and thys toward the nozth, is 4 par.ffb.a the pzeastes that wayte vpon the aulter: whych be the sonnes of Sadoch that do seruice before Ul. Reg.6c the Lozde in steade of the chyldzen of Leui. So he measured the foze court, whych had in length an hundzeth cubytes, and almuche in bzedht by the foure cozners. Nowe the aulter stode before the house. And he bzought me to the foze entrey of the house, and measured the walles by the entrey doze whych were fyue cubytes longe on eyther syde. The thyckenes also of the doze on eyther syde, was thze cubytes. The length of the pozche was.xx.cubytes: the bzeadth.xi.cubytes and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by the walles also were pyllers on eyther syde one.

¶ The disposicion and deuise of buyldyng agayne the temple and of the other thynges therto belongyng.

A After thys, he bzoughte me to the temple, and measured the poostes whiche were of both sydes sixe cubytes thycke, accozdynge to the wydenes of the tabernacle. The bzedth of the dooze was ten cubytes, and the walles of the dooze on eyther syde fyue cubytes. He measured the leugth therof, whyche conteyned fourty cubytes, and the bzeadth twenty. Then wente he in and measured the dooze postes, whyche were two cubytes thycke: but the dooze it selfe was syxe cubytes, and the bzeadth of the dooze was seuen cubytes. He measured the length & bzeadth therof, which were euery one twenty cubites, before ỹ temple

And he sayd vnto me this is the holyest of all He measured also the wall of the house, whyche was syxe cubytes. The chambzes ỹ stode roũde aboute the house, were euery one foure cubytes wyde: and one stode hard vpon another, wherof there were .xxxiii. there stode postes benethe by the walles roũde about the house, to beare them vp, but in the wall of the house they were not fastened. The syde chambres were, the hyer the wyder, and had steppes thorowe them rounde

B aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the lowest, men myght go to the hyest by the myd chambres. I sawe also that ỹ house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundacyon of ỹ syde chambres was a metrodde, that is .vi. cubytes brode. The thyckenesse of the syde wall without, contayned .v. cubytes, and so dyd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

Betwene the chambres was the wydnes .xx. cubytes rounde aboute the house. The chambre doores stode ouer agaynst the out wall, the one doore was towarde the north, the other toward the south: and the thyckenes of the out wall was v. cubytes rounde aboute. Now the buyldynge that was seperated towarde the west, was .lxx. cubytes wyde, the wall of the buyldynge was v. cubytes thycke rounde about, and the length foure score cubytes and ten. So he measured the house, whiche was an .C. cubytes longe, and the seperated buyldynge with the wall, were an .C. cubites longe also. The wydnes before ỹ house, and of it that was seperated towarde the east, was an .C. cubytes.

C And he measured the length of the buyldyng before & behynde with the chambres vpon bothe the sydes, and it contayned an .C. cubytes. The innermer temple, the porche of the fore court, the syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, and pyllers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes. The wyndowes them selues were syled ouer wyth boordes: and thus was it aboue the doore vnto the inmost house, & without also. Yee, the whole wall on euery syde, bothe within & without was syled ouer w̃ great boordes. There were Cherubins & date trees made also, so that one date tree
D stode euer betwixte two Cherubyns. One Cherub had two faces, the face of a man lokynge a syde towarde the date tree, & a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in all ỹ house. Yee, the Cherubins & date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue the doore, & so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The hye postes of the temple were foursquared, & the fashyon of the Sanctuary was * euen Ezech. i. e. & epo. ffb. c as it appered vnto me afore in the vision. ‡ The table was of woode .iii. cubytes hye, and .ii. cubytes longe: his corners the length & the wales were of wood. And he sayd vnto me: This is the table that shall stande before ỹ Lorde. The temple and the holyest of all had eyther of them two doores, and euery doore had two lytle wyckets which were folden in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the doores of the temple there were made Cherubins and date trees, lyke as vpon the wales: and a great thycke balke of wood was before on the outsyde of the porche. Upon bothe the sydes of the walles of ỹ porche, there were made depe wyndowes & date trees, hauynge beames and balkes, lyke as the house had.

¶ The .xlii. Chapter.

¶ Of the chambers of the temple for the Preestes and the holy thynges.

Then caryed he me out in to the fore A courte towarde the north, & brought me in to the chambre that stode ouer agaynst ỹ backbuylding northward whiche had the length of an .C. cubytes, whose doore turned towarde the north. The wydnesse contayned .l. cubytes: ouer agaynst the .xx. cubytes of the innermer court & agaynst the paued worke that was in the court, besyde al these thre there stode pyllers, one ouer agaynst another. And before this chambre there was a walkyng place of .x. cubytes wyde, & within was a way of one cubyte wyde, and theyr doores towarde the north. Thus the hyest chambres were alwaye narrower then the lowest & myddlemost of the buylding, for they bare chambre vpon chambre, and stode thre together one vpon an other, not hauing pillers lyke the fore court: therfore were they smaller then those benethe & in the myddest to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

The wall wout that stode by the chambres B
towarde the vttermost courte vpon the foresyde of the chambres, was .l. cubytes longe, for the length of ỹ vttermost chambres in the fore court was .l. cubytes also: but the length therof before the temple was an .C. cubytes. These chambres had vnder them an intraũce of ỹ eastsyde, whereby a man myght go into thẽ out of the fore court thorow the thicke wall of the fore court toward the east, ryght ouer agaynst the seperated buyldyng. Before the same buyldyng vpon this syde there were chambres also, whiche had a way vnto them, lyke as the chambre of the north syde of the same length and wydenesse.

Theyr intraunce, fashyon, and doores were also of the same maner. Yee, euen lyke as the other chambre doores were: so were those also of the southsyde. And before the waye towarde the syngers steppes on the east syde there stode a doore to go in at. Then sayd he vnto me: The C chambres towarde the north & the south whiche stande before the backe buyldynge: those be holy habitacions, wherin the preastes that do seruyce before the Lorde, must eate the moost holy offerynges: and there must they laye the moost holy offerynges: meate offerynges, synne offerynges, and trespace offerynges: for it is an holy place. When the preastes come therin, they shall not go out in to the fore court: but (seynge they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of their mynystracyon, & put on other garmentes, when they haue any thynge to do with the people.

Nowe when he had measured all the innermer house, he brought me forth thorowe the east D parte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde with the metrodde, whiche rounde aboute contayned .v. C. metrodes: And the northsyde measured he, which contayned rounde aboute euen so moche. The other two sydes also towarde the south and the west, whyche he measured, conteyned eyther of them fyue hundred metroddes. So he measured all ꝯ foure sydes, where there went a wall rounde about fyue hundred metroddes longe, & as brode also whych seperated the holy from the vnholy.

¶ The.xliii.Chapter.

¶ He seeth the glory of God goinge into the Temple from whence it had before departed. He mencioneth the ydolatry of the chyldre of Israel, for the which they were consumed and brought to nought. He is commaunded to call them agayne to repentaunce.

A SO he brought me to the dore that turneth towarde the easte. Beholde, then came the glorye of the God of Israell, from out of the east, whose voyce was lyke a great noyse of waters and the earth was lyghtened with his glory. His syght to loke vpon was * lyke the fyrste that I sawe, when I went in, what tyme as the citye shuld haue bene destroyed: * and lyke the vision that I sawe by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face: but the glorye of the Lorde came into the house, thorowe the east dore. So a wynde toke me vp and brought me into the innermer courte, & beholde: the house was ful of the glory of ꝯ Lord.

But nowe they shal put away their C whordome, and the deade bodyes of theyr kynges out of my syght, that I maye dwell among zacha.ii.a them for euermore. * Therfore O thou sonne of man shewe thou the housholde of Israell a temple that they maye be ashamed of theyr wyckednesse and measure thē selues an example therat.

Exo.xxi.a. and.xlvi.c. Epo.xxi.a.

And when they be ashamed of al theyr workes, then shewe them the fourme and fashion of the temple, the cōmynge in, the goynge oute, all the maner and descripcyon therof. Yee, all the vses and ordynaunces of it, that they may kepe & fulfyll all the fashyons and customes therof.

D This is the descripcyon of the house. Aboue vpon the mount rounde about all the corners, it shalbe the holyest of all. Beholde, that is the descripcyon and fashyon of the house. This is the measur of the aultar, after ꝯ true cubyte: which is a spanne longer then another cubyte, his bottom in the mydst was a cubyte longe and wyde, and the ledge that went rounde aboute it, was a spanne brode. This is the hygth of the aultare. From the ground to the lowar steps, the length is two cubytes: and the bredthe one cubyte: and from the lower steppes to the hygher, are foure cubytes, and the bredth but one cubyte:

* The aulter was foure cubytes hye, & from the aultare vpwarde stode foure hornes, and it was twelue cubytes longe, and twelue cubytes brode vpon the four corners: the courcynge of ꝯ aultar was fourtene cubytes longe and brode vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute had halfe a cubyte, and the bottome therof rounde aboute one cubyte: his steps E stode towarde the easte. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayth the Lorde God these are ꝯ ordynaunces and lawes of the aulter in the daye when it is made to offer burnte offerynges, and to sprynkle bloude therupon. To ꝯ prestes, to the Leuites that be of the sede of Sadoch * and treade before me to do me seruyce, sayeth the Lord God Unto these geue thou a yong bullocke for a synne offeryng: and take ꝯ bloud of hym, and sprynkle his foure hornes withal: & the foure corners of the aultare couerynge, with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute, herewyth shalte thou clense it, & reconcyle it. * Thou shalt Leui.viii.c. take the bullocke also of the synne offryng, and F burne hym in a seuerall place without the Sanctuary. The nexte daye, take a gote bucke, without blemyshe for a synne offeryng, to reconcyle the Aultare wythall, lyke as it was reconcyled wyth the bullocke.

Ezec.xliiii.b. and.xlviii.b.

Nowe when thou hast made it cleane, then offer a youge bullocke * without blemyshe, and Leu.xxii.a. a ramme oute of the flocke without blemysh also. Offer them before the Lorde, and let ꝯ Preest caste * salte therupon, and geue them so vnto the Leui.ii.b. Lorde for a burnt offeryng. Seuen dayes shalt G thou brynge euery daye a gote bucke for synne. A yonge bullocke and a ram of the flocke, bothe without blemysh, shall they offer. Seuen dayes shall they reconcyle and clense the aulter, and offer vpon it. When these dayes are expyred, then vpon the eyghte daye and so forth, the Preestes shall offer theyr burnt offerynges and helthoffe rynges vpon the aultare: so I wyll be mercyful vnto you, sayth the Lorde God.

And in the feast of the seuen dayes he shall offer euery daye a bullocke & a ramme, that are without blemysh for a burntofferyng vnto the Lorde: and an hegote daylye for a synoffrenge. For the meat offerynges he shal geue euer an Ephah to a bullock, an Epha to a ramme, and an hyn of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the .xv. day of the seueuth moneth, he shal kepe the seuen dayes holy, one after another, euē as the other seuen dayes: with the synoffryng, burntofferyng, meatofferyng, and with oyle.

¶ The sacrifyces of the Sabboth and of the newe mones. Thorowe whiche dores they must go in, or come out of the temple, &c.

THus sayth the Lorde God: ꝑ dore A of the innermer courte towarede ꝑ East shalbe shut ꝑ syxe worckynge dayes: but in the Sabboth, and in the daye of the new mone it shalbe opened. Then shall ꝑ prynce come vnder the dore porch, & stande styl without by the dore cheke. So the prestes shal offer vp hys burnt and helthofferynges. And he shall worshyp at the dore post, & go his way forth agayn but the dore shal nomore be shut tyl ꝑ euenyng. B

On the same maner shall the people of ꝑ land also do theyr worshyp before the Lord wythout this dore vpon the Sabbothes and new mones This is nowe the burntofferyng, that ꝑ prynce shall bryng vnto the Lorde vpon the Sabboth syxe lambes without blemysh, and a ram without blemysh, and an Ephah for a meatofferyng with the ram. As for the lambes, he maye geue as many meatoffrynges to them as he wyl: and an hyn of oyle to an ephah. In the daye of ꝑ newe moneth it shalbe a yonge bullocke without blemysh: syxe lambes and a ram also without blemysh: With the bullocke he shall geue an ephah and wyth the ramme an ephah also for a meateoffering, but to the lambes, what he maye come by. And euer an hin of oyle to an ephah. C

When the prynce cōmeth, he shal go vnder the dore porche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of ꝑ lande come before the Lord in the hye solempne feast, as many as come in by the north dore to do worshyp, shal go out agayn at the south dore. And they ꝑ come in at the south dore, shall go forth agayne at the north dore. There shall none go out at the dore, where he came in, but shall go ryght forth ouer on the other syde, and the Prynce shall go in and out amonge them. Upon the solempne and hye feast dayes this shalbe the meatofferyng.

D An Ephah to a bullocke, and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambes, as many as he wyl: but euer an hin of oyle to an ephah. Nowe when the prynce bryngeth a burntoffring, or an helthoffe ryng with a frewyl vnto the Lord, the east dore shalbe opened vnto hym, that he maye do wyth his burnt and helthoffringes, as he doth vpon ꝑ Sabboth, & when he goeth forthe, the dore shall be shut after hym agayne. He shall dayly bryng vnto the Lorde a lambe of a yere olde without blemysh for a burnt offerynge: thys shall he do euery morninge.

E And for a meatofferyng, he shall geue ꝑ syxte parte of an Ephah, and ꝑ thyrde parte of an hin of oyle, to myngle with ꝑ cakes euery morninge Yee, this shalbe a dayly meatofferyng vnto the Lorde: for an euerlastyng ordynaunce: and thus shal the lambe the meatoffryng and oyle be geuen euery morninge, for a dayly burnt offeryng.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: If the prince geue a gyfte vnto any of his sonnes, then shall it be hys sonnes heritage perpetuall, that he may possesse it. But yf he wyl geue one of his seruaūtes, some of his heritage, it shalbe his to the * kre yere, and then to returne agayne vnto ꝑ prynce: for his heritage shalbe his sonnes only. Leu.xxv.a. This is the place where the Preastes shal dyght the trespace and synofferynges, and bake the meatoffrynges, that they nede not beare thē into the outwarde courte: and so to vnhalowe ỹ people. So he brought me into ỹ vtmost courte rounde aboute all the foure corners. Beholde: in euery corner of the courte, there was yet a lytle courte. Yea, in al four corners of the court, there was made a lytle court of fortye cubytes longe, and thyrty cubytes brode: these four lytle courtes were of one lyke measure, and there went a rydge wall rounde a boute them all four, vnder the which ther were harthes made round about Then sayde he vnto me. B After this he measured a thousande agayne then was it suche a ryuer, ỹ I myght not wade thorow it. The water was so depe, that it was nedefull to haue swymmed, for it myght not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, O thou son of man? and wyth that he brought me to the ryuer banke agayne. Nowe when I came there, there stode many trees vpon ether syde of the ryuer banke. Then sayde he vnto me: Thys water that floweth out towarde ỹ easte, and runneth downe into the playne felde, commeth into the see: and from the see it runneth out: and maketh the waters whole. Unto

B Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcyon of hys owne meate: and of the wyne, whyche he dranke hym selfe, so to norysche them thre yere: that afterwarde they myght stand before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the chyldren of Juda: namely Danyel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Unto these the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Danyel Balthasar Ananias, Sidrach: Misael, Misach: and Azarias, Abednago. But Danyel was at a poynte wyth hym selfe, * that he Gen.xliii.c Tobi.i.b. Judi.xii.a wolde not be defyled thorowe the kynges meat nor the wyne whyche he dronke. And this he desyred of the chefe chamberlayne, leste he shoulde defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauoure and grace before the chefe chamberlayne that he sayde vnto hym: I am afrayde of my Lorde the kynge, which hath appoynted you your meat & drynke: leest he spye youre faces to be worse lykenge then the other sprynngaldes of your age, & so ye shall make me lose my heade vnto ꝑ kyng. C

Then Danyel answered Melassar, whome the chefe chamberlayn had set ouer Daniel Ananias, Misael, and Asarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruaũtes, & let vs haue pottage to eate, and water to drynke, then loke vpon our faces, and theyrs that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seyst, so deale wyth vs thy seruaũtes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them x. dayes. And after ꝑ ten dayes, theyr faces were better lykynge and fatter then all ꝑ yonge sprygngaldes, which dyd eate of the kynges meate.

D Thus Melassar toke away theyr meate and wyne, & gaue them pottage therfore. God gaue nowe these foure sprygngaldes connyng and learnynge in all scrypture and wysedome: but vnto Danyel specyally, he gaue vnderstandyng of al vysyons and dreames. Nowe when ꝑ tyme was expyred, that the kyng had appoynted to bryng in these yonge sprygngaldes vnto hym, the chefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor and the kyng comuned with them. But amonge them all were founde none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Asarias. Therfore stode they before the kynge in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng, that he enquyred of them, found them ten tymes better, then all the southsayers and charmers, that were in all hys realme. And Danyel abode styll, vnto the fyrst yere of kynge Cirus.

A IN the seconde yeare of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, * where thorow hys spirryte was vexed, & his slepe brake from him. Then the kyng commaunded to call together all the sothsayers, charmers wytches, and Chaldees, for to shewe the kynge hys dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spryte was so troubled therwyth, that I haue cleane forgotten, what I dreamed. Upon this the Chaldees answered the kynge in ꝑ Syryans speche: O kyng God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruaũtes thy dreame, and we shall shewe the, what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Chaldees theyr answere and sayde: It is gone fro me. Yf ye wyl not make me vnderstande the dreame wyth the interpretacyon therof, ye shal dye, and your houses shalbe prysed.

But yf ye tell me the dreame & the meanyng B therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and great honoure: onely shewe me the dreame and the sygnyfycacion of it. They answered agayne and sayde: the kyng must shewe his seruauntes the dreame: and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayynge: I perceyue of a truth, that ye do but prolonge ꝑ tyme for so much as ye se that the thyng is gone from me. Therfore yf ye wyll not tell me the dreame, ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye fayne & dissemble with vayne wordes, whych ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therfore tell me ꝑ dreame, and so shall I knowe, yf ye can shew me what it meaneth. Upon this, the Chaldees gaue answere before the Kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earthe, that can tell the thynge, whiche the kynge speaketh of: yea, there is nether kyng prince nor Lorde, that euer asked such thynges at a sothsayer, charmer or Chaldey: for it is a very harde matter, that the kynge requyreth. Neyther is there any, that can certifye the kynge therof, excepte the goddes: whose dwellyng is not amonge the creatures.

For the whiche cause the kynge was wroth C with greate indignacyon, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon: and the proclamacyon went forth, & the wyse men were slayne. They sought also to slaye Danyel wyth hys companyons. Then Danyel enquyred of Arioch the kynges stewarde, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forth already to kil suche as were wyse at Babylon. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch beynge then the kynges deputye. Why hath the kyng proclaymed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon this went Daniel vp, and desyred the kynge that he myght haue leysure, to shewe the kynge ꝑ interpretacyon, and then came he home agayne and shewed the thyng to Ananias, Misael, and Asarias his companyons: ꝑ they shuld beseech the God of heuen for grace in this secret D that Daniel and his fellowes wyth other suche as were wyse in Babylon, perysshed not. Then was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vysyon by nyght. And Danyel praysed the God of Heauen. Daniel also cryed loude, and sayde: O that the name of god myght be praysed for euer and euer, for wysdom and strength ar his owne * he chaungeth the tymes and ages ‡ he putteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges * he geueth wysdome vnto the wyse, and vnderstandynge to those

B Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcyon of hys owne meate: and of the wyne, whyche he dranke hym selfe, so to norysche them thre yere: that afterwarde they myght stand before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the chyldren of Juda: namely Danyel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Unto these the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Danyel Balthasar Ananias, Sidrach: Misael, Misach: and Azarias, Abednago. But Danyel was at a poynte wyth hym selfe, * that he Gen.xliii.c Tobi.i.b. Judi.xii.a wolde not be defyled thorowe the kynges meat nor the wyne whyche he dronke. And this he desyred of the chefe chamberlayne, leste he shoulde defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauoure and grace before the chefe chamberlayne that he sayde vnto hym: I am afrayde of my Lorde the kynge, which hath appoynted you your meat & drynke: leest he spye youre faces to be worse lykenge then the other sprynngaldes of your age, & so ye shall make me lose my heade vnto ꝑ kyng. C

Then Danyel answered Melassar, whome the chefe chamberlayn had set ouer Daniel Ananias, Misael, and Asarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruaũtes, & let vs haue pottage to eate, and water to drynke, then loke vpon our faces, and theyrs that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seyst, so deale wyth vs thy seruaũtes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them x. dayes. And after ꝑ ten dayes, theyr faces were better lykynge and fatter then all ꝑ yonge sprygngaldes, which dyd eate of the kynges meate.

D Thus Melassar toke away theyr meate and wyne, & gaue them pottage therfore. God gaue nowe these foure sprygngaldes connyng and learnynge in all scrypture and wysedome: but vnto Danyel specyally, he gaue vnderstandyng of al vysyons and dreames. Nowe when ꝑ tyme was expyred, that the kyng had appoynted to bryng in these yonge sprygngaldes vnto hym, the chefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor and the kyng comuned with them. But amonge them all were founde none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Asarias. Therfore stode they before the kynge in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng, that he enquyred of them, found them ten tymes better, then all the southsayers and charmers, that were in all hys realme. And Danyel abode styll, vnto the fyrst yere of kynge Cirus.

C The seconde Chapter.

C The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyreth of them both the dreame and the interpretacyon therof. They answer that they can not shew it. The kynge commaundeth all the wyse men of Babylon. to be slayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to solute the question. The lord openeth ꝑ mistery vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kyng, and sheweth hym hys dreame, & the interpretacyon therof. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Christe.

A IN the seconde yeare of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, * where thorow hys spirryte was vexed, & his slepe brake from him. Then the kyng commaunded to call together all the sothsayers, charmers wytches, and Chaldees, for to shewe the kynge hys dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spryte was so troubled therwyth, that I haue cleane forgotten, what I dreamed. Upon this the Chaldees answered the kynge in ꝑ Syryans speche: O kyng God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruaũtes thy dreame, and we shall shewe the, what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Chaldees theyr answere and sayde: It is gone fro me. Yf ye wyl not make me vnderstande the dreame wyth the interpretacyon therof, ye shal dye, and your houses shalbe prysed.

But yf ye tell me the dreame & the meanyng B therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and great honoure: onely shewe me the dreame and the sygnyfycacion of it. They answered agayne and sayde: the kyng must shewe his seruauntes the dreame: and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayynge: I perceyue of a truth, that ye do but prolonge ꝑ tyme for so much as ye se that the thyng is gone from me. Therfore yf ye wyll not tell me the dreame, ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye fayne & dissemble with vayne wordes, whych ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Dan.ii.d, ‡Luke.i.c. Iob.xxxviii.c Jer.xxxii.a

Dan.viii.f. Job.xxxiiii. 1.Tim.vi.c. ¶i.Joh.i.b. to those that vnderstand, he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thyng that lyeth in darknesse, & for the lyghte dwelleth wyth hym.

I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou GOD of my fathers) that thou haste lente me wysedome and strengthe, and haste shewed me the thynge, that we desyred of the, for thou haste opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Upon this wente Danyel in vnto Arioch, whome the kynge had ordeyned to destroye the wyse at Babylon, he wente vnto hym, & sayde: destroye not suche as be wyse in Babylon, but bynge me in vnto the kynge, and I shall shewe the kynge the interpretacyon. Then Arioch brought Danyel in to the kynge in all the haste, and sayde vnto hym: I haue found a man amõg the prysoners of Juda, that shal shewe the kyng the interpretacyon. Then answered the kynge, and sayde vnto Danyel, whose name was Balthazar. Arte thou he that canste shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, and the interpretacyon therof? Danyel answered the kynge to his face, and sayde: As for this secret: for the which the kynge maketh inquisycion: it is neyther the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer, nor the deuel coniurer that can certifye the kynge of it. * Onely God in Heauen can open secrettes, and he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor what is for to come in the latter dayes.

Matth.xi.e.

E Thy dreame, and that which thou hast sene in thyne heade vpon thy bed, is thys: O kynge, thou dydest cast in thy mynde, what shuld come hereafter. So he that is the opener of mysteries telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, thys secrete is not shewed me, for any wysdome that I haue, more then any other liuynge, but onely that I myght shewe the kynge the interpretacyon, and that he myght knowe the thoughtes of his owne harte. Thou kyng sawest, & beholde, there stode before the a greate ymage whose fygure was maruelouse greate, and hys vysage grymme. The ymages heade was of fyne golde his brest and armes of syluer, his bodye and loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

Luke.xx.b. Mat.xxi.c. *Thys thou sawest tyll the tyme, that wythoute any handes, there was hewen of a stone, which smote the ymage vpon the fete, that were both of yron and earth, and brake them to pouldere: then was the yron, the earthe, the copper, the syluer and golde broken all together in peces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth away from the sõmer flourrs, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a greate mountayne, whiche fulfylleth the whole earth: This is the dreame. And nowe wyll we shewe before the kynge what it meaneth.

F Dan.e.d. *O Kynge, thou arte a Kynge of Kynges. For the God of heuen hath geuen ỹ a kyngdom ryches, strength, and maiestye: and hath delyuered the all thynges, that are amonge the chyldren of men: the beastes of the felde and the foules vnder the Heauen, and geuen the dominyon ouer them all: Thou art that golden heade. After that there shall aryse another kyngdomme, which shalbe lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shalbe lyke copper, and haue dominacyon in all landes. The fourth kyngdome shalbe as strong as yron. For lyke as yron bruseth & breaketh all thynges: Yea, euen as yron beateth euery thynge downe: so shal it beate downe and destroye. Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome, whyche neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde myxte wyth it, for so muche as thou haste sene the yron myxte with ỹ claye. The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye, syguifyeth: that it shall be a kyngdom, partely stronge & partely weake And where as thou sawest yron mixt with clay they shall mynge them selues wyth the sede of symple people, and yet not contynue one with another lyke as yron wyll not be souldered with a potte shearde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heauen set vp an *euerlastynge kyngdomme which shall not perysshe, and his kyngdome shal not be geuen ouer to another people: yea, ỹ same shall breake, and destroye all these kyngdomes but it shall endure for euer.

G Dan.vii.b.

Hebr.xii.c. Mat.xxi.c. And where as thou sawest, that without any handes there was cut out of the * mounte ‡ a stone, whiche brake the yron, the copper, ỹ earth the syluer and golde in peces: by that hathe the greate God shewed the kynge, what wyl come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacyon of it is sure. Then ỹ kyng Nabuchodonosor * fell downe vpon his face, and bowed hym selfe vnto Danyel, and commaunded that they shoulde offer meatofferynges and swete odoures vnto hym. The kynge answered Danyel, and sayde: yee, of a trueth your God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lord aboue all kynges, and an opener of secrettes: seyng thou canst discouer this misterye. So ỹ kyng made Daniel a great man, and gaue hym many and great gyftes.

Dan.ii.f. Acte.xiiii.b. Gene.xli.e.

*He made hym rular of all the countrees of Babylon, and Lorde of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel intreated the kyng for Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, so that he made them rulars ouer all the offycers in ỹ land of Babylon: But Danyel hym selfe remayned styll in the courte by the kynge.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

¶ The kyng setteth vp a golden Jmage, which he cõmaundeth to be worshypped. Sidrach Misach, and Abednago are accused becauls they despysed the kynges commaundemẽt. They are brought vnto the kynge and cõmaunded to worshyp the ymage, they refuse to do it, and are put into a burnynge ouen. By beleke in God they are delyuered frome the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the syght of the myracle.

A Abuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden ymage to be made, whyche was forty cubytes hye, and syxe cubites thicke. This he made to be set vp in the felde of Dura in the lande of Babylon, and sent oute to gather together ỹ dukes lordes and nobles, ỹ iudges and offycers, the debytes and shreues: wt all the rulers of the lande: that they might come to the dedicacion of the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp: So the dukes, Lordes and nobles, ỹ Judges and offycers, debytes and shreues with all the rulers of ỹ lande gathered them together and came vnto the dedicatynge of the ymage, ỹ Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

B Nowe when they stode before the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedel cryed out with all his myght: O ye people, kynredes and tonges, to you be it sayde: ỹ when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, whyche shalbe blowen, wyth the harpes, shawmes, Psalteryes, Simphonyes and all maner of Musyke: ye fall downe and worshyppe that golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath set vp. Whoso then falleth not downe and boweth hym selfe shall euen ỹ same houre be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Therfore when all the folke hearde the noyse of the trompettes that were blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonies, and all kynde of melody, then all ỹ people kynreds and nacyons fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage, ỹ Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

C Nowe were there certayne men of the Chaldees, that went euẽ then and accused the Jewes and sayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beyng kynge hast geuen a commaundemente, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompets harpes, shawmes, Psalteryes, symphonies, and all the other melodyes shall fal downe and bow them selues, towarde the golden ymage: who so then fell not downe and worshypped not that he shulde be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Now Dani. 3. 8. are there certayne Jewes * whome thou hast set ouer the offycers of the lande of Babilon: namely, Sidrach, Misach: and Abednago. These mẽ (O kynge) regarde not thy cõmaundement, yee they wyll not serue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden ymage, that ỹ hast set vp.

D Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrathe and displeasure, cõmaunded that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago shuld be brought vnto him So these men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: what? O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednabo, wyll not you serue my goddes? nor bowe your selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? Wel, be redy here after. When ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the harpes shawmes, psalteryes, symphonies and all the other melodyes: that ye fall downe, and worshyp the ymage whibe I haue made. But yf ye worshyppe it not, ye shalbe cast immedyatly into an hote burnynge ouen. Let se, what God is there, that maye delyuer you oute of my handes. Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago answered ỹ king and sayde. O Nabuchodonosor, we oughte not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why? our Mat. xbi. g. God whome we serue * is able to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) & can rycht well delyuer vs out of thy handes.

E And though he wyl not, yet shalt thou know (O kynge) that we wyll not serue thy goddes, nor do reuerence to that Image, whyche thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacion, so that the countenauce of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded that the ouen shuld be made seuen tymes hotter then it was wonte to be: and spake vnto the strongest worthies that were in his hoste, for to bynd Misach, and Sidrach, and Abednago, & to cast them into the hote burnynge ouen.

So these men were bounde in theyre cotes, hosen, shoes, with theyre other garmentes, and caste into an hote burnynge ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so strayte, and the ouen was exceadynge hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach: and Abednago ỹ flam of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men, Sidrach, and Misach, & Abednago fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beyng faste bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge maruepled and stode vp in all haste: he spake vnto his counsayle, and sayde, dyd not you caste these thre men bounde into the fyre? They answered, and sayd vnto the kyng: Yea, O kyng. He answered and sayde: lo, for all that, yet do I se foure men goyng louse in the mydst of the fyre, and nothyng corrupte, and the fourth is lyke the sonne of god to loke vpon.

F

Upon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnynge ouen, he spake also and sayde: O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago ye seruauntes of the hye god, go forth, and come hyther. And so Sidrach, Misach and Abednago went out of the fyre. Then the dukes lordes, and nobles, and the kynges counsayle came together to se these men, * vpon whome the fyre had no maner of power in theyr bodyes. In so muche that the very heare of theyre heade was not burnte, and theyr clothes vnchaunged: yea, there was no smell of fyre kelte vpon them.
Esa. xliii. a

G Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago: * whiche hath sent his aungell, and deken ded his seruauntes, that put theyr trucke in him that hath aultered the kynges commaundemẽt and ieoparde theyre bodyes there vpon, rather then they wolde serue or worshyppe any other God: excepte theyr owne God only:

Therfore I wyll and commaunde, that all people, kynredes, and tonges, whyche speake any blasphemy agaynst ỹ God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and theyr houses shalbe pyped: Bicause * there is no God ỹ may saue, as this. So the kynge promoted Sidrach Misach and Abednago in ỹ lande of Babylon.

¶ The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ Nabuchodonosor dreameth agayn Danyel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonosor is put oute of his realme: and eateth with beastes. He confesseth the power of God, and is restored vnto hys kyngdome.

A Dani. bi. a.

Abuchodonosor * kyng vnto al people, kynredes, and tunges ỹ dwell vpon ỹ whole earth: peace be multiplied amõg you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens & maruelouse workes, ỹ the hye god hath wrought vpon me.

O howe

O, howe great are his tokens, and howe myghtye are hys wonders? *Hys kyngdome is an euerlastynge kyngdome, and hys power lasteth for euer, and euer.

Psal.xlv.b Dani.vii.d Luke.i.c.

I Nabuchodonozor beynge at rest in myne house, and florysshynge in my palace, sawe a dreame, whych made me afrayed: & the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, wyth the visyons of myne heade, troubled me. *Then sente I out a commyssion, that all they whych were of wyse dome at Babylon shulde be brought before me to tell me the interpretation of the dreame. So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees, & conjurers of deuels: to whom I told the dreame but what it betokened, they could not shew me: tyl at the last, there came one Daniel (otherwise called Balthazar, accordyng to the name of my God) whych hath the spryte of the holye goddes in hym, to whome I tolde the dreame, sayenge:

O Balthazar, thou prince of sothsayers: for so muche as I knowe, that thou haste the spryte of the holy goddes, and no secrete is hyd frō the: tell me therfore, what the vysyon of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye signifye. I sawe a vysyon in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde there stode a tree vpon the grounde, which was verye hye, great and myghtye: the heygth reached vnto heauen, and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earthe: hys leaues were fayre, he had very much frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therin.

The beastes of the feld had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vysyon vpon my bed: and beholde, a watcher and a holye one came downe from heauen, and cryed myghtely, sayenge: Hewe downe the tree, breake of his braunches, shake of hys leaues, and scatre hys frute abrode: that all the beastes maye get them awaye from vnder hym and the foules from hys braunches. Neuertheles, leaue the groūde of hys rote styl in ỹ earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne feld, wyth cheynes of yron and stele. Wyth the dewe of heauen shall he be wet, and he shall haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes

That mans harte of hys shalbe taken from hym, and the beastes harte shalbe gyuen him tyl seuen yeares be come and gone vpon hym.

Thys earande of the watcher, is a commaundement grounded and sought out in the councell of hym, that is moost holye: to learne men for to vnderstande, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them, to whom it lyketh hym, and bryngeth the verye outcastes of men ouer them. Thys is the dreame, that I kynge Nabuchodonozor haue sene. Therfore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifyeth: for so muche as all the wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me what it meaneth. But thou cāst do it, for the spryte of ỹ holy goddes is in the. Then daniel (whose name was Balthazar) held hys peace by the space of one houre and hys thoughtes troubled hym. So ỹ kyng spake and sayd: O Balthazar, let neyther the dreame nor the interpretacion therof feare the. Balthazar answered sayeng: O my Lorde, this dreame happen to thyne enemeis, and the interpretaciō to thyne aduersaryes. As for the tree that thou sawest whych was so great and myghty, whose heygth reached vnto the heauen, and hys bredth into all the world, whose leaues were fayre, and the frute muche, vnder the whiche the beastes of the felde had theyr habitacion, and vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayre dyd syt.

Euen thou: O kyng arte the tree, great and stroge. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, and reacheth vnto heauen, so doth thy power to the endes of ỹ earth. But where as the kynge sawe a watcher euen an holy angell, that came downe from heauen, and sayd: hewe downe the tree, and destroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the roote in the earth and bynde hym vpon the playne feld with cheynes of yron & stele. He shalbe wet with the dewe of heuen and his part shalbe with the beastes of the felde, tyl. vii. yeares be come and gone vpon hym: Thys (O kynge) is ỹ interpretacion, yea, it is the very deuyce of him, that is hyest of all & it toucheth my lorde the kynge.

E

Thou shalt be cast out from mē, & thy dwellynge shalbe wyth the beastes of the felde, with grasse shalt thou be fed like an oxe. Thou muste be wet wyth the dewe of the heauen: yea, seuen yeares shall come, and go vpon the, tyl ỹ knowe *that the hyest hathe power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them to whome he lyst. Moreouer, where as it was sayd, ỹ the roote of the tree shulde be lefte styll in the grounde: it betokeneth, ỹ thy kyngdome shall remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast learned to knowe, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore O kynge be contente wyth my councell, that thou mayst redeme thy synnes with almesse *& thyne offences wyth mercye to pooze people: for thys shalbe an healynge of thyne erroure. All these thynges touch the kynge Nabuchodonozor.

Dani.iv.e. Ie.xxvii.a Eccle.xix.a

So after. xii. monethes, the kynge walked F vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayde: Thys is the greate citye of Babylon, whyche I my selfe (wyth my power and stengthe) haue made a kynges courte, for the honoure of my maiestye. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fel a voyce from heauen, sayenge: O kynge Nabuchodonozor, to the be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalte be cast out of mens companye: thy dwellynge shalbe wyth the beastes of the feld, so that thou shalt eate grasse as an oxe, tyll seuen yeares be come and gone ouer the: euen vntyll thou knowest, that the hyest hath power vpon the kingdomes of men, & that he maye gyue them, vnto whome it pleaseth hym. The verye same houre was thys matter fulfylled vppon Nabuchodonozor: so that he was caste oute of mens companye, and dyd eate grasse lyke an oxe. Hys bodye was wet wyth the dewe of heauen, tyll hys heeres were as great as Aegles fethers, and his nayles lyke byrdes clawes.

When thys tyme was past, I Nabuchodo- G

nolor lyft vp mine eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandynge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto the hyest. I magnifyed and praysed hym that lyueth for euermore Dan.iiii.f. *whose power endureth alwaye, and hys kyngdome from one generacion to another: in comparison of whom all they that dwel vpon the erth are to be reputed as nothynge.
pla.cxxxv.a *He handleth accordyng to his wyl, amonge the powers of heauen, and amonge the inhabytours of the earthe: and there is none that maye

My great estates and princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so ý I had yet greater worshyp.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonozor, loue, magnifye and prayse the kynge of heauen: for all his workes are true, and hys wayes ryght. As for those that go on proudlye, he is able to brynge them downe.

ℂ The.v. Chapter.

ℂ Balthasar kynge of Babylon, abusyng the vessels of the temple, seeth an hand wrytyng in the wal. The sothsayers, called of the kynge, can not expounde the wrytyng: Daniel is called, which readeth it & interpreteth it also. Balthasar beyng slayne: Darius succeadeth in hys rowme.

A KYng Balthazar made a great banket to hys thousande lordes: with al those thousande he made great chere, & whē he was dronken with wine, he cōmaūded to brynge hym the golden & syluer
i.pa.xxxvi.c vessels *which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng & his lordes with his quene and cōcubynes myght drynke therout.

So they brought the golden vessel, that was taken oute of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kynge and hys Lordes wt his quene and concubynes dronke out of them. They dronke wyne and praysed theyr Idols of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wodde and stone.

B In the very same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wrytyng, ryght ouer agaynste the candlestycke vpon the playne wal in the kinges palace, and the kynge
Jerem.l.a sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. *Thē chaunged the kynge hys countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled hym, so that the ioyntes of hys bodye shoke, & his knees smote one agaynst
Dan.ii.a. the other. *Wherfore the kynge cryed myghtely, that they shulde brynge hym the charmers, Caldees, and conjurers of deuels. The kynge spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, & sayd: Who so can reade thys wrytyng, and shewe me the playne meanyng therof: shalbe clothed with purple haue a cheyne of golde aboute hys necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kingdome.

Upon thys, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coulde neyther reade the wrytyng, nor shewe the kynge what it signyfyed. Then was the kynge sore afrayed, in so muche, that hys colour chaunged, and hys lordes were sore vexed

So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the kynge and hys Lordes, the Quene wente vp her selfe in the banket house, and spake vnto the kynge, sayeng: O kynge, God saue thy selfe for euer. Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenaunce be chaūged. For why? there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hathe the Dan.v.a spyrete of the holye goddes wythin hym, * as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge and wysedome lyke the goddes. Yea the kynge Nabuchodonozor thy father made thys mā, cheke of the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees, and readers of destenyes: because that such an aboundaūt spyrete, knowlege and wysedome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde doubtes) was founde in hym: yea, euen in Daniell, whom the kynge named Balthazar. Let thys same daniell be sent for, and he shall tell what it meaneth:

Then was Daniell brought before the king. So the kynge spake vnto Daniell, and sayde: D
Art thou that Daniell: one of the preseners of Juda, whome my father the kynge brought out of Jewry? I haue herde speake of the, that thou hast the spyrete of the holy goddes experience and vnderstandynge, and that there hath bene great wysedome founde in the. Nowe haue there bene brought me, wyse and connynge charmes, to reade thys wrytynge and to shewe me the meanynge therof. But they coulde not tell me, what thys matter signyfyed. Then harde I saye, that thou canst expounde darke thinges, and declare harde doubtes. Well, then yf thou canst reade thys wrytyng, and shewe me the meaning therof, thou shalt be clothed wt purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Daniel answered, and sayd before the kyng: E
* As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy selfe, iiii.reg.v.d
or gyue thy ryche gyftes to another: yet not the Math.x.a.

kinge heare. God the hyest gaue vnto Nabucho donozor thy father, the dignitie of a kinge wyth worshyp and honoure, so that all people, kynredes and tonges stode in awe and feare of hym by reason of the hye estate, that he had lente hym For why, he slewe whome he wolde: he smote, whom it pleased hym. because hys harte was so proude, & hys stomacke set so fast vnto wylfulnesse: he was deposed frō hys kyngly trone, and hys maiestye was taken frō hym. He was shut out frō amonge men, hys harte was lyke a beastes harte, and hys dwellynge was wyth the wylde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe, & hys bodye was wet wyth the dewe of the heauen, tyl he knewe, that the hyest had power vpon the kyngdomes of mē and setteth ouer them, whom he lyst.

And thou hys sonne (O Balthazar) for all F that thou, and thy Lordes, wyth thy quene and thy concubynes, myght drynke wyne therout. And hast praysed the Idoles of syluer and golde copper and yron, of wood and stone, whych neyther se, heare nor vnderstande. As for the God Actu.xvij.b *in whose hande consisteth thy breath, & all thy wayes: thou hast not loued hym.

G Therfore is the palme of thys hande sente hyther from hym, to token vp thys wrytynge. And thys is the scripture, that is wrytten vp: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretacio of the thinge is this: Mane, God hath nombred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetell, thou arte wayed in the balaunce, and arte founde to lyght: Phares, thy kyngdome is delte in partes, and gyuen to the Medes and Parses.

Then commaunded Balthazar, to cloth Daniell wyth purple, to hange a chayne of golde about hys necke, and to make a proclamacion cōcernynge hym: that he shulde be the ruler of the thyrde part of hys kingdome. *The verye same Esa.xlvij.b nyght was Balthazar the kyng of the Caldees slayne, ++ Darius out of Medea toke in the kingDan.v.a. dome, beyng.lxij. yeare of age.

¶ The.vi. Chapter.

¶ Daniell is made ruler ouer the lordes. The Imagynacion of an acte agaynste Daniell. The proclamacion of the atte, wherof Daniell is accused vnto the kynge as a transgressour: He is put into a denne of Lyons by the commaundemente of the kynge: He is delyuered by fayth in God: Daniels accusers are put vnto ꝑ Lyons to be torne in sonder: Darius by the proclamacyon of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

A It pleased Darius to set ouer his kyngdom an.C. and.xx. Lordes, whiche shulde be in all hys kingdō about. Aboue these he set three princes (of whome Daniell was one) that the Lordes might gyue accōptes vnto them, & the kyng to be vndiseased

But Daniell exceaded all these princes and lordes, for the sperite of God was plenteouse in him: so that the kynge was mynded to sette him ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the princes & lordes sought, to pycke out in Daniel some quarel against the kyngdome: yet coulde they fynde none occasion nor faute vpon hym. For why? he was so faythfull, that there was no blame nor dishonestye founde in hym.

Then sayde these men: we can get no quarell B agaynst thys Daniell, except it be in the lawe of hys God. Upon thys, went the princes and lordes together vnto the kynge, and sayd thus vnto hym: Kynge Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greate estates of the realme, as the Princes, Dukes, Senatours, and Judges, are determed to put out a cōmaundement of ꝑ kyng and to make a sure statute: namely, that who so desyreth any peticion, ether of any God or man (wythin these.xxx. dayes) except it be only of ꝑ, O kynge: the same person may be caste into the Lyons denne. Wherfore, O kynge, confirme ꝑ thys statute, and make a wrytyng: ꝑ the thynge whyche the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned, be not altered nor broken.

C So Darius made the wrytynge: & cōfirmed it. Nowe when Daniell vnderstode that ꝑ wrytynge was made, he went into his house: and the wyndowes of hys wall towarde Jerusalē stode open. There kneled he downe vpon hys knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made hys peticion: & praysed hys God, lyke as hys maner was to do afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, & founde Daniel makynge hys peticion, and prayenge vnto hys God. So they came to the kynge, and spake before hym concernynge his commaundemente, sayenge: O kynge, hast thou not subscribed the statute: that wythin.xxx. dayes who so requyreth hys peticion of anye God or man but only of thy selfe, O kynge: he shalbe cast into ꝑ denne of the Lyons? The kynge answered, and sayde: yea, it is true. It muste be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the D kynge: Daniell one of the preseners of Juda, O kynge, regardeth neyther the, nor thy statute, ꝑ thou hast made: but maketh his peticion thre tymes a daye. When the kynge herd these wordes he was sore gerued, and wolde haue excused Daniell, to delyuer him, and put of ꝑ matter, vntyll the Sunne wente downe to the intente that he myght saue hym.

These men percepuynge the kynges mynde sayde vnto hym: knowe thys (O kyng) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is that the commaundement and statute whiche the kynge maketh, maye not be altered. * Then the kinge bad Bel.f. them bynge Daniel, and they cast him into the Lyons denne.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniell, and sayde: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, euen he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layed vpon the hole of ꝑ denne, thys the kynge sealed wyth hys owne rynge, & wyth the sygnet of hys princes: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel shulde not be broken.

So the kynge went vnto his palace, and eate E no meate that nyght nether was there any mynistrelsye brought in before hym, neyther coulde he take any slepe. But bytymes in the morynyng at the breake of the daye, the kynge arose, and went in all hast vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Nowe as he came nye vnto the dēne, he cryed wyth a pyteous voyce vnto Daniel, yea ꝑ kyng spake and sayde vnto Daniell: O Daniell, thou seruaunte of the lyuynge God, is not thy God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to delyuer the from the lyons? Daniell sayd vnto the kyng. O F Dan.iij.e. kynge God saue thy lyfe for euer. * My God Act.xv.c. hath sent hys angell whych hath shut the lyons Jud.xiij.c mouthes, so that they myght not hurte me. For 1.reg.xvij.c why? myne vngyltynesse is founde oute before Deut.xi.f. him. And as for ꝑ, O kyng, I neuer offēded the.

Then was the kyng exceadyng glad, and cōmaunded to take Daniell out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, & no maner of hurt, was founde vpō him. For he put his trust in hys god. And as for those mē which had accused Daniel, the kyng cōmaunded to bynge them, and to cast them in the lyons denne: them, Dan.xiiii.g they yr chyldrē and they yr wyues. * So the lyons had the maistry of them, and brake all they yr bones asonder, or euer they came at the grounde.

Dan.iii.k. *After thys, wrote kynge Darius vnto al people, kynredes, and tonges, that dwelte in all landes: peace be multiplied wyth you. My commaundemente is, in all my dominion and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God.

Deu.xiiii.c *For he is the lyuynge God, whyche abydeth euer: his kyngdome shall not fayle, and his Esa.xliii.b power is euerlasting. * It is he that delyuereth Osee.xiii.a and saueth: he dothe wonders and maruaylous Dan.vi.f. workes in heuen and in earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the lyons. Thys Daniel prospered in the raygne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

¶ The.vii. Chapter.

¶ A vyson of foure beastes is shewed vnto Daniell. The vyson is interpreted of foure kyngdomes of the worlde Of the power and encrease of Antichryste. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Christ.

A IN the fyrste yeare of Balthazar kynge of Babylon, sawe Daniell a dreame, & a vyson was in hys heade vpon hys bedde. Whyche dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is thys: Daniell spake and sayd: I sawe in my vyson by nyght, and beholde: the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the see, and foure great beastes came vp frō the see one lyke another.

Jer.xlix.a.b Ese.i.b.f.a Eze.xvii.a The fyrst was as * a lion, and yet had he eagles wynges. I sawe, that hys wynges were pluckte from hym, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon hys fete as a man, and that there was gyuen hym a mans harte.

B Pro.xviii.c Beholde, the second beast was like a * Beer, and stode vpon the one syde. Amonge hys teeth in hys mouthe he had .iii. greate longe teeth and it was sayde vnto hym: Aryse: eate vp muche flesshe. Then I loked, and beholde, there was an other lyke vnto a Leoparde, thys had wynges Dan.viii.b and.xi.a. as a foule, * euen foure vpon the backe. Thys beaste had foure heades, & there was power gyuen hym. After this I sawe in a vision by nyght and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and maruelous stronge. It had greate yron teeth it deuoured and destroyed, & stamped the residue vnder hys fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beastes that were before it: for it had

C Apoc.xiii.c and.xviii.a * ten hornes, wherof I toke good hede.

And beholde, there came vp amonge them another lytle horne, before whome there were thre of the fyrste hornes pluckt awaye. Beholde thys horne had eyes lyke a man: and mouthe Apoc.i.c. speakyng presumptuous thynges. * I loked tyl xiii.a.xx.b. the seates were prepared, and tyll the olde aged Dan.v.a. sat hym downe. Hys clothynge was as whyte as snowe, and the heeres of hys head lyke ỹ pure woll. Hys throne was lyke the fyrye flame, and hys wheles as the burnynge fyre. There drewe forth a fyrye streme: and went out from hym

Apoc.v.d. * A thousande tymes a thousande serued hym. x. M. tymes ten thousande stode before hym. The iudgement was set, & the bokes opened. Then toke I hede therevnto, bycause of the voyce of the proude wordes: which the horne spake. I beholde tyll the beast was slayne, and his body destroyed, * geuen ouer to be brente in the fyre.

mat.xxv.b Apoc.xix.b xx.c As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but they re lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vision D by nyghte, and beholde, * there came one in the mat.xxiii.c cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a mā, whych Actu.i.b wente vnto the olde aged, before whome they Apoc.i.a. brought hym. Then gaue he hym * power and dignitie regal, that al people, tribes and tonges shulde serue hym. * Hys power is an euerlasting power, which shall neuer be put downe: and his kyngdome endureth vncorrupte. My hart was vexed, * & I Daniell had a troubled spryte within me, & the visions of my heade made me afrayed, tyl I gat me vnto * one of them that stode by, to knowe the truth, concernynge all these thynges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretacion of these thynges.

Dan.iii.c Deut.xx.b

These foure great beastes, are foure kinges E whyche shall aryse out of the earthe. These shall take in the kyngdome of the sayntes of the most hyest, and possesse it styll more and more for a longe season. After thys I requyred diligentlye to knowe the truth, concerning the fourth beast, whyche was so farre vnlyke the other beastes, and so horrible, whose teeth were of yron, & hys nayles of brasse: whyche deuoured and destroyed and stamped the residue vnder hys fete. I desyred also to knowe the truth, as touchyng ỹ * ten Apoc.xiii.a and.xvii.c hornes that he had vpon hys heade and thys other whyche came vp afterwarde, before whose face there fell downe thre, which horne had eyes & a mouthe that spake presumptuous thynges, and loked wyth a grymmer vysage then hys fellowes. I beheld, and the same horne made ba- F tell agaynst the sayntes, yea, and gat the victorye of them vntyll the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgement was gyuen to the chefeste sayntes: and tyll the tyme that the sayntes had ỹ kyngdome in possession. He gaue me thys answere. That fourth beaste shalbe the fourthe kyngdome vpon earth: it shalbe more then al other kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

G Zach.i.c. * The ten hornes, are ten kynges, that shall aryse out of the kyngdome, after whome there shall stande vp another, whyche shalbe greater then the fyrst. He shall subdue thre kynges, and shall speake wordes agaynste the hyest of all: he shall destroye the sayntes of the moost hyest, * & Dan.vii.c thynke, that he may chaunge tymes and lawes They shalbe gyuen vnder hys power, * vntyl a Apoc.xii.d. tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme.

But the iudgement shalbe kepte, so that hys power shalbe taken from him, for he shall be destroyed, & perysh at the last. As for ỹ kyngdom, power, and al myghte that is vnder the heauen: it shalbe gyuen to the holy people of the moost hyest, * whose kyngdome is euerlastynge: yea, Luke.i.c. ¶ The.viii.Chapter.

¶ A vysyon of a stryke betwene a Ramme and an hegoate The vnderstanding of the vysyō is of the battel betwene the kynge of Persia and the kynge of the Grecians. Of the shameles kynge Antichrist.

A IN the thyrde yeare of ỹ raygne of kyng Balthazar, there appeared a visiō vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the Dan.viii.a. *fyrst, I sawe in a vision (and when I sawit, I was at Susis in the chefe citie, whych Jer.xlix.f. Eze.xxvii.b lyeth in the lande of * Elam) and in the vysyon, me thought I was by the ryuer of Ulai.

Then I loked vp, & sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, whych had two hornes: and these two hornes were hye but one was hyer then another: and the hyest came vp behynde. I sawe that thys ramme pushed wyth hys hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north and against the southe: so that no beastes might stande before hym, nor defende them from hys power: but he dyd as hym lysted, & waxed great lye. I toke hede vnto thys, and then came there an hegoate from the west ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

B This goate had a marvelous wrethē horne betwyxte hys eyes, and came vnto the Ramme that had the two hornes (whō I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpon hym wyth hys myght. I sawe hym drawe nye, vnto the Rāme, beynge verye fearce vpon hym: yea, he gaue him such a stroke, that he brake his two hornes. Nether had the Rāme so much strength as to stande before hym: but he cast hym downe, trode hym vnder hys fete, and no man was able to delyuer the Ramme out of hys power.

The goate waxed exceadyng greate, & when he was at the strongeste, hys greate horne was broken also. * Then grew there other foure such lyke in the steade, towarde the foure wyndes of Dan.viii.a and.xi.a. t.Mach.i.a the heauen. Yea, oute of one of the leest of these hornes, there cam yet vp another, whych waxed maruelous great toward the south, toward the east, and towarde the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoost of heauen, wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, and trode them vndre fete.

¶ Yea, it grewe vp vnto the prince of the hoost from whom the daylye offryng was taken, and the place of the Sanctuarye casten downe. And a certayne season was gyuen vnto it, agaynste the dayly offryng (bicause of wickednes) that it myght cast downe the veritie to the grounde, & so to prospere in al thynges, that it went about.

Upon thys I harde one of the sayntes speakynge, whiche saynt sayde vnto one that asked thys question. Howe longe shall thys vysyon of the daylye sacrifyce and of the wastynge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuarye and the powre shall so be troden vnder fote? And he answered hym: Unto the euenynge and the mornynge, euen two thousande and thre hundreth dayes: than shal the Sanctuary be clēsed agayn

D Nowe when I Daniel had sene thys vision and sought for the vnderstanding of it: beholde there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I harde a mans voice in the ryuer of Ulay whych cryed, and sayde: O Gabriel, make thys man to vnderstande the vision. So he came and stode by me. But I was afrayed at hys commynge, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of mā E marcke well, for in the last tyme shall thys vysyon be fulfylled. Nowe as he was speakynge vnto me, I waxed faynt, so that I sanke downe to the grounde. But he toke hold vpon me, and set me vp agayne, sayenge: Beholde, I wyll shewe the, what shall happen in the last wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe fulfylled.

The Ramme whych thou saweste wyth the two hornes is the kynge of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is kynge of Greke lande: the greate horne that stode betwyxte hys eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it brake and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signyfyeth, that out of thys people shal stand vp * foure
t.Mach.i.a kyngdomes, but not so myghtye as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynes F is a growyng) there shal aryse a kynge of an vnshamefaste face, whyche shall be wyse in darcke speakynges.

He shalbe myghtye and stronge, but not in hys owne strength. He shal destroye aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prospere he shall slaye the stronge and holye people. And thorowe hys chaftynes, falshed shall prospere in hys hande, his herte shalbe proude, and many one shall he put to death in hys welthynesse. He shall stande vp agaynste the prynce of prynces,
6.mac.ix.c 9.Thes.i.b * but he shall be destroyed wythout hande. And thys vysion that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euenynge and the mornynge. * Therfore wryte thou vp thys syghte, for it wyll be longe Esa.viij or it come to passe.

Upon this was I Daniel very faynt, so that I laye sycke certayne dayes: but whē I rose vp I wente aboute the kynges busynesse, and marueled at ỹ vysyon, neuertheles, nomā knew of it

C Yea, O Lorde, vnto vs, to our kinges, & prin psal.cvi.a. ces, to our forfathers, euen to vs all, * that haue offended the, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde our God, pertayneth mercye and forgeuenesse. As for vs, we are gone backe frō hym, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord 5 Det.i.d. our God, to walke in hys lawes, * which he layd zacha.vii.b before vs by hys seruauntes the prophetes: yea, al Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe frō thy lawe, so that they haue not harkened vnto thy voyce.

Deu.xxbii. Wherfore, the curse and oth * that is wrytten and.xxbiii. in the lawe of Moses the seruaunte of God (a- Leu.xxbi. gaynst whom we haue offended) is powred vpō vs. * And he hath performed his wordes, which Baruc.ii.a he spake agaynst vs, and agaynst our iudges þ iudged vs: to bryng vpō vs such a great plage as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea, all thys plage, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not our prayer before the Lorde oure God, that we myghte turne agayne from our wickednes, & to be learned in thy veritie. Therfore hath the Lord made hast, to bryng thys plage vpon vs, for the Lorde oure God is ryghteous, in all hys workes which he doth: for why? we wolde not herken vnto hys voyce.

D * And nowe, O Lorde our God, that wyth Baruc.ii.b a myghty hande hast brought thy people out of xer.xii.xiii Egypte, to get thy selfe a name whyche remay- and.xiiii.b. neth this daye, we haue synned O Lorde, & done wyckedly agaynst all thy ryghteousnes: yet let thy wrathfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseche the) from thy citye of Jerusalem thy holy hyll. And why? for oure synnes sake, and for þ wyckednesse of oure forfatherr, is Jerusalem & thy people abhorred, of all them that are about vs: Nowe therfore, O oure God, heare þ prayer of thy seruaunte: and his intercession: O let thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth waste: for the Lordes sake.

O my God, enclyne thyne eare, and herken (at the lest for thine owne sake) open thyne eyes beholde howe we be desolate, yea, and the citye also, whyche is called after thy name: for we do not cast our prayers before þ in our owne ryghteousnesse: no, but only in thy great mercyes, O Lorde: heare: O forgyue Lorde, O Lorde consider, tary not ouer lōge: but for thyne owne sake do it. O my God: for thy citye, and thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakynge at my prayers, knowlegynge myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makynge so myne intercessiō before the Lorde my God, for the holy hylles sake of my God: yea: while I was yet speaking in my prayer: beholde, the man Gabriel, (* whō Dan.viii.c. and.viii.a. I had sene before in the vysyon) came flyenge to me, and touched me aboute the offrynge tyme in the euenynge. He informed me, and spake vnto me: O Daniell sayd he: I am now come to make the vnderstande it. For as soone as thou begannest to make thy prayer, it was so decyphred, and therfore am I come to shewe the. And why? Dan.x.d. * For thou arte a man greatly beloued. E

Wherfore, ponder the matter wel, that thou mayest learne, to vnderstande the vysyon. lxx. weakes are determined ouer the people and ouer the holy citye: that the wyckednesse maye be consumed, that þ synne maye haue an ende that the offence maye be reconciled, and to bringe in euerlastynge ryghteousnesse to fulfyll the visyons & the prophetes and annoynte the moost holy one Understande thys then, and marke it well: that from the tyme it shalbe concluded * to go and re- i.pa.xxbiii.b payre Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christ (or the a- i.Esdr.i.a. noynted) prynce: there shalbe seuen wekes: Thē shall the stretes and walles be buylded agayne lxii. weakes: but wyth harde troublous tyme. After these. lxii. wekes, shall Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in him. Thē shal there come a people wyth the prynce, & destroye the citye and the Sanctuary: and hys ende shall come as the water floude. But the desolacion shall continue tyll the ende of the battell.

He shall make a stronge bonde wyth many for the space of a weake: and when the weake is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and mat.xxiiii.b meatoffrynge. * And in the temple there shalbe Mar.xiii.a an abhominable desolaciō, tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this wastyng shal continue to the ende.

C The.x. Chapter.

C There appeareth vnto Daniell a man clothed in lynnen whyche sheweth hym wherfore he is sent.

IN the thyrde yeare of kynge Cyrus A of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniell (otherwyse called Balthazer) a matter, yea, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well and perceyued what þ vysyon was. At the same tyme: I Daniell moured for the space of thre weakes, so that I had no lust to eate breade: as for flesshe & wyne there came none wythin my mouthe: No, I dyd not once anoynte my selfe, tyl the whole thre wekes were out.

Upon the. xxiiii. daye of the fyrste moneth, I was by the greate floud, called * Tygris I lyft Dan.viii.b. vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde a man clo- Apoc.i.c. thed in lynen, whose loynes were gyrded vp wt fyne golde of Arabye: hys bodye was lyke the Chrysolyte stone, hys face (to loke vpon) was lyke lyghtenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre hys armes and fete were lyke fayre glysterynge metall, but the voyce of hys wordes was lyke

the voyce of a multitude.

B *Daniell alone sawe thys vysyon, ‡the men
Dan.iii.c ‡Act.ix.a that were with me, sawe it not: but a great fear fulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and hyd them selues. I was lefte there my selfe alone, and sawe thys greate vysyon, so longe tyl
there remayned nomoze strength wythin me.
Yea, I lost my coloure cleane I wasted awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet harde I ỹ voice of hys wozdes: and as soone as I harde it, faynt nesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whyche set me vp vpon my knees & vppon the palmes of my handes, sayenge vnto Dan.x.b. me: *O Daniell, thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wozdes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande ryghte vp, foz vnto the am I nowe sente.

And when he had sayd these wozdes, I stode vptremblyng. Then sayd he vnto me: feare not Daniel: foz whyle sence ỹ fyrst day that ỹ dydest set thyne harte to vnderstande, and dyddest chasten thy selfe befoze thy God: thy wozdes haue ben herde. And I had come vnto the, when thou begānest to speake, had not ỹ prince ouer ỹ king dome of the Perses wythstande me. xxi. dayes.
Josu.b.d: Dan.x.y.a But lo, *Michaell one of ỹ cheke prynces, came to helpe me, & I was left to cōtinue therwyth ỹ kynges of Persea, & am come to shewe the what shal happen vnto thy people in the later dayes.
Foz it wylbe lōge yet oz the vision be fulfylled.

D Nowe when he had spoken these wozdes vnto me, I caste downe my head to the groūde and held my tonge. Beholde, there touched my lyp-pes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayd vnto him, that stode befoze me, O my Lozde, my toyntes are loosed in ỹ vy-syon and there is nomoz strength wythin me.
Howe may my Lozdes seruaunt thē talke wyth my Lozde? seynge there is no strengthe in me, so that I can not take my breath? Upon this there Dan.x.d, touched me agayne, one much lyke a man *and comfozted me, sayenge: O thou man so well be-loued feare not: be content, take a good hart vnto the, and be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recouered, and sayd: Speake on my Lozde, foz thou haste refreshed me. Then sayde he: knowest thou wherfoze I am come vnto the?
nowe wyll I go to fyght wyth the kyng and the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go fozth, lo, the prince of Grekelande shall come. Neuerthelesse I wyll shewe the that thynge, that is faste noted in the scripture of truth. And as foz ponder matters, there is none that helped me in thē, but Michaell your prince.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

¶ A prophecye of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdom of Egypt, and of the bonde ther of, and of the battell wyth the kyngdome of Syria. Of the Jewes that flye vnto the kynge of Egypte, whome Antiochus the kynge of Syria persecuteth, whych figureth vnto vs Antichrist. The pryde of Antiochus.

¶ AND in the fyrste yere of Darius of Media
I stode by hym, to comfozte hym, and to strengthe hym, and nowe wyl I shewe the the truth. Beholde, there shal stande vp yet thze kynges in Persia, but the fourth shalbe farre ry cher then they all. And when he is in the chefeste power of hys ryches, he shall pzouoke euery mā agaynst the realme of Grekelande. *Then shal Dan.viii.c
there aryse yet a myghtye kynge, that shall rule wyth greate dominion, and do what hym lyste.
*And as soone as hys kyngdome cōmeth vp, it shal be destroyed, and deuyded toward the foure i.Mach.i.a wyndes of heauen. They that come after hym, shall not haue suche power and dominion as he:
but hys kyngdome shalbe scatered, yea, euen amonge other then those. And the kynge of the south shalbe myghtyer, then hys other pzynces.
And one shall be stronger then he, and shall rule hys dominion wyth great power.

And in the ende of yeares, they shalbe ioyned B together, and the kynges daughter of the south shall come to the kynge of ỹ Nozth, foz to make frendshyp, but he shal not obtayne the power of that arme, nether shall she be able to endure tho-rowe hys myght: but she, and such as broughte her (yea and he that begat her, and cōfozted her foz hys tyme) shall be delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her roote, there shall one stande vp in hys steade whych wyth power of armes shall go thozowe the kynges lande of the nozth, and handle hym accozdynge to hys strength. As foz theyr Idols and pzynces, wyth theyr costly Jewels of golde & syluer, he shall cary them awaye captiues into Egypte, and he shal raygne moze yeares then the kynge of the Nozth. And when he is come into the kynges realme of ỹ south, he shalbe fayne to turne agayn into his owne land Wherfoze his sōnes shalbe displeased, & shal gather together a myghty great hoost of people: & one of them shall come, & go thozowe lyke a water floude: then shall he returne, & go fozth wyth dekpeuge and boastynge vnto hys owne lande.

Then the kynge of the south shalbe angrye C and shall come fozth to fyght agaynst the kyng of the nozth: yea, he shal bzynge a greate multy-tude of people together, and a greate heape shall be geuen into hys hāde: these shall he cary away wyth great pzyde, foz so muche as he hath caste downe so many thousādes, neuertheless, he shal not pzeuayle. Foz the kyng of the nozth shal gather (of the newe) a greater heape of people then afoze, and come fozth (after a certayne tyme and yeares) wyth a myghtye hoost, and exceadynge greate good.

At the same tyme there shall many stande vp agaynste the kynge of the south, so that the wycked chyldzen of thy people also shall exalte them selues (to fulfyll the vysyon) and then fall.
So the kynge of ỹ nozth shal come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fensed cityes: And ỹ power of them of the southe shall not be able to a-byde hym, & the beste men of the people shall not be so stronge, as to resyst hym. Shozтly whē he cōmeth, he shall handle hym as he lyst, & no man shalbe so hardy as to stande agaynste hym. He shal stande in the pleasaunt countre, whych tho-rowe hym shalbe destroyed: he shal set hys face wyth all hys power to optayne hys kyngdome.
& to be lyke it. Yea, that shall he do, & gyue hym

vnto the doughters amonge wemen, to destroy hym. But he shall fayle, nether shall he optayne hys purpose. After thys shal he set hys face vnto the Iles & take many of them. A prynce shall stoppe hym, to do hym shame, besyde the confusion that els shall come vnto hym. Thus shall he turne agayne to hys owne lande, stomble and fall, and be nomore founde: so he that came vpō hym and dyd hym violence, shall stande in hys place, and haue a pleasaunt kingdome: and after fewe dayes he shalbe destroyed, and that nether in wrath, nor in battel. In hys steade there shall aryse a vyle persone, not holdē worthy of a kyngs dignitie: thys shall come in peaceably, and optayne the kyngdome wyth fayre wordes: he shall fyght agaynste the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yea, and agaynst the prynce of the couenaunt.

D So after that he hath taken truce wyth hym he shall handle dysceytfully: that he may get vp & ouercome hym wyth a small flocke: & so wyth craftynesse to get hym to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale otherwyse, then ether hys fathers or graūdfathers dyd. For he shal destroye the thynge, that they had robbed & spoyled, yea, & all theyr substaūce, ymagynyng thoughtes agaynst the strōge holdes, & that for a tyme. Hys power & harte shalbe stered vp wyth a great armye agaynste the kynge of the south where thorowe the kynge of the south shalbe moued then vnto battell, wyth a greate & myghtye hoost also. Neuertheles he shal not be able to stande, for they shall conspyre agaynst him. Yea, they that eate of his meate shal hurt him: so that his hoost shall fall, and many be slayne downe.

E These two kinges shalbe minded to do mischefe, and talke of dysceyte at one table: but they shall not prosper, for why? the ende shall not come yet: vnto the tyme appoynted. * then shal he go home agayne into hys owne lande wyth great good, and set hys harte agaynst the holye couenaunt, he shal busye agaynst it, and then returne home. At the time appointed he shal come agayne, & go towarde the south. So shal it happen otherwyse then at the fyrste, yet once againe And why? * the shippes with Italiās shal come vpon hym, that he maye be smytten and turne agayne: that he maye take indignacion agaynste the couenaunt of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. Yea, he shal turne him, and drawe such vnto him as leaue the holy couenaunt.

He shall set myghtye men to vnhalowe the F Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the dayly offryng, and to set vp the abhominable desolacion. And suche as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter wyth fayre wordes. But the people that wyl knowe theyr God, shal haue the ouerhande and prosper. Those also that haue vnderstandinge amonge the people shal enfourme the multitude: and for a longe season, they shalbe persecuted wyth swearde, wyth fyre, wyth captiuitie and wyth the takynge awaye of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be set vp wyth a lytle helpe: but manye shall cleaue vnto them faynedlye.

Yet some of those whiche haue vnderstāding shalbe persecuted also, that they maye be tryed purified and clensed, tyl the tīme be out: for ther is yet another tyme appointed. The kinge shal do what him lyst * he shall exalte and magnifie him selfe againste all that is God. Yea, he shall speake maruelous thinges agaynste the God of all goddes wherin he shall prospere, so longe tyl *the wrath be fulfylled, for the conclusion is decreed already. He shall not regarde the God of his fathers, but his lust shalbe vpon wemen. Yea, he shall not care for anye God, for he shall magnifye him selfe aboue all. In his place shal he worshipe the mighty stout God: and the God whom his fathers knewe not, shall he honoure with gold and syluer, with precious stones and pleasaunt Jewels. 11. Thes. ii. a

Thus shal he do, thorowe his stronge fensed places, settinge vp his straunge God whom he confesseth and encreasing his glorie. Such as wyl receaue him, & take him for God, he shal geue them great worship & power: yea & make them lordes of the multitude, and giue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme shal ỹ kinge of the south striue with him, and the kinge of ỹ north lyke maner shal come agaynst him with charettes, horsemen and with a great nauy of shyppes. He shal come into the landes, destroy & go thorow: he shal entre also into ỹ fayre pleasaūt lande: Many cities and countreis shal decaye * except Edom, Moab, & the best of ỹ chyldren of Ammon, which shal escape frō his hand. He shal stretch forth his handes vpon the countreys, & the lande of Egypt shal not escape him For thorow his goyng in, he shal haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, and ouer al the precious Jewels of Egypt, Libia, & Ethiopia: * Neuertheles, the tidinges out of the East & the north shal trouble him, for the which cause he shal go forth to destroy and roote out a great multitude. The tētes of his palace shalbe pitched betwext the two sees, vpō the hil of the noble Sanctuary, for he shal come to his death * and then shal no man helpe him. Apoc. b. a. He prophecyeth the resurrection of the deade. The darkenesse of the prophecye of Daniell.

THe tyme wyl come also, that the great prince * Michael, whyche stādeth on thy peoples syde, shal aryse vp, for * there shal come a tyme of trouble, suche as neuer was, sence there began to be any people vnto that same tyme. Then shal thy people be deliuered, yea, al those that be founde wryten in the boke. * Many of them that slepe in the dust of the earth shal awake some to the euerlasting lyfe, some to perpetual shame and reproue * the wyse (such as haue taught other) shal glyster, as the shynyng of heauen: & those that haue instruct the multitude vnto godlynesse, shalbe as the starres, worlde wythout ende. Exo.xliiii.d lotte to thy wyfe, and gette chyldren by her, for the land hath cõmitted great whordom against the Lorde. So he went & toke Gomer, the dough xvii.xviii.b bringe the kyngdome of the house of Israell to xiii.re.xvi.b an ende. Then wyll I breake the bow of Israell in the valley of Jezrael.

She conceyued yet agayn, and bare a dough C

hamah (that is, not obtayning mercye:) ✻ for I iii.re.xiv.b. wyll haue no pitye vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put them cleane out of remem-

C The.ii. Chapter.

C The people is called to repentaunce.

TEl your brethrẽ, that they are my peo A ple: and your systers, that they haue obtained mercy. As for your mother ye shall chyde with her, and reproue her, ✻ for she is not my wyfe, neither Iere.iii.a.
am I her husband: onles she put away her whor dome out of my syght, & her aduoutry from her brestes. Yf no, I shall strip her naked, and set her ✻ euen as she came into the worlde: yea, I shall Ezec.xvi.a laye her waste, and make her lyke a wyldernes, and slaye her for thyrst. I shall haue no pytie also vpon her chyldren: ✻ for they be the chyldren Joh.viii.d of fornicacyon.

Their mother hath broken her wedlock, and B she that bare them ✻ is come to confusyon. For iiii.re.xvi.b she sayde: I wyll go after my louers that gyue me my water and my bread, my woll and flaxe, myne oyle and my drynke. But I wyl hedge her waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynd her fote steppes, and though she runne after her louers, yet shal she not gette them: she shal seke them, but not fynde them. ✻ Then shal Deut.xvi.e.
she saye: wel, I wyl go turne agayne to my fyrst husbande: for at that tyme was I better at ease then now. But this wold she not knowe where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, syluer, and golde, ✻ whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal.

Wherfore nowe wyll I take my corne and Eze.xvi.b.
wyne agayne in their season, and fet agayn my C wol and my flaxe which I gaue her to couer her delyuer her out of myne handes. Moreouer, I wyll take awaye all her myrth ✻ her holy dayes Deu.xvi.e.

The sunne shalbe turned into darkenesse, and the moone into bloude before the great and notable daye of ỹ Lorde come. And the tyme shall come, that *whosoeuer calleth on the name of the Lorde, shall be saued. For vpon the mounte Syon, and at Ierusalem, there shall be a saluacyon, lyke as the Lorde hath promysed: yea, and amonge ỹ other remnaunt, whome the Lorde shall call.

Roma. x.b.

The. iii. Chapter.

Of the iudgement of God agaynst the enemyes of hys people.

For take hede: in those dayes and at the same tyme, when I turne agayn the captiuytye of Juda and Ierusalem: I shall gather all people together, and bryng them in the valley of Iosaphat: and there wyl I reason with them because of my people & heritage of Israel, whō they haue scatred about in the nacions, & parted my lande: yea, they haue cast lottes for my people, the younge men haue they set in the brodell house, and solde the damsels for wyne, that they myght haue to drynke. *Thou Tyrus and Sydon, and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do with me? Wyll ye defye me? well yf ye wyll nedes defye me, I wyll recompence you euen vpon your heade, and that ryght worthely: for ye haue taken awaye my syluer and golde, my fayre and goodlye iewels, & brought them into your goddes houses. The chyldren also of Juda and Ierusalem haue I solde vnto the Grekes, that ye myght bryng them farre from the borders of theyr owne countrys.

Ezec. xxvi.a xxvii xxviii Amos. i.b.

Beholde therfore, I wyll rayse them oute of the place where ye haue solde them, *and wyl reward you euen vpon your heade. Your sonnes and your doughters wyll I sel thorowe the handes of the chyldren of Juda, and so they shal geue them forth to sell vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre countrye, for the Lorde hym selfe hath sayde it. Crye out these thynges amonge ỹ Gentyles, proclayme warre, wake vp the gyauntes let them drawe nye, let them come vp all the lusty warryours of them. *Make you swerdes of your plowshares, and speares of youre sykeles and sythes: Let the weake man say: I am stroge

Esay. ii.a.

Mustre you and come, all ye Heathen rounde about gather you together: there shall the Lorde laye all thy gyauntes to the grounde. Lette the people aryse, and get them to the valley of Iosaphat, for there wyll I syt, and iudge all Heathen rounde about. *Laye to your sythes, for ỹ harueste is rype: come get you downe: the wynepresse is full: yea, the wynepresses runne ouer, for theyr wyckednesse is waxen great.

Apoc. xiiii.b

In the valley appoynted there shalbe many people: for the daye of the Lorde is nye, in the valley appoynted. *The sunne and moone shal be darkned, and the stars shall withdraw theyr lyght. *The Lorde shall rore out of Syon, and crye out of Ierusalem, that the heauens and the earth shall quake withal. But the Lorde shalbe a defence vnto hys owne people, & a refuge for ỹ chyldren of Israel. Thus shall ye knowe that I the Lorde your God dwel vpon my holy mount of Syon. Then shall Ierusalem be holy, & there shall no straungers go thorowe her any more.

Joel. ii.d. Esa. xliii.b Jer. xxv.b,

*Then shall the mountaynes droppe swete wyne, and the hyles shal flowe with mylke. All the ryuers of Juda shall haue water ynoughe, and oute of the Lordes house there shall flowe a spryng, to water the brooke of *Sitim: but Egypt shalbe layde waste: ‡and Edom shalbe desolate: bycause they haue dealte so cruelly wyth the chyldren of Juda, and shed innocente bloude in theyr lande. Agayne, Juda shalbe inhabyted for euermore, and Ierusalem from generacyon to generacyon: for I wyl not leaue theyr bloude vnauenged. And the Lorde shall dwell in Syon.

A The woꝛde of the *Loꝛde came vnto *Jonas the ſonne of Amithay: ſayeng: ‡Aryſe, and get the to Ninyue that *great citye: and pꝛeach vnto them, how that ‡theyꝛ wyckednes is com vp befoꝛ me. And Jonas made him redy to flye vnto Tharſis from ỹ pꝛeſence of the loꝛd and gat him downe to Joppa: where he found a ſhyp ready foꝛ to go vnto Tharſis, ſo he payde his fare, and wente aboꝛde: that he myght go wt them vnto Tharſis, from the pꝛeſence of ỹ Loꝛd But the Loꝛde hurled a great wynd into the ſee and there was a myghtye tempeſt in the ſee, ſo ỹ the ſhyp was in ieopardye of goynge in peces. Then ỹ mariners were afrayde, and cryde euerye man vnto hys God: and the gods that were in the ſhyppe they caſte into the ſee, to lyghten it of them. But Jonas gatte hym vnder the hatches, where he layde hym downe and ſlombꝛed.

B So the maiſter of the ſhyppe came to hym and ſayde vnto hym: why ſlombꝛeſt thou? Up, cal vpon thy God: If God (happly) wyl thinke vpon vs, that we peryſche not. And they ſayde one to another: come lette vs caſte lottes: that we maye knowe, foꝛ whoſe cauſe we are thus troubled. *And ſo they caſt lottes, & the lot fell vpõ Jonas. Then ſayde they vnto hym: tell vs foꝛ whoſe cauſe are we thus troubled? what is thine occupacion? whence commeſt thou? *(and whither goeſt thou)? what cuntre man art thou? and of what nacion? He anſwered them: I am an Ebꝛue, and I feare the Loꝛde GOD of Heauen, which made both the ſee and ỹ dꝛy lande. Then were the men exceadyngly afrayde, and ſayde vnto hym: why dydeſt ſo? C

D Neuertheleſſe, the men aſſayed wyth rowyng to bꝛynge the ſhyppe to lande: but it wolde not be, becauſe the ſee wꝛoughte ſo: and was ſo troublous agaynſte them. Jonas is ſwalowed of a whale. The pꝛayer of Jonas.

A BUt the Lorde prepared a great fysh: to swalow vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fish thre dayes & thre nyghtes: And Jonas prayed vnto ỹ Lord his God, out of ỹ fisches Psal.cxx.c belly, & sayd: * In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herde me: out of the belly of hell, I cryed, & thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest Psal.xlii.d cast me downe depe in the myddest of ỹ see, & the floudes cõpassed me aboute: yee, all * thy waues & roules of water went ouer me, I thought that I had ben cast away out of thy sight: But I wil yet agayne loke towarde thy holy temple.

B The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe laye aboute me, & the webes were wrapte about myne head. I went downe to the botome of ỹ hylles, & was barred in with earth for euer. But ỹ, O Lorde my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayn out of corrupcyon. When my soule fainted within me, I thought vpon the Lorde: and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in C to thy holy temple. They that hold of vayne vanytyes, wyll forsake his mercy. But I wyll do the sacrifyce with the voyce of thankesgyuyng, and wyll pay that that I haue vowed, for why? saluacyon cõmeth of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fysshe, and it caste out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

C The.iii. Chapter.

C Jonas is sent agayne to Ninyue. The repentaunce of the kynge of Ninyue.

A Jonas.i.a. THen came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: * vp & get the to Niniue that greate Cytye, and preache vnto them the preachynge, whiche I bad the. So Jonas arose & went to Niniue at the Lordes cõmaundement. Niniue was a great cytye vnto God, namely of B thre dayes iourney. And Jonas went to, and entred into the cytye: euen a dayes iourney, & cryed sayinge: There are yet forty dayes, and then Ec.xxxbii.a shall Niniue be ouerthrowen. * And the people of Niniue beleued God, & proclaymed fastynge, & arayed them selues in sacke cloth, as well the great as ỹ small of them. And the tidinges came vnto the kyng of Niniue, whiche rose out of his seate, and dyd his apparell of, and put on sacke cloth, and sat hym downe in asshes.

haue not Goddes word. * As for me I am ful of strength, & of the spyrete of the Lorde, ful of Judgemente & boldnes: to shewe the house of Jacob theyre wickednes, & the house of Israel their syn.

O heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob, and ye iudges of the house of Israell, ye that abhorre the thynge that is lauful, and wrest alyde the thyng that is streyghte. * Ye that buylde vp

The.v. Chapter:

The vysyon of the flyinge booke, spyenge the curse of theues and such as abuse the name of God by the vysyon of the measure is spyenge the bryngynge of Juda to Babylon.

A SO I tourned me, lyftynge vp myne eyes and loked, and beholde, a flyinge booke. And he sayde vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I se a flyinge booke of twentye cubytes longe, and ten cubytes brode. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the curse that goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for
B all theues shalbe iudged after this booke, and all swearers shall be iudged accordynge to the same, and I wyl bring it forth (sayth the Lorde of hoostes:) so that it shall come to the house of the theke, and to the house of hym that falsely sweareth by my name: and shall remayne in his house, and consume it, with the tymbre and stones thereof. Then the Aungell that talked with me went forth, and sayd vnto me: lyft vp thyne eyes, and se what is this that goeth forth?
C And I sayde: what is it? He answered: this is a measure goinge out. He sayde moreouer: Euen thus are they (that dwell vpon the whole earthe) to loke vpon: And beholde, there was lyft vp a talent of leade: and lo, a woman sat in the middest of the measure. And he sayde: this is vngodlynesse. So he cast her into the myddest of the measure, and threw the lompe of leade into ỹ mouth of the measure.

D Then lyft I vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, there came out two women, and ỹ winde was in theyr winges (for they had wynges like the wynges of a storke) and they lift vp the measure betwyxte the earth and the heauen. Then spake I to the aungell that talked with me: whither wyll these beare the measure? And he sayde

The.vi. Chapter.

By the foure charettes he declareth the prosperytye of foure kyngdomes.

A AGayne I turned me, lyftyng vp myne eyes, and loked, and beholde, there came foure charettes, oute from betwyxte two hylles, whiche hylles were of brasse. In the fyrste charet were * redde horses, in the seconde charet zachar.i.b apo.vi.a were blacke horses, in the thyrde charette were whyte horses, in the fourth charet were horses of dyuers colours, and stronge.

Then spake I, and sayde vnto the Aungell B that talked with me: O lorde, what are these? The Aungell aunswered, and sayde vnto me: * These are the.iiii. wyndes of ỹ heauẽ, whych be come forth to stande before the ruler of all the Jer.xliii.d. earth. That wyth the blacke horse went into ỹ lande of the north, and the whyte folowed them, and the spekled horses wente forth towarde the south. These horses were very stronge, & went out, and sought to go and take theyr iourneye ouer the whole earth. And he sayd: get you hẽce and go thorowe the worlde. So they went thorowe out the worlde. Then cryed he vpon me, & spake vnto me, sayeng: beholde, these that go towarde the northe, shall stylle my wrathe in the northe countre.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me C sayenge: Take of the prysoners that are come from Babylon: namely, Heldai, Tobiath, & Idaia: and come thou the same daye, and go vnto the house of Josiah, the sõne of Sophony. Thẽ take gold and syluer, and make crownes therof and set vpon the heade of Jesua, the sonne of Josedech, the hye preast, & speake vnto him. And thys shal come to passe, yf ye wyl herken diligẽtlye vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God.

The.vii. Chapter.

The estimacyon of fastynge wythout mercye, the despysynge of charitye, and the obstinacy of the people.

IT happened also in the fourth yeare A of kynge Darius, that the worde of the Lorde came vnto zacharye in the fourth daye of the vynth moneth, whych is called, Casleu: what tyme as Sarasar and Rogomelech and the men that were wyth them sent vnto Bethel for to prayse before the Lorde, and that they shulde saye vnto the preastes, whyche were in the house of the Lorde of hoostes, and to the prophetes. Shuld I wepe in the * fyfth moneth, and abstayne as iiii.re.xxb.b I haue done nowe certayne yeares? welthy, she and the cyties roũde about her: Whẽ there dwelt men, both towarde the south and in the playne countrees.

¶ And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Zacharye, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: *Execuce true iudgement: shew mercy and louynge kyndenesse: euery man to his brother. Do the wyddowe, the fatherlesse, the straunger and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagyne euyll agaynst his brother in his herte. *Neuertheless, they wolde not take hede, but tourned theyr backes, and stopped theyr eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea, they made theyr hertes as an adamant stone, lest they shoulde heare the lawe and wordes *which the Lorde of hoostes sent in hys holye spyrite by the Prophetes afore tyme.

¶ Josyas holdeth Passeouer. After hys death is Jechonias hys sonne made kynge in hys steade: whome the kynge of Egypte putteth out, and setteth in hys brother Joachym. Jerusalem is destroyed: and Sedechias is taken.

A ii.pa.xxb.a xiv.regum. xxiii.e

AND * Josias helde ỹ feast of Easter in Jerusalem vnto ỹ Lorde & slewe the Passeouer the .xiiii. day of ỹ fyrste moneth. He set ỹ preastes also in order (accordig to theyr dayly courses) beinge arayed in longe garmentes in the temple of the Lorde. And he spake vnto ỹ Leuites the holy ministres of Israel, ỹ they shulde halowe them selues vnto ỹ Lorde, to set the holy Arke of the Lord, in the house ỹ kynge Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded, and sayde: Ye shall nomore beare the Arke vpon youre shulders. Nowe serue your Lord & take ỹ charge of his people of Israel, after your vyllages and your trybes: accordynge as kynge Dauid the kynge of Israel, hath ordeyned, and accordynge as Salomon hys sonne hath honorably prepared: yee: loke ỹ ye all do seruyce in ỹ temple accordynge to theyr ordrynge & dystrybucyon of the pryncypall men whych are appointed out of the trybes, to do seruyce for the chyldren of Israel. * Kyll the Passeouer, ād prepare offringes for youre brethren, and do accordyng to the commaundemente of the Lorde, whyche was geuen vnto Moses. And vnto the people ỹ was founde, Josias gaue. xxx. thousāde of shepe lambes, kyddes, and goates, and thre thousand oxen. These the kynge (of hys kynglye lyberalyte) gaue vnto the people, accordyng as he had promysed: & to the preastes for the Passeouer, he gaue two thousande shepe, and an hundred oxē Moreouer Jechonias, and Semeias, and Nathanaell, hys brethren, and Hasabias, Jehiel, & Josabab gaue them to the passeouer, fyue thousande shepe, and fyue hundred bullockes.

B And when these thynges were brought to passe, the preastes and the Leuytes stode goodly in theyr order, & had the vnleuened bread thorowe out the trybes. And after ỹ ordrynge of ỹ pryncypall men in the trybes, they offered vnto the Lorde in the syghte of the people accordinge * as it is wrytten in the booke of Moses, & soo they rosted the Easter lambe as accordyng was. As for the thanckeofferynges & the other, they dight in the kettelles & pottes, & set them before ỹ people wyth good wyll, & afterwarde before them selues & the preastes. For the preastes offerede the fat vntyll the tyme was expyred, but ỹ Leuites prepared for them selues & for theyr brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The holy syngers also, the chyldren of Asaph stode in theyr order, accordynge as Dauid deuysed. So dyd Asaph, zachary, & Iduthum, which were appointed by the kynge. Moreouer the porters & dore kepers stode by the doores and that dyligently, so that none went out of hys standynge ād seruyce: for theyr brethrē (the Leuites) prepared for them.

Thus were all thynges performed, that belonged to the offerynge of the Lorde. In that daye they helde the Passeouer and offered thanckeofferynges beside the sacrifyce of the Lord accordynge to the commaundement of kyng Josias.

So the chyldren of Israel which were thē present helde an honourable Passeouer, and the feaste of swete breade seuen dayes longe. Yee suche a Passeouer was not kept in Israell from the tyme of the prophete Samuel. And all the kynges of Israel, helde not suche an Easter as thys whyche kynge Josias held, and the prestes the Leuytes, the Jewes, and all Israell, of all them that were at Jerusalem. And in the eyght tene yeare of the raygne of Josias was this Passeouer kepte. And ẅ a perfecte herte dyd kynge Josias order all hys worckes, before the Lorde and the thynges that were wrytten of hym in tymes paste, concernynge those that sinned and were vngodly agaynst the Lorde before al people: & that soughte not ỹ worde of ỹ Lorde vpon Israel. * After all these actes of kynge Josias, Pharao ỹ kinge of Egipt went vp & came towarde Carmis by Euphrates, & Josias wente to mete hym. Then sent ỹ kyng of Egipte to Josias, saying: what haue I to do with the, O king of Juda? I am not sent of ỹ Lord to fyght agaynste the, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, go ỹ thy way home agayne in al ỹ hast. And Josias wolde not turne againe vpon his charet, but vndertoke to fighte agaynst hī, & herkened not vnto ỹ worde of the prophet, which he told hym out of the mouth of God, but pytched battayle agaynst hym in the felde of Mageddo. And the prynces preased to kynge Josias. Then sayde ỹ kynge vnto his seruauntes. Cary me away out of the battayle, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke hym away out of the fronte of the battayle. Then sat he vp vpon the seconde charet, came to Jerusalem, dyed, ād was buryed in his fathers sepulchre. And in all Jury they mourned for Josias, yee, ỹ rulers also ẅ their wyues made lamentacyō for hym vnto this day, And this was done euer styl in Israel.

These thynges are wrytten in the booke of the stories of the kinges of Juda, namely all the actes & worckes of kynge Josias, hys kynglye power & maiesty, hys vnderstandyng in ỹ lawe of God, & what he dyd, yee, thynges whiche are not wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Juda, * And the people toke Jechonias the sonne of Josias, & made hym kynge in steade of Josias his father, when he was .xxxiii. yere olde And he raygned ouer Israel. iii. monethes. And ỹ kynge of Egypte put hym downe, ỹ he shulde not raygne in Jerusalem, & raysed vp a taxe of the people: namely, an hundred talentes of syluer, and one talent of golde. The kynge of Egypte also made Joachim hys brother kynge of Juda, and Jerusalem. As for them of the kynges councell wyth the kynge hym selfe, and zaraceles hys brother, he toke them and caryed them awaye presoners into Egypte.

Fyue and twentye yere olde was Joachim when he was made kynge in the lande of Juda and Jerusalem, & he dyd euel before the Lord iiij. regum xxiiij.a After this * Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon came vp, & bound hym wyth bandes of yron & caried hym vnto Babilon. Nabuchodonosor also toke al the vessels ẏ were halowed in the temple of the Lorde, & all the iewels, & caryed them vnto Babilō, & brought them into his owne temple at Babilō. Of his vnclennes & vngodlines, it is wyttten in the boke of the actes of the kynges. And Joachim his sōne raygned in his stead ℱ He was made kynge beynge. xviii. yeare olde, & raygned but. iii. monethes & x. dayes in Jerusalē, & dyd euel before ẏ Lorde. So after a yeare Nabuchodonosor sēt & caused him to be brought vnto Babilon wt ẏ holy vessels of ẏ Lord & made Sedechias his brother kig of Juda & Jerusalē, whē he was. xxi. yere olde: & he raygned. xi. yere

And he dyd euel also in the sighte of the Lord and cared not for the wordes that were spoken
Jer. xxxvi.a vnto hym * by the prophete Jeremy at ẏ mouth of the Lorde. And where he had made an oth vnto king Nabuchodonosor, he forswore him selfe & fell from hym haupnge a stykynecke & a herte, & transgressed all the statutes & ordynaunces of ẏ Lorde God of Israel. The rulers also and the heades of the people of the Lorde did much euel & became vngodlye, more then the Heathen beynge defyled in all maner of abhompnacyons: Yee, & defyled the holy temple of the Lorde at Jerusalem. And the God of theyr fathers sent hys messaungers vnto them, to turne them backe: & to cal thē agayne from theyr synnes: for he wolde fayne haue spared them for hys holy taberna
G cles sake. Neuertheles, they had hys messaungers in derysyon: & loke what God spake vnto them by hys prophetes, they made but a sporte of it. Thys drewe on so longe tyl the Lord was wroth with hys people for theyr vngodlynes, & tyl he caused the kynges of the Chaldes to come vp, which slewe their yōge men wt the swearde, yee, euen in ẏ compasse of theyr holy temple, ād spared no body, nether yōg nor olde, nether mayden nor pong mā, but they were al deliuered into the powre of the kinges of the Chaldees, & al ẏ holy vessels of the Lord & the kinges treasures
Jeremye. xxxix.b and.lii.b toke they & caried them vnto Babilō. * As for ẏ house of the Lorde, they went vp into it, & brent it, & brake downe ẏ walles of Jerusalē, set fyre vpō her towers, destroied al her noble buildīgs & brought thē to naught, & ẏ people ẏ were slayne wt the swearde, they caryed vnto Babylon.

Thus became they presoners and bondmē of the kyng of Babylō, tyll they were deliuered
Jere. xxv.c and. xxix.c. & raygned for themselues, * whē the wordes of ẏ Lord were fulfylled, whych he promisyed thē by the mouth of ẏ prophet Jeremy, & till the lande had her reste: namely all the tyme that it laye waste, had it reste and quyetnes. lxxvii. yeares.

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

¶ Cirus geueth licence to the Jewes to returne to Jerusalem, and restoreth them the vessels of the temple. After that are there letters sent to Artharerses: whych accuse the Jewes for buyldyng of the cytie: and so is the buyldynge dryuen of vntyl ẏ seconde yeare of Darius.

ALowe * when kyng Cyrus raygned ouer the Persians, & whē the Lorde wolde perfourme the worde that he had promysed by the mouthe of the prophet Jeremy: ẏ Lorde raysed vp the spirite of Cirus, ẏ kynge of the Persiās: so ẏ he caused this writīg to be proclaymed thorow oute hys whole realme, saying: Thus sayeth ẏ kyng of Persiās: The Lorde of Israel that hye Lorde hath made me kyng of ẏ lande, & commaunded me to builde hym an house at Jerusalē in Jewry. Yf there be any nowe of youre people, ẏ Lorde be wyth him, and go vp wyth hym to Jerusalem. And all they that dwel rounde abonte that place shal helpe them, whether it be wt gold wyth syluer, wyth gyftes, wyth horses and necessary catel, & al other thinges ẏ are brought wt a frewyl to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem. A ii. Paralyp xxxvi.d

Then the pryncypall men out of the tribes B & vyllages of Juda, and Ben Jamin stode vp: so dyd the preastes also & the Leuites (whome ẏ Lord had moued) to go vp, & to buyld ẏ house of of the Lorde at Jerusalem. And they that were aboute them helped them with al maner of golde, & syluer, and catel also, & with many lyberal gyftes, and thys dyd manye one, whose mynde was stered vp therto. * Kynge Cyrus also brought forth the vessels, & ornamentes, that were halowed vnto the Lorde (which Nabuchodonosor ẏ kyng of Babylon had caried awaye from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to hys Idoll, and ymage (& delyuered them to Mythridatus, hys treasurer, and by hym they were delyuered to Salamanasar ẏ debite in Jewry. And thys was ẏ nombre of thē. ii. M. & iiii. C. siluer boules. xxx. siluer basens. xxx. basens of gold. ii. M. & iiii. C. vessels of syluer, & a. M. besyde. Al the vessels of gold & syluer were. v. M. viii. C. and lx. These were nombred vnto Salamanasar, and to them ẏ were come agayne wt hym to Jerusalē out of ẏ captiuite of Babilō. * Nowe in ẏ time of kig Artharerses ẏ kyng of Persia, these mē: Balemus & Mythridatus, Sabellius, Rathimus Balthemus, Semelius ẏ scribe, & other ẏ dwelte in Samaria & in other places vnder ẏ dominiō therof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artharerses, wherin they cōplayned vnto ẏ kinge of them in Jewry & Jerusalem. The letter was made after thys maner. Syr thy seruauntes C Rathimus, ẏ storye wryter, Sabellius the scrybe, & other iudges of the courte in Celosiria, and Phenices. Be it knowen & manifest to our lorde the king, ẏ the Jewes whych are come vp from you vnto vs into the rebellyous & wycked citie begynne to buylde it agayne, and the walles about it, and to set vp the temple a newe. Nowe yf this citie & the walls therof be set vp agayne they shall not onely refuse to geue trybutes and taxes but also rebell vtterly agaynste the kyng And for somoche as they take thys in hande nowe aboute the temple, we thought it reason, to thyncke no scorne of it but to shewe it vnto our Lorde the kynge, and to certyfye hym thereof: to the intente that yf yt please the kynge, he maye cause it to be soughte in the Bookes of olde of olde: & thou shalte fynde such warnynge wryten, & shalte vnderstãde ỳ this cytie hath alwaybene rebellyous and dysobedyente, that it hath subdued kynges & cyties, & that ỳ Jewes which dwell therin, haue bene a rebellious, obstynate vnfaythful, & fyghtinge people, for the whyche cause this citie is wasted. Wherfore nowe we certyfye oure lorde the kynge, that yf thys citie be buylded and occupyed agayne, and the walles thereof set vp a newe, thou canst haue no passage into Celosizia and Phenices.

Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus, the D stozy wryter, to Balthemus, to Sabellius, the scrybe, & to the other offycers & dwellers in Siria, and Phenices, after thys maner: I haue red the eppstle whych thou sentest vnto me, & haue commaunded to make dylygent searche, & haue found, ỳ the citie hath euer resisted kynges, that the same people are dysobedyente, and haue caused muche warre, & that myghtye kynges haue raygned in Jerusalem, whych also haue raysed vp taxes of Siria, and Phenices. Wherefore I haue commaunded those people, ỳ they shal not buylde the cytie, ỳ they make nomore in it, and that they procead no forther wyth the buylding for so muche as it myghte be the cause of warre and dysplesure vnto kynges.

Nowe when Rathymus & Sabellius the scrybe & the rulers in the lande had red the wrytynge of kynge Arthaxerses, they gat them togeather, and came in all the haste to Jerusalem wyth an hoofte of horsemen, and wyth muche people of foote, and forbade them to buylde. And so they lefte of from buyldynge of the temple, vnto the seconde yeare of kynge Darius.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

¶ Darius maketh a feast. The thre sentences of the three ponge men, of the whych the tryst is declared.

A Kynge Darius made a great feast vnto hys seruauntes, vnto all hys courte, & to all the offycers of Medea and Persia, yee, to all the debytes and rulers ỳ were vnder hym, from India vnto Ethopia, an hundred & .xxvii. coũtrees. So whẽ they had eaten & dronken being satisfyed, and were gone home againe. Darius ỳ king went into hys chãbre, layde hym downe to slepe, and so awaked.

B Then ỳ thre ponge men, ỳ kepte the kĩges person, & watched hys body, commoned amonge thẽ selues, & spake one to another: let euery one of vs say some thige & loke whose sentence is wyser & more excellent then the other, vnto him shal kyng Darius geue great gyftes, & cloth hĩ wt purple. He shal geue him vessels of gold, & to drik ĩ, clothes of gold & couerĩges: he shal make him a costly charet & bridle of gold, he shal geue him a bonet of whyte sylke, & a chayne of gold about his necke: yee, he shalbe ỳ seconde & prynce pal nexte vnto kynge Darius, & that because of his wisdome, & shalbe called the kinges kinsmã

¶ So euery one wrote his meanyng, sealed it and layde it vnder the kynges pelowe, & sayde: when the kynge aryseth, we will geue hym our wrytynges, and loke whose worde the kynge & hys chefe Lordes iudge to be the mooste wyselp spoken, the same shall haue the victorye. One wrote: Wyne is a stronge thynge. The seconde wrote: The kynge is strõger. The thyrde wrot Women haue yet more strength, but aboue all thynges ỳ truthe beareth awaye the victorye. Nowe woen the kynge was rysen vp, they toke theyr writyngesand delyuered thẽ vnto hym, & so he red thẽ. Then sent he forth to call al hys chefe lordes & all the debytes & rulers of ỳ coũtrees of Media & Persia. And whẽ they were set downe in the counsayle, the wrytynges was red before them. And he commaunded to call for the ponge men ỳ they myght declare theyr meaninges thẽ selues by mouth. So when they were sent for, & came in, the kynge sayde vnto them: shewe vs & make vs vnderstande what the thynges are ỳ ye haue written. Then began the first (which had spoken of the strength of wyne) & sayde: O D ye men * wine is meruelous stronge, & ouercom meth them ỳ dryncke it: it deceaueth the mynde Pro. xxxi.
& bryngeth bothe the poore man & the kynge to dotage & vanite. Thus doth it also wt the bondman & with the fre, wyth the pore & ryche: it taketh away theyr vnderstãdyng, & maketh them careleſſe ãd mery, so that none of them remembreth any heuynesse, or det, or dutye. It causeth a mã to thynke also ỳ the thyng that he doth is honest & good: and remembreth not that he is a kynge, nor that he is in auctoryte, and that he ought not to do such thynges. Moreouer whẽ men are drynckynge, they forget all frendeshyp all brotherly faythfulnes & loue, but as sone as they are dronkẽ, they drawe out ỳ swerd & wyll fyghte: & when they are layde downe from the wyne, & so risen vp agayne, they cã not tel what they dyd: iudge ye nowe is not wyne ỳ strõgest? For who wolde els take in hãde to do such thinges? And whẽ he had spokẽ this: he held his tõg

¶ The declaracyon of the two laste sentences of the ponge men: propounded in the Chapter before: of whyche the last is, that verye bereth ỳ victorye in all thynges & is mooste commended and alowed. Darius wryteth letters to al the rulers vnder hym, that they shulde ayde Zorobabell, to the buyldynge of Jerusalem.

A Then the seconde (whych had sayde: ỳ the kynge was stronger) began to speake, sayinge: O ye men, are not they the strongest & most excellent, ỳ conquere the land and the see, and all that is in the see & in the earth? Now is the king lorde of all these thynges and hathe domynyon of them all and loke what he commaũdeth, it is done. Yf he sẽde his mẽ forth a warfare, they go and breake downe hylles, walles, and towers. They are slayne, and (slaye other men) them selues, and ouer passe not ỳ kynges worde. Yf they get ỳ victory, they bryng the kyng al ỳ spoyle. Likewise the other ỳ medle not wyth warres & fyghtyng, but tyll the grounde: whẽ they reape they bring trybute vnto ỳ king. And yf ỳ kinge alone do but commaund to kil, they kil: Yf he cõmaunde to forgeue, they forgeue: Yf he cõmaũde to smite, they smyte: Yf he byd dryue awaye, they dryue away: yf he cõmaund to buyld, they buylde: Yf he commaũde to breake downe, they breke downe: yf he cõmaund to plant they plãt.

D These folowynge are they, that wente vp from Chelmel at Thelarſa (whoſe prīces were Carmelam and Careth) and myghte not ſhewe forth theyr cytyes & kynredes, howe they were of Iſrael: the ſōnes of Dalarus, ẏ ſonnes of Ruben, the ſonnes of Nechodaicus. Of the preaſtes that executed ẏ offyce of the preaſthode, & were not founde: The ſonnes of Obia, the ſonnes of Achiſos, the ſōnes of Addin, whych maryed one of the daughters of Pharlegē, and were named after hym. The wrytynge of the ſame kynred was ſought in the regeſter of theyr generacyon but it was not founde: and therefore were they forbydden to execute the offyce of the preaſthod Unto them ſayd Nehemias, and Attharas that they ſhulde haue no porcyon in the Sanctuary, tyll there roſe vp an hye preaſte, that were well inſtructe in the plaine clearenesſe and truth. And ſo dwelte the preaſtes and the Leuytes & the people that wente oute to Ieruſalem, and in the countrye there aboute, the ſyngers alſo & ẏ porters, euery one of Iſrael in hys owne lāde.

i. Eſd. iii. a * So when the ſeuenth moneth came: and when the chyldren of Iſrael were euery man at hys buſyneſſe, they came all wyth one aſſente into the courte whyche was before the Eaſtdore. And there ſtode Ieſua ẏ ſonne of Joſedec, & hys brethren the preaſtes, and zorobabell, the ſonne of Salathyel, and hys brethren, ſettynge vp an aulter, to offre burnteſacrifices vpon it, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moſes.

There came people alſo of other coūtries ād the Heathen out of all landes, to ſet vp ẏ aulter in his place, and offred ſacrifices and burnteofferynges vnto the Lorde in the mornynge. And ſo they helde the feaſte of tabernacles, * as it is Le. xxiii. f. Nu. xxix. b commaunded in the lawe. And daily offred they ii. mach. i. c as accordynge was, and made the ſacrifices appoynted, the offerynges alſo of the Sabothes, i. Eſd. iii. b and of the newe moones, and all holye feaſtes. * And all they that vowed offerynges vnto the Lord, beganne at the newe moone of the ſeuēth moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lord was not yet builded. And they gaue vnto ẏ maſons & carpenters, monye, meate, & drynke with chearfulneſſe. Unto them of Sidon, alſo & Tire, they gaue carres, ẏ they ſhuld cary Cedre trees, from Lybanus to be ioyſtes, and beames and that they ſhulde make ſhyppes in the hauen of Joppe, accordynge as it was appoynted and ordeyned by Cyrus kynge of the Perſyans. F

And in the ſeconde yeare, they came into ẏ temple of God, at Ieruſalem. * In the ſeconde moneth began zorobabel the ſonne of Salathiel, & Ieſua the ſonne of Joſedec, & their brethren the preaſtes and Leuytes: and al they that were come vnto Ieruſalem out of ẏ captiuite of Babylon, & layed ẏ foundacyon of the temple, in ẏ newe mone of the ſeconde moneth in the ſeconde yere, ẏ they were come into Jewry & Ieruſalem. And they apointed ẏ Leuites (that were aboue. xx. yere old) vnto the ſeruyce of the Lorde, ſo Ieſua and hys ſonnes, and hys brethren, all the Leuytes ſtode together, and perfourmed the lawe and ordynaunce in the houſe of the Lorde. ec. xxix. b. c

And the preaſtes ſtode, and had theyr garmentes and trompettes, and the Leuites, the ſōnes of Aſaph, had cymbales, geuynge thankes and prayſes vnto the Lorde, accordyng * as Da uid the kynge of Iſrael had ordeyned. i. par. xvi. b

And the ſonge that they dyd ſynge vnto the Lorde, was after this maner. ‡ O ſynge vnto ẏ Lorde, for he is gracious, & hys goodneſſe vpon Iſrael endureth for euer. And al ẏ people blewe out wyth trompettes, & ſange wyth lowde voyce prayſynge the Lorde together, in the rearing vp of the houſe of ẏ Lorde. There came alſo frō amonge the preaſtes & Leuites the rulers and elders accordinge to the trybes & kynredes (ſuche as had ſene the houſe afore) to the buyldynge of this temple with great cry, & great mournyng many alſo wyth trompettes & great ioye: In ſo muche, that the trompettes myghte not well be herde for the wepinge & mournynge. For the cōmune people blewe goodly vpon ẏ trompettes. pſ. cxxxv. a Eſay. xii. b G i. Eſd. iii. b

* Then came the enemyes of the trybes of Juda & Ben Jamī, to knowe what that trompetynge & noyſe of ſhawmes myght be. And they perceyued ẏ it was they which were come agayne out of captiuite, & wolde buyld the temple vp a newe vnto the Lorde God of Iſrael. So they went to zorobabel, and Ieſua, and the rulers of the vyllages, & ſayde vnto them. Shall we builde wyth you alſo? For we likewiſe haue heard your Lord, and we walke after the ſame maner from the dayes of Azbaſareth the kynge of Aſſyria, whych brought vs hyther. Then zorobabel & Ieſua, and the rulers of the vyllages of Iſrael, ſayde vnto them: It is not mete, ẏ ye ſhuld buyld ẏ temple of our God wt vs, we our ſelues alone wyl buyld vnto ẏ Lorde, lyke * as Cirus ẏ kynge of the Perſians hath commaunded vs. i. Eſd. iiii. a i. Eſd. i. a.

But the Heathen in the land layde them ſelues agaynſt thoſe that were in Jewry, helde vp the buyldynge from them, layed wayte vpō thē prcuylye, ſtopped ſuch as brought ye any thynge to them, forbad them to buylde, & hyndred thoſe that that made them passage, ꝑ the buyldyng shulde not be fynysched: and thys contynued so long as kynge Cyrus lyued: and so they put of the buyldyng, for the space of two yeres, vntyl ꝑ raigne of kynge Darius.

¶ Aggeus and zacharyp prophecie. They buylde the temple without let or hynderaunce, by the commaundemente of Darpus.

NOtwythstandynge, in the seconde yere of the raigne of Darius.* Aggeus & zacharye the sonne of Addo, prophecied vpō thē in Jewry, & Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Agge. i. e. Israel: * Then zorobabel, ꝑ sonne Salathiel, & Jesua the sonne of Josedec stod vp & beganne to builde the house of ꝑ Lorde at Jerusalem, when ꝑ prophetes of the Lorde helped them. At ꝑ same tyme came Sisennes ꝑ vnder shreue in Siria, & Phenices, with the lanlordes & hys companians, and sayde vnto them: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buyld the house, to make the rooke and all other thynges agayne? And who are ꝑ worcke men, that buylde them? Neuertheless, the elders of ꝑ Jewes had such grace of the Lorde, ꝑ they wolde not be let (thoughe they were pronoked therto) but buylded on styll, vntyll the tyme that kyng Darius were certyfyed therof, and an answere receiued from hym. The letter that these men sente vnto kynge Darius was after thys maner.

Sisennes the vnder Shreue in Siria, and Phenices, and the landlordes wyth theyr companyons, whych are hedrulers in Siria, & Phenyces, sende theyr salutacyou vnto Darius the kynge. We certifye the lorde the kyng, that we came into the lande of Jewry and went to Jerusalem: where we foūde them buyldinge ꝑ great house of God, and the temple, wyth great costly fre stone, and with goodly tymbre for ꝑ walles: yee, they make great hast wyth the worcke, and helpe one another, and it goeth forth prospe rously in theyr handes, and with great dilygēce & worshyp is it made. Then asked we the elders who had commaūded them, to make vp ꝑ house and the buyldynge? and thys we dyd, to the entent that we myghte certyfye the perfectly, and wryte vnto the, the names of those that were ꝑ rulers of the worcke. So they gaue vs thys answere: we are the seruauntes of ꝑ Lorde, which iii. re. vi. a. made heauen and earth, & as for thys house, * yt hath bene buylded and set vp afore tyme by the great and myghty kynge of Israel. But when our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, & sined iiii. regum. xxiiii. xxb Je. xxxix -lii. agaynst the God of Israel, * he gaue them ouer into the powre of Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon the kynge of the Chaldees, whyche brake downe the house and brent it, and caryed away i. Esd. v. c the people preseners vnto Babylō. * Neuertheless, in the fyrste yeare that kynge Cyrus raygned at Babylon, Cirus the kynge wrote & commaunded, to buylde vp the house againe: and al the ornamentes that Nabuchodonosor caried awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babilō, and appropryated vnto hys owne temple: these broughte Cyrus forth agayne, and delyuered them to zorobabel and to Salmanasar, the vnder shreue, commaundynge them, that they shulde bryngе those same ornamentes agayne to Jerusalē, into the temple, and begyn from ꝑ tyme forth, to buylde the temple agayne, in hys owne place. Then Salmanasar layde the foundacion of the Lordes house at Jerusalē: & euer sens they haue buylded, and yet is not ended. And therfore, O kynge, yf thou thynkest it good, let it be sought in the Lybrarpes and rolles of kynge Cirus. yf it be founde then, that it is done wyth ꝑ councel and consent of kynge Cyrus, & yf oure lorde the kīge be so minded, let him wryte vntovs therof.

* Then commaunded kyng Darius to seke C in the Lybraries: and so at Egbathanis in a ly- i. Esd. vi. a tle cytie in Medea there was found such a wry- ii. Es. iiii. c tynge. In the fyrst yeare of the raygne of Cirus the same king Cirus commaunded that ꝑ house of the Lorde at Jerusalem shulde be buylded agayne (and odoures there to be made continually vnto ꝑ Lorde) whose heygh shalbe. x. cubites & the bredth thre score cubites, and foure square with thre hewen stones, with a lofte of tymbre of the same countrye: yea, with a new lofte, and the expences therof to be geuen of the house of ꝑ kynge Cirus: and the ornamentes of golde & syluer that Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, shalbe set agayne in the temple at Jerusalem, wher they were afore Sisennes also ꝑ vndershreue in Syria, & Phenices, ꝑ prynces and theyr companions, and the other ꝑ be head rulers in Siria & Phenices, shal not medle nor haue any thīg to do with ꝑ place.

D I Cirus haue commaunded also, ꝑ they shal buylde the house of the Lorde hole vp, and haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that be come oute of captyupte: tyll the house of the Lorde be fynysched: and out of the trybute and taxynge that is yearely rayled vp in Syria & Phenices, diligently to geue them a certayne sūme of the offering of the Lorde: and the same to be delyuered vnto zorobabel the offycer, that he therwithal maye ordeyne oxen, rammes, lambes, and corne, salte wyne, and oyle, and that contynuallye euerye i. Esd. vi. d yeare: after the expences * whych the preastes ꝑ be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made daylye, thys shalbe geuen vnto them wythoute delay, ꝑ they may offer sacrifices dayly to highest God, for the kynge and for hys seruauntes, and to praye for theyr lyues. Let it be proclaymed also on euery syde, ꝑ whosoeuer breaketh or dysppyseth this commaundemente of the kynge, shalbe hanged vpon a galowes (made of hys owne good) and al his goodes shalbe sealoned vnto ꝑ king. The Lord therfore (whose name is there called vpō) roote out, and destroy al the kynges, and people that vndertake by violence to hinder ꝑ same, or to deale vncurteously wyth the house of ꝑ Lord at Jerusalem, I Darius ꝑ kyng haue ordeyned ꝑ these thynges shalbe done wyth all dyligēce.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

¶ The temple is fynysched and dedicate: & the feast of the vnleuened bread is holden.

THen Sisennes the vndershreue in Celo- A siria, and Phenices, & ꝑ other landlordes wyth theyr companyons, obeyed the thynges, that kynge Darius had ordeyned, and were dylygent in the holy workes, and were felowhelpers wyth the old rulers of the Jewes. And so ỹ worcke of the Sanctuary went forth and prospered, when Aggeus, and zachary prophecyed. And they perfourmed all thynges thorowe the commaundemente of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius, and Artharerses kynges of Persya.

B And thus was oure house fynished vnto ỹ xriii. daye of the moneth Adder in the. vi. yeare of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Israel, ỹ preastes and Leuytes, and the other that were come out of captiuytie: and such as were ioyned vnto them, dyd accordynge as it is wrytten in ỹ booke of Moses. And in ỹ dedycacion of the temple: they offred an hũdred oxen, two hundred rãmes, foure hundred lãbes, and twelue goates, for the synnes of all the people of Israel, after ỹ nombre of the trybe of Israell. The Preastes also and the Leuytes stode arayed in theyr preastly garmentes, after the trybes, ouer al ỹ workes of ỹ Lord God of Israel: accordynge to the boke of Moses, & the porters by all the doores.

C And the chyldren of Israel (with those that were come oute of captyuytie) helde ỹ passeouer the fourteneth daye of the fyrste moneth, when the preastes and the Leuites were sanctyfyed. They that came out of captyuytye were not all sanctifyed together. But the Leuites were sanctifyed to geather, and so all they that came out

D of captyuytie, kylled the Easter lambe for their brethren, for the preastes & for them selues. And the chyldren of Israel, that came out of captiuytie and escaped from all the abhompnacyons of the Heathen, sought the Lorde, and kepte the feaste of the vnleuened breade seuen dayes longe, eatynge and dryncknge and were mery before the Lord, ỹ the Lorde had turned the deuyce of ỹ kyng of Asseria, and comforted theyr handes to the worckes of the Lorde God of Israel.

C The. viii. Chapter.

C Esdras causeth the people to assemble and come together, and then readeth them the lawe. They kepe the feaste of the tabernacle.

A 1. Esd. viii. D Nd after hym * when Artharerses ỹ kyng of ỹ Persiãs raygned, there wente vnto hym Esdras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchiach, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Saddoch, the sonne of Achitob, The sonne of Amarias, The sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Bocrus, the sonne of Abisu the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the fyrste preaste. This Esdras wente vp from Babylon (for he had good vnderstandynge in the lawe of Moses, that was geuen of the Lorde God of Israel, to be taughte and done in dede.) And the kynge fauored hym, and dyd hym great worshyppe and honoure, after all hys dyspres. There wente vp wyth hym also certayne of the chyldrẽ of Israel, of the preastes, of the Leuytes, of the syngers, porters, & mynysters of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the seuenth yeare of the raygne of kyng Artharerses, in the. v. moneth, that is in the seuenth yeare of the raygne, they wente from Babylon in the newe mone of ỹ. v. moneth, & came the hygh waye to Jerusalem after his commaũdement, lyke as the Lorde hath prospered theyr iourney. For in these Esdras gat great instruccyon, that he shuld leaue none of the thynges behynde, whych are in the lawe and commaundementes of God. And he taught hole Israel all B ryghteousnesse and iudgementes.

Then came the Secretaries of kynge Artharerses, and delyuered the wrytynges (that were come from Artharerses the kynge) to Esdras the preast and reader of the lawe of ỹ Lord And thys is the coppe of ỹ letter: kyng Artharerses sendeth hys gretyng vnto Esdras the preaste & reader of the lawe of the Lorde. Of frendshyppe & good wyll I haue ordeyned and charged yf there be anye of the Jewes, of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, whiche desyreth and is content to go with the vnto Jerusalem, that he may do it. Therfore, yf anye be mynded to beare ỹ company, let them come together, & go with the (lyke as I am contente & my seuen frendes, my councelers) to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewry, and kepe the thinges accordynge as thou haste, in the lawe of the Lorde, & to bryng the gyftes vnto God the Lord of Israel, that I & my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, & all the syluer & golde that is in the countrye of Babylon, vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem with the thynge that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem: Yea, that the same syluer and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rãmes, shepe, & goates, and other that belõg to these thynges: and that they may offre sacryfyces vnto the Lorde, vpon the aulter of theyr Lorde whych is at Jerusalem.

And whatsoeuer thou & thy brethren wyll do wyth the syluer and golde, that do after thy mynde, accordynge to the commaundemente of the Lorde thy God, & lykewyse wyth the holye vessels that are geuen the, for the seruyce of the house of ỹ Lord thy God & other thynges whatsoeuer is necessary for the worcke of the temple that shalbe geuen of the kynges treasure, & loke what thou wyth thy brethren wylte do wyth ỹ golde & syluer. that do after the wil of the Lord And I kynge Artharerses haue commaunded ỹ kepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenices that whatsoeuer Esdras the preaste and reader of the lawe of the Lorde doth wryte, it shalbe geuen hym: tyll an. C. talentes of syluer. and of golde in lyke maner. Of corne also an. C. measures & tyl an. C. vessels of wine, & other plente C ous thinges wout nõbre. Let al thinges be done after ỹ lawe of ỹ hyest God, ỹ the wrath of God arise not ĩ the realme of the kyng & of hys sõnes I commaunde you also that ye requyre no taxe nor trybute of the preastes, Leuytes, syngers, & mynystres of the temple, nor of the wryters: ãd that no man haue authorite to medle any thyng agaynste them. As for the (O Esdras) set thou iudges & arbiterers in the hole lande of Siria & Phenices, after the wysdome of God: ãd learne all al such as are ignorante in the lawe of God thy Lorde, ād let all them that offende agaynst the lawe, be punyshed: whether yt be with death, w̄ paine, to be cōdēpned in mony, or to be banished

1.Esd.viii.a. Then sayde Esdras the wryter: * Blessed be the God of oure fathers, that hathe geuen so good a mynde and wyl into the hert of the king to magnyfy hys house that is at Jerusalem, ād hath made me to be accepted in the syghte of ỹ kyng, of his counsayle, of his frendes & of his nobles. And so I was stedfast in my mynde, accordyng as ỹ Lord my God helped me, & chose men

1.Esr.viii.b out of Israel to go with me. * And these are the heades, (after theyr kinreds and houses of their fathers) that wente vp wyth me from Babylō out of the kyngdome of Artharxerses. Of the sōnes of Phares: Gersonius. Of the sonnes of Siemarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid: Accus, the sonne of Cecylya.

Of the sōnes of Phares, zacharyp: & wyth hym there turned agayne an. C. and. l. men. Of the sonnes of the captayne of Moabylō: zaraei, & wyth hym. two. C. & fyftye men. Of the sōnes of zachnes: Jechonias, zecholi, & wyth hym two hundred & fyftye men. Of the sōnes of Salama alias, Gotholye, lxx wyth hym. Of the sonnes of zaphacia, zarias, Mychelie: & wyth him foure score. Of the sonnes of Job: Abdias, Jehely, ād wyth hym two hundred and twelue mē. Of the sonnes of Baania, Salymoth, the sōnes of Josaphia, & wyth him an hundred & thre score men Of the sonnes of Beer, zacharie, Bebei, & with hym two hundred & eyghte men. Of the sonnes of Esead, Johannes, Ezecham, & wyth hym an C. & ten men Of the sonnes of Adonicam, those that were the laste: & these are theyr names. Eliphalam, the sōns of Gebel, & Semeias, & wyth hym. lxx. men. All these called I together by the water Thia, where we pytched oure tente thre dayes: and there I mustred them.

D 1.Esd.viii.b * As for the sonnes of the preastes & Leuytes, I founde none there. Then sente I vnto Eleazar, & Eccelom, and Masmam, & Malobam, and Eanaathan, and Samea, & Jorybimathā, Eunagā, zachary, Mosolamun (these were the elders and men of experyence) and I sente them worde, ỹ they shulde come vnto Loddus, which was by the place of the treasury, and commaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddus and to hys brethren, & to those that were in the treasurye, to sende vs suche men, as myghte execute the preastes offyce in the house of the Lorde oure God, & wyth the myghtye hande of our Lorde God, they broughte vnto vs mē of good experyence, from amonge the sonnes of Mooly us, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebebeiam, & the sonnes and hys brethren Albin, ād Anin, of whome there were. xviii. From amōg the chyldren of the sonnes of Cananens, & their sonnes were twentie mē. And of them ỹ serued in the temple, whom Dauid had ordeyned, and the pryncypall men ỹ mynystred for the worke vnto the Leuites in the temple two. C. & .xx. mē whose names are all tokened vp in wrytynge.

E 1.Esd.i.a. * Then commaunded Ia kynge vnto the ponge men before the Lorde, that I myghte desyre of him a prosperous iourney, & a good way for vs: yea, for vs: for oure chyldren and for the catell, by cause of the layenges awayte, and I durst not requyre of the kynge men of horse and of foote, to conuey vs safely agaynst our enemyes, for we had sayde vnto the kynge, that the power of the Lorde our God shulde be wyth them that seke hym with theyr whole herte. And therfore, we besoughte God oure Lorde earnestlye because of these thynges, and he was mercyfull vnto vs, and hearde oure prayer. And I seperated from among the rulers of the people, & from the preastes of the temple. xii. men, and Sebeia and Asania, ād ten men of theyr brethren wyth them. And I weyed them the golde and the syluer & all the preastly ornamentes of the house of oure God, whyche the kinge, & hys counsayle, & hys prynces, and whole Israel had geuen. And when I had weyed yt, I gaue them, an hundred & fyfty talentes in syluer vessel, an hundred talentes of golde, & of golden vessell seuen tymes twentye, & vessels of other metall (yea, of good metall) twelue glystering as the golde, & sayde vnto them: ye are holye vnto the Lorde, and the vessels are holy, & the gold & the syluer is promysed vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers.

Be dylygente nowe, and kepe it, vntyll ỹ tyme that ye delyuer it to the rulers of the people, to the preastes, to the Leuytes, & to the principall men of the cyties of Israel in Jerusalem, and in the chambre of the house of oure God. 1.Esd.viii.a

* So the preastes and the Leuytes whyche receaued of me the golde, the syluer, and the vessell, broughte it vnto Jerusalem into the temple of the Lorde. And from the ryuer of Thia, we brake vp the twelue daye of the fyrste moneth, tyll we came to Jerusalem. And when ỹ thyrde daye was past, the weyed golde and syluer was delyuered in the house of the Lorde the fourthe daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Jor the preaste, & wyth hym was Eleazar the sōne of Phineas, and wyth them were Josabdus the sōnes of Jasnet, Medias, & the sonne of Banus, & certayne of the Leuytes to the nombre and to the weyghte: & the weyghte of them was wrytten vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captyuytye, they offred sacrifyce vnto ỹ Lorde the God of Israell: euen twelue oxen for all Israell. lxxxvi. rammes. lxxii. shepe. xii. goates for synne: twelue kyne for a thankeoffering all to the sacrifyce of the Lorde. And the kinges commyssion delyuered they vnto the stewardes and deputyes of the kyng: and to the vndershrues in Celosyria, and Phenices.

1.Esdr.ix.a * Nowe, when those thinges were done the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The generacyon of Israell, the prynces, the preastes, and Leuites, the straunge people and indwellers of the lande, haue not put awaye theyr vnclennesse, from the Cananites Hethites Pherelites, from the Moabites, Egipcians, and Edomites. For both they and theyr sonnes haue myngled themselues wyth the daughters of them, & the holye seede is myxte wyth the outlandyshe Heathen

1.Esd.ix.a. * As soone as I had herde these thinges, immedyatly I rente my holy garmentes, & pulled out the heere of my heade and my bearde & sate me downe sorowfull and heny, So al they that were moued thorowe the worde of ẏ God of Israel, came vnto me, & I sat styll: full of heupnes vntyll the euenynge sacrifyce. Then stode I vp from fastynge, haupnge rente clothes & the holye garmẽt, kneled downe vpon my knees, held out my handes vnto the Lorde, & sayde: O Lorde, I am confounded & aschamed before thy face for oure synnes are become manye vpon our heades: and oure wyckednesses are exalted vnto the heauen: for syns the tyme of our fathers, we are in greate synne vnto thys daye. And for the synnes of vs and oure fathers, we with our bretheren and wyth oure preastes haue bene delyuered vnto the kynges of the earth: into the swerd and into captyuytye: & became a spoyle with cõfulpon and shame vnto thys daye. And nowe O Lorde God: howe greate is the mercye that we haue gotten of the: in that thou hast left vs a name and a roote in the place of thy Sanctuarye, to dyscouer oure lyghte in the house of the Lorde oure God, and haste geuẽ vs meate at all tymes of oure mynystracyon. And when we were in captyuytie we were not forsaken of the Lorde our God: but he made the kynges of Persia gracious and fauorable vnto vs: so that they gaue vs vytayles & meate: yea, & leaue to buyld vp the temple of oure Lorde God agayne, to repayre the wasted places of Syon: and to dwell in Jewrye and Jerusalem. And nowe O Lorde what shall we saye: haupnge all these thynges in possessyon: for we haue broken thy commaundementes, whyche thou gauest vnto vs by ẏ handes of thy seruauntes the prophetes saying The lande that ye go vnto & that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in possessyon, is defyled wyth the vnclennesse and fylthynesse of the Heathen & wyth theyr abhomynacyon haue they polu
G luted it altogether. Therfore, shall ye not ioyne youre daughters vnto theyr sonnes, nor marye youre sonnes vnto theyr daughters. Moreouer ye shal not seeke to make peace with them, that ye maye increse and eate the beste in the lande, & that ye maye deuyde the inheritaunce of the lãde, vnto youre chyldren for euer more. As for ẏ thinge that nowe happened vnto vs, it commeth all for oure wycked worckes and great synnes, yet hast thou geuẽ vs suche a roote that we are come agayne into oure lande, and we are so wycked, that we haue broken thy statutes ãd commaundementes agayne: & myngled oure selues wyth the vnclennesse of the outlandysh Heathẽ O Lorde, arte thou angrye with vs: wylt thou roote vs cleane oute: that oure roote and name remayne nomore: O Lorde God of Israel thou arte true: for oure roote endurethe yet vnto this presẽt day. And behold, nowe are we before ẏ in our sines, nowe cã we not stãde before the in thẽ

1.Esd.x.a. * And when Esdras wyth hys prayer had knowleged the synne, weppynge and lyinge ſlat vpon the ground before the temple, there gathered vnto hym from Jerusalem a greate multytude of men and wemen, of yong men, and maydens: for there was a very great weppynge, and mournynge in the congregacyon. So when Iechonias the sonne of Jehely one of the chyldren of Israel cryed, he sayde vnto Esdras: we haue synned agaynste the Lorde, bycause we haue maryed outlandysh wemen of the Heathen. Nowe art thou ouer al Israel. We wyl sweare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, that we shal put away all oure wyues whyche we haue taken of ẏ Heathen: wyth theyr chyldren: lyke as it is appoynted the by oure fore elders. Stande vp then, opẽ thou it and declare it playnely vnto vs, accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde: for the matter belõgeth vnto the, and we wyll helpe the, quyte thy selfe manlye. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of ẏ rulers, of the preastes, & of the Leuites & of Israel, to do after these thinges: & they sware

The.ix. Chapter.

After Esdras had red the lawe, the people put away their straunge wyues: and then returned euery man merelye vnto his owne dwellynge.

A 1.Esdr.v.b. Then Esdras stode vp from the court of the temple wythout, and went into the chambre of Jonathas the sonne of Nasabus, and remayned there and dyd eate no meate, nor dronche dryncke: for the multytude of the wyckednesse of the people. And there was made a proclamacyon in all Jewry & at Jerusalem, for al such as were gathered at Jerusalem out of captyuytye that whosoeuer came not to Jerusalem wythin two or thre dayes (accordyng to the iudgement of the olde Lordes of the counsayle) hys goodes shulde be taken from hym, and be excluded from the congregacyon of the captiuytie. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda & Benjamĩ gathered togeather at Jerusalem, the. xx daye of the nynth moneth. And the hole multytude sat trymblynge in the courte of the temple for it was wynter. So Esdras rose vp, & sayde vnto them: ye haue done vnrygheteously, in that ye haue taken outlandysshe wyues to maryage, & so to encrease the synnes of Israel. And nowe knowlege the same, & geue prayse vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers, and performe hys wyll, B departynge from the Heathen of the lande, and from the outlandysshe wyues. Thẽ cryed ẏ hole multytude wyth loude voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyl we do: but for so much as the people are manye, and the wynter heare, we may not stonde without the house: Agayne thys worcke is not a thyng that cã be fynyshed in a daye or two: for we be manye, that haue synned in these thynges. Ordeyne therfore that the rulers of the multytude, and they that dwel wyth vs, and as manye as haue outelandysshe wyues, the preastes also & iudges of euery place maye stande in the tyme appoynted, tyll they swage the wrath of the Lord in thys busyneſſe.

Then Jonathas the sonne of Ezely, and Ozias & Thecam receaued the charge of this matter, and Bozoramus, and Leius, & Sabatheus helpeth them therto. After thys, all they stode vp vp that were come out of captyuytye. And Eldras the preaste chose vnto hym the pryncypall men from amonge ỹ fathers accordyng to theyr names, & in the new mone of the .x. moneth they sat together, to exampne thys matter. And so ỹ matter was a determynynge (concernynge the C men that had outlandysche wyues) vntyl the newe mone of the fyrst moneth. And of the prestes that had myxte them selues wyth outelandysche

1.Eldr.x.c. wyues there were founde. * Of the sonnes of Iesu: the sones of Josedec, and hys brethren, Mazeas, Eleazar, Jorimus, & Joadeus, whych offered them selues to put awaye theyr wyues and to offre a ramme for theyr ignoraunce. And of the sones of Semmery, Masseas, & Elles, & Jeelech, Azarias. Of the sonnes of Fosera, Limosias, Hismaen, Nathanea, Jussio, Jeddus & Tallas. And of the Leuytes: Josabdus, Semeis, & Colnis, Caletas, Facteas, Colnas, & Elionas. Of the syngers of the Sanctuary: Eliarib, zackarus. Of the porters, Sallumus and Tolbanes. And of Israel: of the chyldren of Foro, Osi and Remias, & Geddias, and Melchias, Michelus, Eleazarus, Jemmebias, & Bonnas. And the chyldren of Jolamã. Chanias, zachary, Jeizrelus,, Joddius, Erimoth, and Elias. And of ỹ sonnes of Jathoim, Eliadas, Liasamus, and zochias, Larimoth,, Sabdis, & Thebedias. And of the sones of zebes, Johannes, Amanias, zab-
D dias, and Emmeus. And of the sones of Bannus, Olãmus, Maluchus, Jeddus, Jasub, Asabus, & Jerimoth. And of the sones of Addĩ, Naatus, & Mooslas, & Caleus, & Raanas, Haasius, Mathathias, Besel Bãnus, & Manasses.

And of the sones of Naue: Nones, Ateas, Melchias, Sameas, Simó, Ben Jamin, Malchus and Marras. And of the sonnes of Asom: Carianeus, Mathathias, Banuus, Eliphalach, Manasses, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremy, Moodias, Abzamas, Johel, Baneas, Peliaas, Jona, Marimoth,, Eliasib, Mathaneus, Elialis, Ozyas, Dielus, Semedius, zambzis, and Joseph. Of the sonnes of Nobeus Idelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, zeheda, Sedmi, Jesseus, & Baneas. All these had taken outlandysche wemen to mariage, & they put them awaye wyth theyr chyldren. The preastes & Leuytes, and all they that were of Israell, dwelte
E at Jerusalem and thorowout all the lande, in ỹ newe moone of the seuenth moneth, and the children of Israel were in theyr dwellynges: And the whole multytude came together, vpon the floore at the Eastesyde of the holye porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Eldras ỹ hye preaste, & reader, that he wolde bryng the lawe of Moses, whych was geuen of the Lorde God of Israel. So Eldras the hye preaste brought the lawe vnto the whole multytude, to man & woman to all the preastes, that they myght heare ii.Esd.viii.d & Esd.viii.a the lawe, * in the newe mone of the .vii. moneth And he red in the floore that is before ỹ holy port of the temple, from the mornynge earlye vnto ỹ euenynge, before men and wemen. And they applyed theyr mynde all vnto the lawe.

F And Eldras the preaste & reader of the lawe stode vp vpon a pulpet of woode, whyche was made therfore, & vpon hys ryght hande there stode by hym Mathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Urias, Ozechias, & Balsamus, Upon hys lefte hand stode Faldeus, Misael, Malachias, Abuschas, Sabus, Nabadias, ãd zachary. Then toke Eldras the booke before the whole multytude, for he was the pryncipal and had in mooste honoure of them all. And when he had red oute the lawe, they stode all strayght vpon theyr fete. called you to the heauenlye kyngedome.
Aryse vp, and stande faste: beholde the nom- D bze of those that be sealed in the feast of the Loz-de, whyche are departed from the shadowe of the wozlde, and haue receaued glozyous garmē tes of the Lozde. Take thy nombze O Syon, & shut vp the puryfyed, which haue fulfilled the lawe of the Lozde. The nombze of thy chyldren whom thou longest foz, is fulfylled, beseche the powze of ỹ Lozd, ỹ the people whiche haue bene called from the begynninge, maye be halowed.
*I Esdras sawe vpon the mounte Sion a Apoc.vii.e great people, whome I coulde not nombze, and they al praysed the Lozd with songes of thākes geuynge. And in the middest of them there was a ponge mā of an hye stature, moze excellent thē all they, & vpon euery one of theyr heades he set a crowne, and was euer higher & hygher, which I merueled at greatlye. So I asked the angell, and sayde: Syr, what are these? He aunswered & sayde vnto me: These be they, that haue put of the moztal clothynge, & put on the immoztal ād haue testifyed and knowleged the name of God
Nowe are they crowned, & receaue the rewarde
Then sayde I vnto the angel: what ponge persone is it, that crowneth them, & geueth thē
the Palmes in theyr handes? So he aunswered, & sayde vnto me: it is the sonne of God, whome they haue knowleged in the wozld. Then begā
I greatly to commend them, that stode so stykly foz the name of the Lozd. And so the angel sayd vnto me: Go thy way, and tell my people, what maner of thynges: and howe greate wonders of the Lozde thy God, thou haste sene.

C The.iii. Chapter.

C The wonderous wozkes whiche God dyd foz the people are recited. Esdras marueleth ỹ God suffereth the Babylonias to haue rule ouer his people, whych yet are synners also.

IN the thyrtye yeare of the fall of the A cytye, I was at Babylō, & laye trou bled vpō my bed, and my thoughtes came vp ouer my herte: foz I sawe ỹ desolacīō of Sion, and the plenteous wealth of them that dwelte at Babylon, & my spzete was soze moued, so that I begānne to spe ake fearful wozdes to the most hyest, and sayde
O Lozde Lozde, thou spakest at the begynning when thou plantedste the earth (& that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundemente vnto the people, and a body vnto Adam, whyche was a creature of thy hādes, and haste bzethed in him the bzeth of lyfe: and so he lyued befoze the, and thou leddest hym into Paradyce, which garden of pleasure thy ryghte hand had planted, ozeuer
the earth was made: And vnto him thou gauest commaun-

comaundement to loue thy waye which he trās-gressed, & immediatlye thou appoyntedst death in hym, and in hys generacyons. Of hym came nacyons, trybes, people, and kynredes, oute of Gene.vi.b. nombre. * And euery people walked after theyr owne wyll, and dyd nyce thynges before the: ād
B as for thy cōmaundemetes they dyspysed thē.
Gene.vii.b * But in processe of tyme thou broughtest the water floude, vpon those that dwelte in the worlde, and destroyedst them. And lyke as the deathe was in Adam, so was the water floude also in these. Neuertheless one of thē ỹ lefteste namelye Noe, wyth his housholde, of whome cā al righteous men. And it happened ỹ when they ỹ dwelt vpon the earth, beganne to multiply, & had gotten many chyldren, & were a greate people, they begā to be more vngodly then ỹ firste.
Nowe when they all lyued so wyckedlye
gen.xii.fb. before the, * thou dyddest chose the a man frome amonge them, whose name was Abraham.
Hym thou louedest, and vnto hym onelye thou shewedst thy wyll, and madest an euerlastynge couenaunte wyth hym, promysynge hym that Gen.xxi.a. thou woldeste neuer forsake hys seed. * And vn Gen.xxb.c to hym thou gauest Isahac, ǂ vnto Isahac also thou gauest Jacob, and Esau. As for Jacob, gen.xxviii.e thou dydest chose hym, and put backe Esau. *
And so Jacob became a greate multytude.
C And it happened that when thou leddeste
Exo.xix.a. hys seed out of Egypte * thou broughtest them Deu.iiii.b. vp to the mount Sion, bowynge downe the he uens setting fast the earth, mouyng the ground makynge the depthes to shake, and troublynge the worlde: And thy glory wente thorowe four portes of fyre, and earthequakes: and wyndes and colde: that thou myghteste geue the lawe vnto the seed of Jacob, and dylygence vnto the generacyon of Israel. And yet tokest thou not a waye from them that wycked herte, ỹ thy lawe myght bringe furth frute in them. For the fyrste Adam bare a wycked herte, transgressed:
and was ouercome, and so be all they that are Rom.viiia borne of hym. * Thus remayned weakenes w̄ ỹ lawe: in the hertes of the people, wyth ỹ wyckednes of the roote: so that the good departed a waye and the euell a bode styl. So the tymes passed awaye, and the yeares were broughte to i.reg.vbi.c an ende. * Then dydeste thou rayse the vp a ser-ǂ ii.Re.v.a uaunte called Dauid, ǂ whome thou commaundedste to buylde a cytye vnto thy name: and to offre vp incense and sacrifyce vnto the therein.
Thys was done nowe many yeares. Then the inhabyters of the cytye forsoke the, & in all thyn ges dyd euen as Adam and all hys generacions had done: for they also had a wycked herte.
And so thou gauest thy cytye ouer into the D handes of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babilon then better and more righteous then thy people that they shall therfore haue the dompnyon of Syon? For when I came there and sawe theyr vngodlynesse, and so greate wyckednesse: that it coulde not be nombrede: yee, when my soule sawe so manye euell doers (in the thyrty year)
my herte fayled me, for I sawe, howe thou sufferedst them in such vngodlynesse, and sparedst the wicked doers: but thyne owne people hast ỹ roted out, & preserued thyne enemyes, and thys haste thou not shewed me.
I can not perceaue howe thys happeneth
Do they of Babylon then better, then they of Syon? Or is there anye other people that knoweth the, sauynge that people of Israell? Or what generacyon hath so beleued thy couenaūt tes, as Jacob? And yet theyr rewarde appereth not, and theyr labour hath no frute. For I haue gone heare and there thorowe the Heathen, and I se that they be ryche and welthy, and thyncke not vpon thy commaundementes. Weye thou therfore our wyckednesse nowe in the balaunce and theyrs also that dwel in the worlde, and so shall thy name be no where founde but in Israel Or where is there a people vpon earthe, ỹ hath not synned before the? Or what people hathe so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shalte fin de that Israel by name hathe kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and Heathen.

The.iiii. Chapter.

¶ The Aungel reproueth Esdras, because he semed to en ter into the profounde iudgementes of God.

And the Aungell that was sēt vnto me (whose name was Uryel) gaue me an aunswere, and sayd: thy hert hath taken to muche vpon it in this worlde and thou thynckest to comprehende the waye of the hyeste. Then sayde I: Yee, my Lorde. And he aunswered me, and sayd
I am sente to shewe the thre wayes, and to set forth the symplytudes, before the: whereof yf ỹ canste declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the way, that thou desyrest to se: And I shal shewe
the from whence the wycked herte commeth.
And I sayde: Tell on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me: Go thy waye, wepe me the weyght of the fyre, or measure me the blaste of the wynde, or call me agayne the daye that is paste. Then aunswered I and sayde: What man borne is able to do that? why requyrest thou suche of me?
And he sayd vnto me: Yf I shuld aske the howe depe dwellynges are in the see? Or howe great watersprynges are vpon the fyrmamente? Or howe greate watersprynges are in the begyn-nynge of the depe? Or whych are the out goyn-ges of Paradyse? Parauenture thou woldeste saye vnto me: I neuer went downe yet into the depe or hell, neyther dyd I euer clyme vp to hea
uen. Neuertheless nowe haue I asked the but onely of fyre, and wynde, and of the day, where thorowe thou haste trauayled, and frome the whych thou canstnot beseperated: and yet canst thou geue me none aunswere of them.
He sayde moreouer vnto me: Thyne owne thynges, and suche as are growen vp wyth the canst ỹ not know: howe shold thy vessel then be able to comprehende the waye of the heyest, and nowe outewardelye in the corrupte worlde, to vnderstande the corrupcyon that is euydent in my syghte? Then sayde I vnto him: It were bet ter that we were not at all, then that we shulde lyue in wickednes, and to suffre, & not to knowe wherfore. He answered me and sayde: I wente in a woode

In a wood, and *the trees toke such a deuyce, & Judith.ixb sayd: Come let vs go, and fyghte against ỹ see, xi.pa.xvb.c that it maye departe awaye before vs, & that we maye make vs yet moze woddes.

The floudes of ỹ see also in lyke maner toke thys deuyce, and sayd: Come let vs go vp, and fyght agaynste the trees of the woode that we maye make oure lãde the wyder. The thought and deuyce of the wood was but vayne and no thyng wozth, foz the fyze came & consumed the woode: The thoughte of the floudes of the see:
came lykewyse to nought also, foz the sande stode vp and stopped them.

Yf thou were iudge nowe betwixt these two,
whom woldest thou iustifie, oz whom woldest thou condempne? I answered & sayd: Verely it is a folysh thought that they both haue deuy-sed. Foz the grounde is geuen vnto the woode, & the see also hath hys place to beare hys flou-
des. Then answered he me, & sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgemẽt, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? Foz lyke as the grounde is geuẽ vnto the wood, and the see to his floudes, euen so * they that dwell vpon earthe maye vnder- Esay.xlb,c stande nothing, but that which is vpõ earth: & Iohn.iii.c
he that dwelleth aboue the heuens, maye onlye 1.Cor.ii.b
vnderstand the thynges ỹ are aboue the heuẽs.
Then answered I, & sayd: I beseech ỹ, O lozde let me haue vnderstãding: foz it was not my mind to be curyous of thy hye thinges, but of such as we dayly medle wt hal, namely wherfoze that Israel is blasphemed of the Heathẽ, & foz what cause the people (whõ thou haste euer loued) is geuen ouer, to be punyshed of vngodly naciõs: & why the lawe of oure fathers is bzoughte to nought and the wzytten couenauntes come to none effecte, and passe awaye out of the wozlde as the greshoppers, & oure life is a very feare, & we are not wozthye to optayne mercye. What wyll he do then vnto hys name, whyche is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked question.

¶ Then answered he me, and sayde: The moze thou searchest, the moze thou shalt maruell, foz the wozlde hasteth fast to passe away, & cannot compzehende the thynges, that are pzompted foz the ryghteous in tyme to come foz * thys
1.Iohn.v.c wozlde is ful of vnryghteousnes & weakenes.

But as concernynge the thynges whereof thou askest me, I wyll tell the. The euell is sowen, but the destruccyon thereof is not yet come. Yf the euell nowe that is sowen, be not turned vpsyde downe, and yf the place where the euell is sowen, passe not away, then cannot the thynge come that is sowen wyth good.
Foz the cozne of euell sede hath bene sowen in the hert of man from the beginnyng, and howe muche vngodlynes hath be bzoughte vp vnto thys tyme? and howe much shall he yet bzynge fozth, vntyll he come into the barne.

Pondze now by thy selfe, whẽ ỹ cozne of euel sede is cut downe, howe greate a barne shall it fyll? I answered and sayde: Howe & when shal these thinges come to passe? Wherfoze are our yeres few & euel? And he answered me, saying:
Haste not thou to muche vpon the hyest, foz thy hastynes to be aboue him is but vaine, thou ma kest to moche a do. Dyd not the soules also of ỹ ryghteous aske questiõ of these thinges in their holynesse, sayinge: * Howe longe shall I hoope Apoca.vi.b of this fashion? When commeth the frute of my barne and my rewarde? And vpon this Jeremiel the Archangell gaue them answere, & sayde Euen when the nombze of the seedes is fylled in you, foz he hath weyed the wozld in ỹ balaunce:
in measure & nombze hath he measured the time and moueth it not vntil the same measure be ful fylled. Then answered I and sayde: O Lozde Lozde, nowe are we ful of synne, & foz oure sake paraduenture it is not, that the barne of the ryghteous shal not be fulfylled, because of ỹ synne of them that dwel vpon earth.

So he answered me & sayd: Go thy waye to a woman wyth chyld, & aske of her, when she hath fulfylled her nyne monethes, yf her chyldebed may kepe the byzth any longer wythin her.
Then sayde I: No Lozde that can she not.
And he sayde vnto me: In hell the secret places of soules are lyke the pzeuye chambze of a woman ỹ trauayleth, & maketh hast, whẽ the tyme & necessyte of the byzth is at hand: Euen so doth she hast to deliuer it that is committed vnto her Loke what thou desyzest to se, it shalbe shewed the from the begynnynge. Then answered I, & sayde: Yf I haue founde grace in thy syghte & yf it be possible, & yf I be mete therfoze, shew me
thẽ whether there be mo to come then is past, oz moze past then is foz to come. What is past, I knowe, but what is foz to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stand vp vpon the right syde, & I shal expounde ỹ similitude vnto
the. So I stode & beholde, an whote burnynge ouen went ouer before me: & it happened ỹ whẽ ỹ flame was gone by, the smoke had the vpper hande. After thys there went ouer before me a watery cloud, & sent downe much raine wt a stoz me: & when the stozmy rayne was past ỹ dzopes remained styl. Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as ỹ rayne is moze then the dzoppes, & as fyer exceadethỹ smoke, euen so the measure of the thinges ỹ are past hath the vpper hand. Then went the dzoppes and the smooke aboue: and I pzayde & sayde: maye I lyue (thynckest thou) vntyll that tyme? Oz what shall happen in those dayes? He answered me, and sayde: As foz the tokens wherof thou askest me, I maye tell the a parte:
but as touchynge thy lyfe, I maye not shewe
the, foz I am not sent therfoze.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ Eldras and the Aungell commen together.

AEuertheless, as concernynge the to kens, marcke thys: Beholde, the A dayes shall come, that they whyche dwell vpon earth, shalbe taken in a greate nombze, and the waye of the truthe shalbe hyd, and the lande shalbe barren from fayth: but *iniquitye shall haue the vpper mat.xxiiii.a hande, lyke as thou hast sene nowe, and as thou hast yearde longe ago. And the lande that thou seyste nowe to haue rule, shalte thou shoztlye se

waske. But yf God graunt ẏ to lyue, thou shalt se after the thyrde trompet ẏ the sunne shall sodenly shine agayne in the nyght, & the mone. iii. times in the daye, & blonde shall drop out of the wood, & the stone shall geue hys voyce, & the people shalbe vnquyet: & euē he shal rule, whōe they hope not, ẏ dwell vpon earth, & the foules shall flyt & ẏ Sodomytish see shal cast out his fishe, & make a noyse in ẏ nyght, whych many shall not knowe, but they shall all heare the voyce therof

There shalbe a confusyon also in many places, & the fyre shalbe oft sent agayne, & the wyld beastes shal go theyr way, and monstreous women shall bare monstres, and salte waters shal be founde in the swete: one frende shall fyght agaynst another: then shal wyt & vnderstandyng be hyd and put aslyde into theyr secret places, & shalbe sought of many, & yet not be found: then shal vnryghteousnes & volupteousnes haue the vpper hande vpon earth. One lande also shall aske another, and saye: Is ryghteousnes gone thorowe the? And it shal saye: Noo, At the same time shal men hope, but nothyng optayne: they shal labour, but theyr wayes shal not prosspere

To shewe the such tokens I haue leue and yf thou wylt prayе agayne, & wepe as nowe, ād faste seuen dayes, thou shalte heare yet greater thynges. Then I awaked, & a fearfulnes went thorowe all my bodye, & my mynde was feble & carefull, so that I almost sowned wythall. So ẏ Aungel that was come to talke wyth me, helde me, comforted me, and set me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde nyght it happened, that Salathyel the captayne of the people came vnto me, sayinge: Where hast thou bene? and why is thy countynaunce so heuy? Knowest thou not that Israel is commytted vnto the in the lande of theyr captyuitie? Vp then and eate, & forsake vs not, as the shepherde that leaueth hys flocke in the hādes of the wicked wolues. Then sayde I vnto hym: Go thy wayes from me and come not nye me: & he herde it, and as I sayde: so went he his waye fro me. And I fasted seuen dayes, mournynge and weppynge, lyke as Vrpell the Aungel commaunded me. And after seuē dayes it happened that the thoughtes of my hert were very greuous vnto me agayne, and my soule receaued the spyrete of vnderstandynge, and I beganne to talke with the moost Hyghest agayne & sayde: O Lorde Lorde, of euerye woode of the earth & of all the trees therof, thou hast chosen the one onely vyneyarde: and of al landes of the whole worlde, thou hast chosen the one pit, & of floures of ẏ groūde, ẏ hast cholē ẏ one lilye: and of all the depthes of the see: thou hast fylled the one ryuer: and of all buylded cytyes thou hast halowed Syon vnto thy selfe: & of al the foules ẏ are created, thou hast named the one doue, & of all the cattel that are made thou hast prouyded the one shepe: & amonge all the multytude of folkes: thou hast gotten the one people, and vnto thys people whome thou louedest, thou gauest a lawe, that is proued of all.

And nowe, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen thys one people ouer into manye? And vpon the one roote thou haste prepared other, and why hast thou scatered the one onely people amonge manye? whyche treade them downe yee, which haue euer wythstaude thy promyses, and neuer beleued thy couenauntes.

And thoughe thou were enempe vnto thy people, yet shuldest ẏ punysh them wyth thyne owne handes. Nowe when I had spoken these ℭ wordes, the Aungel that came to me the nyght afore, was sente vnto me, and sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thynge that I saye and I shall tell the more. And I sayde: Speake on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou arte sore vexed and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better then hym that made them? And I sayde: No Lorde: but of very grefe and compassion haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre, because I wolde haue experyence of the waye of the moost Hygh est, and to seke out parte of hys Judgemente. And he sayde vnto me: that thou mayest not. And I sayde: wherfore Lorde? Where vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chyldebed then my graue? So had I not sene the myserye and trouble of Jacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israel.

And he sayde vnto me: Nombre the thynges ẏ are not yet come: gather me together the droppes: that are scatered abrode, make me the floures grene agayne, that are wythered, open me the thyng that is closed: and bryng me forth the windes, that are shut vp, shewe me ẏ ymage of a voyce, and then shall I declare the thynge, that thou labourest to knowe. And I sayde: O Lorde Lorde, who maye knowe these thynges, but he that hath not hys dwellynge wyth men As for me, I am vnwyse: howe maye I then speake of these thinges wherof thou askest me.

Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as thou canst do none of these thynges that I haue spoken of euen so cānst thou not fynde out my Judgement or in the ende, the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people. And I sayde: Beholde, O Lorde, yet arte thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they doo, that haue bene before ℭ me, or we that be nowe, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyll lyken my Judgemente vnto a ryng. Lyke as there is no slackenesse of the laste, euen so is there no swyftenesse of the fyrste. So I aunswered and sayde: couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, and be nowe, and that are for to come) in one, that thou myghtest shewe thy Judgemente the sooner? Then aunswered he me, and sayde: The creature may not haste aboue the maker, neyther maye the worlde holde them at once, that shalbe created.

And I sayde: Howe hast thou sayd then vnto thy seruaunt, ẏ thou lyuing maker, hast made the creature lyuyng at once, & the creature bare it? euen so myghte it nowe also beare them ẏ be present, at once. And he sayd vnto me: Aske the chilbede of a womā, & say vnto her: Yf ẏ bryngest forthe chyldren, why doest thou it not together, but one after another? Praye her therfore to bryng to bryngе forth .x. children at once. And I sayde she can not, but must do it one after another.

Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a childebed vnto the earth: for those that be sowen vpō it by processe of tyme. For lyke as a yonge childe maye not bryngе forth the thyngs that belonge to the aged: euen so haue I ordeyned the worlde whych I made.

And I asked and sayde: Seynge thou hast nowe geuen me away, I wyll speake before the for our mother of whom thou haste tolde me, is yet yonge, and nowe she draweth nye vnto age He aunswered me and sayde: Aske a woman ẏ beareth children, & she shall tell the. Saye vnto her: wherefore are not they (whome thou haste nowe brought forth) lyke those ẏ were before ẏ but lesse of stature? And she shal aunswere the: They that be borne in the youth of strength, are of one fashyon, & they ẏ are borne in the tyme of age, (when the childbed fayleth) are otherwyse Consyder nowe thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you, lesse then ye: as the creatures whych nowe begyn to be olde, ād haue passed ouer the strengthe of youthe. Then sayde I: Lorde I beseche the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syghte, shewe thy seruaunte, by whome doest thou vyset thy creature?

ℭ The. vi. Chapter.

ℭ The Aungel instructeth Esdras, and geueth hym aunswere to hys questions.

AND he sayde vnto me: In the beginnynge when ẏ grounde was made before the worlde stode, or euer the wyndes blewe, before it thondred, & lyghtened or euer the foundaciōs of paradise were layd, before the fayre floures were sene, or euer ẏ moueable powers were stablyshed, before the innumerable multytude of Angels were gathered together, or euer ẏ hyghnesses of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore the measures of the firmant were named, or euer ẏ chimneys in Sion were hote, & or the present yeares were sought out, & or euer the inuencions of thē ẏ nowe sinne, were put aside, before they were sealed ẏ now gather fayth for a treasure: thē did I consyder & ponder al these thynges, & all they were made thorowe me, & thorowe none other: by me also they be ended, & by none other. Then aunswered I & sayde: whych shalbe the parting asunder of the tymes? Or when shalbe the ende of the fyrste, & the begynnynge of it ẏ foloweth And he sayde vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isahac, when Jacob & Esau, were borne of him Jacobs hande helde fyrste the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of thys worlde, and Jacob is the begynnynge of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwyxt the hele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) aske thou not.

I aunswered then & sayd: O Lorde Lorde, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, I beseech the shewe thy seruaunte the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou shewedst me parte the last nyghte So he aunswered and sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfect voyce & sounde. There shall come a greate mocyon, but the place wher thou standest shall not be moued And therfore when thou hearest the wordes be not afrayed, for of the ende shall the worde and foundacyon of the earth be vnderstande. And why? the worde therof trembleth and quakethe for it knoweth, ẏ it must be chaunged at the end And it happened, ẏ when I had herde it, I stode vp vpon my fete: and herkened, & beholde, there was a voyce, that spake, & the sounde of it was lyke the sounde of many waters, and it sayde: Beholde, the dayes come, that I wyll begynne to drawe nye; & to vyset them that dwell vpon earth, & wyll begynne to make inquysycyon of thē, what they be that haue burnt equyte wyth vnryghteousnes, & when ẏ lowe estate of Syō shalbe fulfilled: & whē the worlde, ẏ shal vanish away: shalbe ouersealed, thē wil I do these tokēs

The bookes shalbe opened before the fyrmament, & they shall se all together, & the children of a yeare olde shall speake wyth theyr voyces: the wemen wyth childe shal bryngе forth vntymely children of thre or foure monethes olde, & they shall lyue: & be raysed vp: and sodenly shall the sowen places appere as ẏ vnsowne, the full store houses shall sodenly be founde emptye, ād the trompete shall geue a sounde, whyche when euerye mā heareth, they shalbe hastely afrayde. Mich. vii. & Math. xxiv. *At that tyme shall frendes fyghte one against another lyke enemyes, and the earthe shall stande in feare wyth them.

The syrynges of the wells shal stand styl, & in .iii. houres they shal not renne. Whosoeuer remayneth from all these thynges ẏ I haue tolde ẏ, shal escape, and se my saluacyon, & the ende of youre worlde. And the men that haue receaued shal se it they ẏ haue not tasted death from their byrth: & the hert of the ind wellers shalbe chaunged, & turned to another meanyng, for euel shal be put out, & dysceate shalbe quenched. As for fayth, it shal florish, corrupcio shalbe ouercome & the truth, whych hath bene so long wont frut, shalbe declared. And it happened whē he talked wt me, ẏ I loked demurely vpō him before whō I stode, & these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shewe ẏ, the time of ẏ nyght for to come.

Yf thou wylte praye yet moare, and faste seuen dayes agayne, I shall tell the moare thynges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is herde before the hyghest: for why? the myghtye hath sene thy ryghteous dealynge, he hathe sene also thy chastitie, which thou hast had euer sence thy youthe: & therfore hathe he sente me to shewe the all these thynges, & to saye vnto the. ℭ Be of good comforte, and feare not, & haste not wyth the tymes that are paste to thincke vaine thynges, & make not haste of the latter tymes.

And yt happened after thys, that I wepte agayne, & fasted seuendayes in lyke maner, that I myght fulfyl the thre wekes: whyche he tolde me. In the viii. nyght was my hert vered' with in me agayne. And I began to speake before ẏ hyest: for my spyrite was greatly set on fyer, ād my soule was in distresse, & I sayde: O Lorde, ẏ spakest vnto thy creature from the begynnyng

Gene.i.a. and earth be made, and thy word was a perfect worcke. And then was there ẏ spyrete, and the darcknesses were yet on euery syde, and scilēce: there was nomans voyce as yet from ẏ. Then commaundest thou a fayre lyghte to come forth oute of thy treasures, that thy worcke myghte appeare and be sene.

Upon the second day thou madest the spyrete of the fyrmamente, and commaundest it to part a sunder, & to make a dyuysyon betwyxt ẏ waters, ẏ the one parte myght remayne aboue, ād the other beneth. Upon ẏ. iii. day thou broughtest to passe, ẏ the waters were gathered in the vii. part of ẏ earth. vi. partes hast thou dried vp and kepte them, to thyntente that men myghte sow & occupy husbandry therin. As sone as thy word went forth, the worcke was made. For immedyatly there was great innumerable frut and many dyuerse pleasures and desyres of tem ptacyon, floures of chaungeable coloure and smell, and thys was done the. iii. daye

Then dydst thou preserue two soulles; the one thou caldst Enoch: and ẏ other Leuiathan, and didst seperate the one from the other for the. vii. parte (namelye where ẏ water was gathered together) myght not holde them both Unto Enoch thou gauest one part, which was dryed vp ẏ. iii. daye. ẏ he shuld dwell in the same parte, wherin are a. Upon the. vi. day thou gauest commaundement vnto ẏ earth, ẏ before the, it shuld bryng forth beastes, catell, and all ẏ crepe, and (besyds thys) Adam also, whome ẏ madst lord of all thy creatures. Of hym come we all, and ẏ people also, whome thou hast chosen specyally vnto thy selfe. All thys haue I sayde nowe and spoken before the, that I myghte shewe howe ẏ the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people whyche also come of Adam ẏ haste sayde ẏ they are nothynge, but be lyke a spyttle, and hast lykened ẏ a bundaunce of them vnto a drop (ẏ falleth) from the rofe of the house.

And nowe, O Lorde: the Heathen whiche haue euer bene reputed as nothing, haue be gon to be Lordes ouer vs and to deuour vs: but we thy people (whome thou haste called the fyrste borne, thy only begotten, and thy feruēt louer) are geuen into theyr handes and power. Yf the worlde nowe be made for our sakes, why haue we not the inherytaunce in possessyon wythe the worlde. Howe longe shall thys endure?

The. vii. Chapter.

¶ The Angel sheweth Esdras many thynges to come.

AND it happened after that I had spokē oute these wordes there was A sente vnto me an Aungell, whyche had bene by me also the nyghtes afore and he sayde vnto me: Up Esdras, and heare ẏ wordes ẏ I am come to tel the And I sayde speake on Lorde my God. Then sayde he vnto me. The see is set in a wyld place that it myghte be deape and greate, but the entraunce is narowe and small lyke a ryuer. For who wolde go into the see, to looke vpon it, and to rule it: Yf he went not thorowe ẏ narowe, howe myghte he come into the brode?

Item an other: A cytye is buylded and set vpon a broade felde, and is full of all goodnesse the entraunce is narrowe and sodayne, lyke as yf there were a fyre at the ryghte hande, and a depe water at the lefte, and as it were onely one strayt pathe betwyxte them both so smale that there coulde but one man go there.

Yf thys cytye nowe were geuen vnto an heyre and he neuer wente thorowe the parlous waye, howe wold he receaue hys inheryptaunce And I sayde: It is so Lorde. Then sayde he: Euen so is Israel also a porcyon. And whych for theyr sakes haue I made the worlde: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thynge Judged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narowe, full of sorowe and trauayle. They are but fewe and euell, full of parelles and laboure. For the entraunces of the fore world were wyde and sure, and broughte immortall fruyte.

Yf they nowe whyche are entred into thys worlde, maye not comprehend these strayt and vayne thinges, much lesse may they comprehēd and vnderstand ẏ secret thynges. Why dysquiete thou thy selfe then seing thou arte but a corruptyble man? And what woldest thou knowe where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued into thyne herte the thynge ẏ is for to come, but that is prealent?

Then sayde I: O Lorde Lorde, * thou B
Wen.viii.a haste ordeyned in thy lawe, that the ryghteous shulde inherete these thynges, but that the vnkyndthfull and vngodlye shulde perysshe. Neuertheles, the ryghteous shall sucker strayte thynges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodlye and suffered strayte thynges, shall not se the wyde.

And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, and none that hath vnderstanding aboue ẏ Hyghest. For there be many ẏ perysshe, because they dysspyse the lawe of God ẏ is set before them. For God hath geuen strayt commaūdement to such as come, that they knowe what they do, and howe they shulde lyue: and if they kepte thys, they shulde not be punysshed.

Neuertheles, they were not obedyent vnto hym, but spake agaynst hym: ymagined vayne thynges, and purposed to synne, and sayde moreouer, ẏ there was no God, and ẏ God regarded it not. Hys wayes haue they not knowne, hys lawe haue they dyſpyſed, and denyed hys promyſes: in hys ſtatutes and ordynaunces haue they not bene kaythfull and ſteadfaſt, and haue not perfourmed hys worckes.

And therfore Eldras: vnto the full, plenty and to the emty, emptyneſſe. Beholde, the tyme ſhall come, that theſe tokens whych I haue told the, ſhall come to paſſe, and the bryde ſhal apere and the earth that nowe paſſeth awaye, ſhalbe ſhewed: and whoſoeuer is delyuered from ỹ eueles, ſhall ſe my wonders, For my ſonne Jeſus ſhalbe openly declared, with thoſe that be with hym and they that remayne: ſhalbe mery in foure hundred yeares.

After theſe ſame yeares ſhall my ſõne Chriſt dye, and all men that haue lyfe, and the worlde ſhalbe turned into the olde ſylence ſeuen dayes, lyke as in the fore Judgementes ſo that noman ſhall remayne. And after ſeuen dayes, ỹ worlde that yet awaked not, ſhalbe rayſed vp, and ſhal dye corrupt. And the earth, ſhall reſtoore thoſe that haue ſlept in her: and ſo ſhall the duſt thoſe that dwell in ſylence, and the ſecret places ſhall delyuer thoſe that be commytted vnto them. And the mooſt Hygheſt ſhalbe openly declared vpon the ſeate of Judgemente, and all myſerye ſhall vanyſh awaye and longe ſufferynge ſhalbe gathered together. But the Judgement ſhal

Euen ſo nowe, ſeyng the corrupt is growẽ vp, and wyckednes increaſed, and the ryghteous haue prayed for the vngodly, wherfore ſhall it not be ſo nowe alſo?

He aunſwered me, and ſayd: Thys preſent worlde is not the ende, there remayneth muche honoure in it, therfore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome ſhall be ỹ ende of thys tyme, and ỹ begynnyng of the emmortalyte for to come, wherin al corrupcyõ is vanyſhed all voluptouſnes is lowſed al myſbeleue taken away, righteouſnes growen, & the verite ſprõg vp. Then ſhall no man be able to ſaue hym that is deſtroyed, nor oppreſſe him ỹ hath gotten the victory. I aunſwered then, & ſayde: This is my firſt and laſt ſaying: ỹ it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: or els when it was geuen hym, to kepe hym that he ſhulde not ſynne. For what profyt is it for men nowe in thys preſente tyme to lyue in heupneſſe, and after death to loke for punyſhemente? O thou Adam, what haſte thou done? For though it was thou that ſynned, thou art not fallen alone but we all that come of the. For what profyt is it vnto vs, yf there be promyſed an immortall tyme: where as we meddle wyth deadly worckes? And ỹ there is promiſed vs an euerlaſting hope, where as oure ſelues are euell and vayne and that there are layde vp for vs dwellynges of helthe and fredome, where as we haue lyued euell, and that the worſchyppe of the Hygheſt is kepte to defende them whyche haue led a pacyente lyfe, where as we haue walcked in the moſte wycked wayes of all? And that there ſhalbe ſhewed a Paradyſe, whoſe frupte indureth for euer, wherein is fredome and medycyne, where as we ſhall not goo in? for we haue walcked in vnpleaſaunte places: And that the faces of them whych haue abſtayned, ſhall ſhyne aboue the ſtarres, where as oure faces ſhall be blacke and darcke? For whyle we lyued and dyd vnryghteouſly, we conſydred not, that we ſhulde ſuffre deathe.

Then aunſwered he me, and ſayde: This D is the conſyderacyon and thoughte of the battayle, whyche man hathe vpon earthe: that yf he be ouer come, he ſhall ſuffre as thou haſte ſayde. But yf he get the victorye, he ſhall receaue the thynge that I ſaye. For thys is the lyke, whereof Moſes ſpake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, ſayinge: * Chuſe the lyfe that Deu.xxx.b

No, nor me whych haue ſpoken vnto them, that heupneſſe ſhulde not reache vnto them, to theyr deſtruccyon, lyke as ioye is for to come ouer thoſe that haue ſuffered them ſelues to be inkourmed in ſaluacyon.

I aunſwered then and ſayde: I knowe Lorde, that the Hygheſt is mercyfull, in that he hath mercye vpon them, whyche are not yet in the worlde, and vpon thoſe alſo that walke in hys lawe: and that * he is pacyente and longe Roma.ii.a ſufferynge towarde thoſe that haue ſynned in theyr worckes, and that he is lyberall to geue where as it requyreth: and that he is of greate mercy, for he multyplyed hys louynge kyndneſſe towarde thoſe that are preſente, and that are paſt, and to them whych are for to come.

For yf he multyply not hys mercyes, the worlde ſhall not be made lyuynge, wyth thoſe that dwel therin. He geueth alſo, for yf he gaue not of hys goodnes that they whych haue done euell, myght be eaſed, from theyr wyckednes, the ten thouſand part of men ſhuld not be made lyuyng. And yf ỹ Judge forgaue not thoſe that be healed with hys worde, & yf he wold deſtroy the multytud that ſtryueth, there ſhuld be very fewe left in an vnnumerable multytude.

C The. viii. Chapter.

C Eldras prayeth God rather to loke vpon hys owne mercye: then vpon the ſynnes of the people.

AND he anſwered me, ſayinge: A
The mooſte Hygheſt made thys worlde for many, but the worlde to come for fewe. I wyll tell the a ſymylytude, Eldras: As when thou aſkeſte the earthe, it

Then answered I & sayde: Then swalowe vp the wytte (thou soule) and deuoure the vnderstandyng, for thou arte agreed to herken & to geue eare, & wyllyng to prophecy: for thou haste no longer space geuen the, but onelye to lyue, O Lorde, wylt thou not geue thy seruaunte leaue, that he may pray before the, and that thou mayeste geue seed vnto oure herte, and buylde oure vnderstandynge that there maye come frupte of it: and that euerye one whyche is corrupte, & beareth the state and place of a man, maye lyue?

For thou art alone, & we al are one worke māshyp of thy handes, lyke as thou hast sayde, & lyke as the body is fashyoned nowe in the mothers wombe, & geuest the membres & thy creature is preserued in fyre & water: & nyne moonethes doth thy worcke suffer thy creature whych is fashyoned in her: but the thynge that preserueth, and it that is preserued shall bothe be kept together: and when tyme is, the wombe delyuereth the thyng that is kepte and growen in her.

For thou haste commaunded the brestes to geue milke vnto the frute, that the thyng which is created and fashyoned, maye be norysshed for a tyme: & when thou dysposest & ordrest it wyth thy mercye, bryngest it vp wyth thy ryghteousnesse: nurturest it in thy lawe, and refourmest it with thy vnderstādyng, mortifiest it as thy creature, & makest it lyuyng as thy worke. Seing then þ thou destroyest him, which with so great labours is created & fashyoned thorowe thy cōmaūdement, þ couldest lyghtly ordayne also, þ the thyng whych is made myght be preserued.
